Next Wednesday, the annual All School Band Day concert will be held at the high school. The Deer Hill, Middle School, and High School Concert Bands will perform individual pieces, and as tradition, the night will end with a combined performance from all three bands.

As opening night approaches, the cast and crew of this year's school musical have spent numerous hours rehearsing in preparation for next Friday's show. A less commonly known musical, The Drowsy Chaperone is a comedy in which a hermit-like theater geek plays the record of his favorite musical, "The Drowsy Chaperone," bringing it to life and providing humorous commentary along the way. As a member of the stage crew, I hope to see everyone there!

This year's folk art show at the Glastonbury Abbey will take place on Saturday, December 1st. Now in its 7th year, the Artisans' Holiday Showcase offers an array of wonderful handmade crafts from some of New England's finest artisans. From hand-carved Santas and folk-art figures by Tim Jumper, to framed papercuttings from nationally known scherenschnitte artist Claudia Hopf, to decoys by Bill Sarni, woven items by local weaver Alexandra Guild, who is new to the show this year, and folk art paintings by Connecticut artist Christopher Gurshin — these are just some of the many tempting items that will be for sale at this once a year event. It is the only opportunity to meet some of these artisans who travel from out of state to participate in this show.

Whether it is herbal products, framed miniature dolls, enchanting soft-sculpted figures of Santas and elves, ornaments, trapunto, hooked rug kits or quilted items, customers can always find the perfect gift or a treasure for themselves!

The Abbey is located at 16 Hull Street (Route 228) in Hingham and show hours are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.. Enjoy some refreshments and a welcoming open house atmosphere. Admission is free.

MIDDLE-HIGH SCHOOL

Connolly settles in

Principal comfortable in Cohasset

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Carolyn Connolly makes no secret of the fact that she loves being Irish, and loves living on the South Shore. It seems that for the Cohasset Middle-High School's new principal, the "Irish Riviera" is the place to be.

Connolly, who grew up in South Boston but has lived and worked along the South Shore for a number of years, feels at home in Cohasset. While she has lived in towns like Kingston and Marshfield, currently residing in Hanover, Connolly let out one little secret: Cohasset is her favorite South Shore town.

"I love strolling the main street; I love the little shops," said Connolly during an interview in her office this week, naming French Memories and Bia Bistro as some of her favorite haunts. "I like to pop in and out of places around town."

Connolly added that it was "interesting to do that in the summer time," when she first took the helm as the Middle-High principal, but had not yet met a lot of parents. Now, when Connolly goes to local shops, she's more likely to be recognized.

Luckily, the new principal says that she gets along well with both students and their parents —and has, so far, gotten "positive feedback" from both parties.

"I feel very fortunate," Connolly said of the encouragement she has received from the community so far. "It's gone smoothly."

Perhaps the awkward interaction between school administrators, students and parents off school grounds isn't so awkward for Connolly. The principal, with whom the Mariner has seen at many School Committee meetings this fall, is warm, boisterous, energetic and peppers her sentences with "super"— exactly the type of person one could imagine working with teenagers.

The fact that the principal is the mother of two middle-schoolers might help her when it comes to relating to the tween/teen set: Connolly's sons Shea, 14, and Maclean, 12, are in eighth and sixth grade, respectively.

Her past teaching experience also serves the principal well. Connolly said that growing up, "I knew I'd be an English teacher." She taught at Scituate High School for a year before teaching at Silver Lake High School from 2001 to 2004. Then, when Silver Lake and the Pembroke "split" occurred, Connolly ended up in Pembroke, where she worked for a total of eight years (five as a teacher, three as assistant principal).

Connolly has also taught business writing, English, and GED prep at Boston's Bunker Hill Community College.

The Cohasset School Committee announced Connolly's hiring in April, and the new principal started her position in July.

Connolly, along with Assistant High School Principal Brian Scott, replaced two educators who fulfilled the respective principal and assistant principal roles as interims. Connolly replaced Dr. Michael Gill, who worked as assistant principal since 2004 before becoming interim high school principal for the past year, following former principal Joel Antolini's departure last summer. Gill announced his resignation from the Cohasset school district in the spring after 32 years of service and became principal of Sacred Heart High School in Kingston. Martin Geoghegan was interim assistant principal for the past school year after Gill became interim principal.

Three months into the school year, it's clear Connolly has settled in comfortably.

"It's fantastic," she said of her year so far. "I couldn't be happier."

The principal had her walls painted green "almost immediately" upon starting her position. "My whole world is green," she joked.

Proud of her Irish heritage, Connolly has portraits of two of her ancestors on display, with the Irish proclamation of independence hanging in between them.

"I like to bring some of my history to work," she said.

The principal has visited Ireland a few times and hopes to eventually take her two boys, "while my father is still young enough to show them around," which she hopes will be somewhat soon. With a laugh, she added, "I have to make sure they're old enough to appreciate the history, but young enough to want to hang out with me!"

During her off-duty hours, the principal enjoys "good restaurants," listening to Irish music, and completing projects around the house. And while the former English teacher of course counts reading as a favorite past-time, she noted reluctantly that she has little time to read these days.

"I read 'Life of Pi' because the movie is coming out," Connolly noted. "But [before that] I was sitting at a traffic light and thought, 'Wow, I haven't read a book since school started."

It has been a whirlwind school year so far. An accreditation review that occurs every 10 years by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC), a regional accrediting association that establishes standards for all levels of education, is coming up this spring. Teachers have been preparing for this review for the past year, said Connolly.

Carolyn Connolly, Principal of Cohasset Middle-High School, poses in her office in front of a proud display of her Irish heritage: portraits of two of her ancestors, a copy of the Irish proclamation of independence, and of course the green walls pretty much say it all.

The principal is also working with her staff when it comes to the School Improvement Plan and the Superintendent's Strategic Plan.

Connolly said that she is happy to have a great staff at the Middle-High School, whom she is "bragging about" to her teacher friends at other schools.

"There are some extraordinary individuals here," said the principal. "It's a positive place to be."

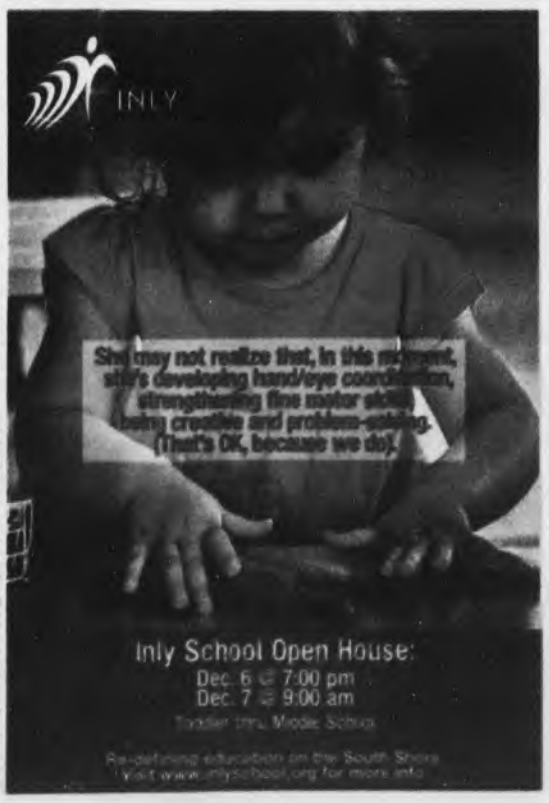
Connolly's "super" staff, as she describes them, include high school assistant principal Scott and middle school assistant principal Kerri Sandler.

The administrative team, said Connolly, "has gelled as a leadership team for the building. There's a nice coalescence; we feed off of each other's strengths. Each of us knows what roles and capacity we can fill. I feel supported by each of them and super-confident in their ability to navigate anything in this building."

Connolly said she is always looking for ways for the faculty members in the same departments to work more closely, which they are able to do with the implementation of department heads. This enables the teachers to work together to "make the curriculum stronger," said the principal.

The principal also has a leadership team consisting of administrative staff that meets every other week to go over budget items, teacher evaluations and other issues.

But the heart and soul of the school is its students, with whom Connolly said she is continually impressed.



"It's been one good expe-

French students are Quebec-bound

School board approves class trip

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Parlez-vous français?

This coming spring, Cohasset eighth graders will have a chance to put their French classes to practice during a visit to Quebec City.

The School Committee voted unanimously last week to approve the eighth grade French class trip to Quebec City, Quebec, to take place over the weekend of May 3 to 5, 2013.

Cohasset Middle School French teacher Kathleen Sanges pitched the trip to the school board as an enriching educational experience. Cohasset students are lucky to be in close proximity to the French-speaking province, Sanges explained.

The trip provides the students an opportunity to practice their French.

"For students who have been diligently working in the classroom, learning the French language for three years, this linguistic and cultural immersion provides a practical application of their knowledge and motivation to advance their study of the language," Sanges wrote in a letter to Superintendent Barbara Cataldo, Middle-High School principal Carolyn Connolly and assistant principal Kerri Sandler.

The trip's itinerary includes cultural experiences such as a cruise on the St. Lawrence River and listening to local traditional folk music. So far, said Sanges, 33 students have expressed interest in going on the trip, and she is planning to have one chaperone per every 11 kids.

A guide from the tour company Jump Street will stay with the group over the weekend at the Hotel Plaza. The entire class stays on the same floor.

The weekend is estimate to cost around $475 per student, although Sanges said that it varies depending on the final number of how many students attend. So far, the French teacher said that the whole class has indicated that they would like to go.

Scholarships are usually available for students who would like to attend but can't afford the nearly $500 cost, Sanges continued.

Principal Connolly said at the school committee meeting, "We would certainly intervene in a hardship case and would never deny someone opportunity."

School committee member Helene Lieb said that she is on the town's Social Service League, which has provided scholarships to students in the past. "There are a lot of different organizations that have money that help us," she said, adding that if the SSL does pitch in, the school should be sure to thank them for their contribution.

"They've made a lot of kids happy," said Sanges.

When asked if the students do any fundraising for the trip, the French teacher said that is also a possibility. "We have not, [but] it's something to explore."

Screenings offered by public schools

In accordance with Individuals with Disabilities Act (IDEA 2004) and Massachusetts special education regulations, 603 CMR 28.00, the Cohasset Public Schools provide screenings and/or evaluations for all children residing in the Town of Cohasset, between ages 3-21, when parent(s), caregiver(s), and/or teacher(s) suspect the presence of a disability.

The purpose of the evaluation is to determine if the student has a disability and is eligible for special education services. This notice applies to children residing in Cohasset who attend either public or private schools. If you suspect your child may have an educational disability, contact the Student Services Department of the Cohasset Public Schools at 781-383-4167.

This is a cost-free, educational evaluation, which follows all MA DESE special education regulations outline in 603 CMR 28.00. Further information can be found on the Cohasset Public Schools website and the Massachusetts Department of Elementary and Secondary Education website.

PRINCIPAL

rience after another," she said. "I'm impressed with the students' commitment to wanting to make this year special. The senior class has worked closely with me to let them try a few things. They're mature, respectful and full of school spirit. I've heard that this year's pep rally was the best it's ever been."

That pep rally introduced a new tradition to the Middle-High School: inviting the eighth grade class to attend. While the principal said that some people in the community perceive the middle-school, "in terms of identity," as either one big school or two separate schools under one roof, she is hoping to better bridge the gap between eighth and ninth graders, at least.

Allowing eighth graders to participate in certain events, like the pep rally, "creates a smoother transition in the long run if they're exposed to the older kids in small doses."

One of Connolly's goals for easing that transition was accomplished early on this school year with a freshman orientation before the official start of school. The principal said it was a resounding success, but helping the younger students feel more comfortable as they get ready to start high school is an ongoing goal.

"I'm the principal of one school, grades six to 12, and I'm working hard to make it a welcoming environment no matter what side kids find themselves on," said Connolly. "I don't want to hear that a middle school kid is afraid to go the nurse — that makes me crazy."

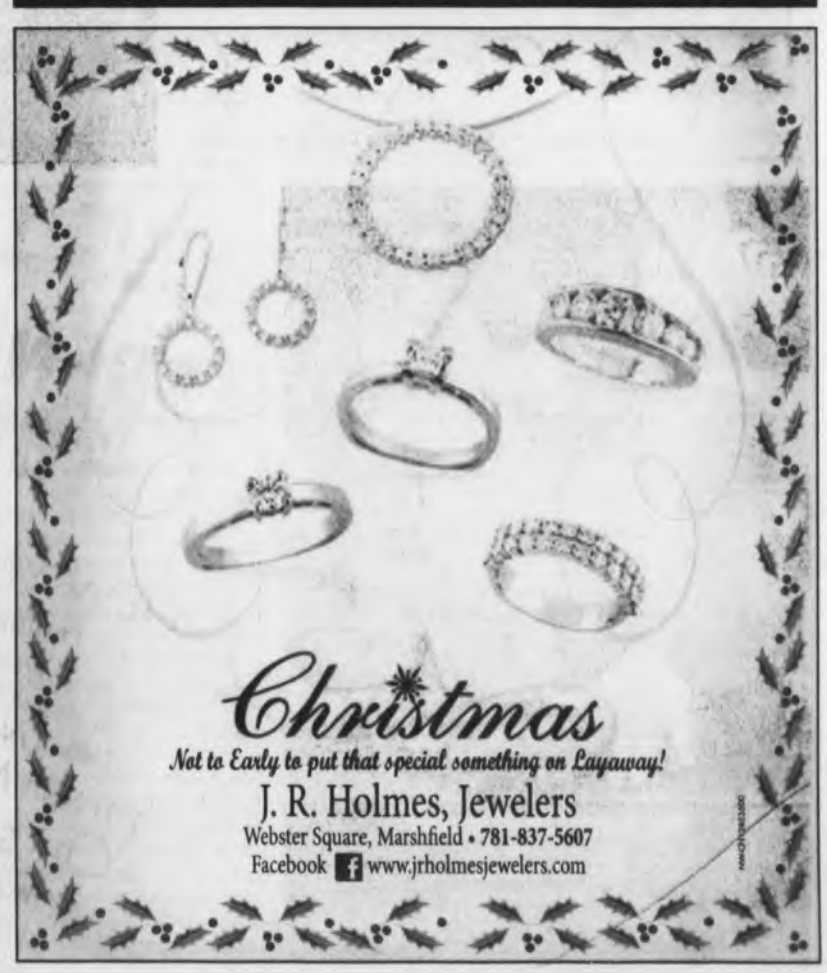
It's not just the eighth to ninth grade transition the principal is looking out for; she also hopes to help seniors prepare during the days leading up to the first day of college, from SATs to college applications and everything in between.

One of the principal's goals is to "broaden the breadth and scope of colleges" students apply to, Connolly explained. "In New England there are tons of good schools, but because of that we don't branch out enough. We're having alumni back tomorrow [Wed.] for brunch to talk to our seniors, and hopefully some [of the alumni] made some moves."

The principal understands that this time of year, "seniors are super stressed out; it's a tough time for them. I hope they'll get some positive feedback from the class of 2012. I think they're confident in their opportunities; they're good explorers and are willing to take on some challenges."

Based on her interactions with Cohasset students, does Connolly still envision herself as a teacher? The principal said that teaching again is another goal.

"I don't miss teaching in the sense of I wish I was doing that instead of this; I like to think I have opportunities to teach throughout the day." However, one of her long-term goals, she said, is to be a "teaching principal."



It's clear that so far, Cohasset kids have had quite an impression on their new principal.

"All in all, Cohasset children are wildly polite," said Connolly, noting that one student thanked her for "being reasonable" when that student had to be disciplined. "It's rare that you get thanked when you're suspending someone."

OUR VIEW

First Thanksgiving

"Would you please pass the furmity, Governor?"

"You boiled it just right in the pipkin, Mary."

"I'll have a little more aqua vita, Susanna."

It's possible the conversation went a bit like this that first Thanksgiving Day in Plimoth so many years ago.

About 140 people sat at the three-day harvest: 90 Indians and 50 Pilgrims.

If you happen to have been the cook and thought that you're going to work hard Thursday, keep in mind that at the first Thanksgiving, only four women did all the cooking.

They roasted wildfowl, turkeys, and deer in English fashion. They boiled cod and sea bass in Indian tradition.

They cooked breads and fruit tarts in a skillet over an open fire.

For dessert, they made furmity by beating wet wheat in a sack with a washbeetle, boiling it overnight, soaking it on a fire, boiling it in cream in a pipkin, then topping it with sugar.

Their guests were not worried about their cholesterol level or the fat content in the food.

They ate to their hearts' content and then washed it all down with beer called aqua vita.

They scooped food from wooden bowls with their hands.

There were knives and a few spoons, but no forks.

Huge napkins were very important.

It was a whole year after the Pilgrims first put their tattered boots on Plimoth Rock before the first Thanksgiving.

Their tiny and overcrowded Mayflower had tossed like a toy boat upon the fierce Atlantic waves for two months.

Their trip had been stormy and long.

Their arrival was dismal and discouraging.

The first winter saw more than half their number starve or freeze to death.

Their first harvest was a disaster, but in the second year, with the help of the Indians, their fields bore fruit.

Instead of saying "It's about time, God," they thanked Him for His blessing.

It is now over three and a half centuries later.

We went a-hunting in a well-stocked supermarket and speared our frozen turkey with icy fingers.

Instead of checking our meat for arrowheads, we read the labels for the fat and MSG content.

Instead of cooking herbs and roots for days, we might have popped a pouch of peas in boiling water.

Instead of skillet baked bread, we might have browned and served some rolls.

Instead of beating wet wheat for furmity, we might have heated up a pre-baked apple pie.

But the warmth of Thanksgiving was still the same.

We asked nothing more from it than a great football game between the Skippers and the Hull Pirates in the morning, a perfect turkey dinner with a loving family in the afternoon, and a feeling of contentment with life in the evening.

We needed the peace of Thanksgiving more than ever in these troubled times.

Hope your Thanksgiving was a happy one.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Huh, three jobs, three lawsuits?

I am the first to admit that I have not followed the latest, most recent, town manager debacle very closely or have ever met Michael Coughlin. But it caught my attention in last week's Mariner when I read the article dealing with Michael Coughlin suing the town. He is quoted as saying:

"As for me, like Westport, Northbridge and Southbridge before that, I believe I will be vindicated in Cohasset. This time rather than rulings from state agencies as in Northbridge or an expected criminal indictment in Westport, vindication will come through a lawsuit where I seek damages for wrongful termination and reinstatement as Town Manager."

Huh, did I just read that correctly, three jobs, three lawsuits. He wants to sue the town to get his job back? I heard there were over 80 applicants and he was picked with that track record!

I, for one, think the resume would have been a bit of a red flag?

Find best-qualified candidate

Editor's note: This letter was sent to Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson with a copy to the Mariner for publication.

As a follow-up to our conversation of yesterday, I am again asking you as the Chairman that when the position of Town Manager is voted on that a diligent search for the Best Qualified applicant be chosen. I understand that the firm that did the last search has offered their services free of charge, and that the Board has decided not to accept that offer. That firm gave the Board choices, not the final choice. The previous town manager was chosen by the then Board of Selectmen.

I believe that with all that has happened in the past that the Board and town deserve the best applicant. In the final analysis if the current Acting Town Manager is the best applicant that has applied then by all means offer him a contract. But at least see if there are any other qualified applicants that might be interested in the position

As I understand it the Current Acting Town Manager's contract is in force until June of 2013. There is certainly enough time to advertise the position and see what the results are. The Town of Cohasset deserves the very best person for this important position. He or she is, after all, the Chief Executive Officer of the town. And it is the responsibility of the Board as our elected officials to see that responsibility carried out and that the Best Qualified individual is hired.

Booster groups have purchased uniforms

Kudos to Mrs. Adrienne MacCarthy for her eloquent shout out to the CHS Cheerleaders. I agree with many of her callouts.

Having been the parent of football players for the last seven years (with one more year to go), the CHS cheerleading program has come a long way from where they were in the fall of 2006. Congratulations to the girls, their parents and their coach, Mrs. Elizabeth Naughton for having such a solid program! I also agree wholeheartedly with Mrs. MacCarthy that the girls should not have to buy their own uniforms and pay a user fee.

However, I feel it needs to be clarified that Mrs. MacCarthy's comments about the other sports getting their uniforms paid for the school are not entirely accurate. Here are two examples of Booster groups purchasing uniforms. I'm sure there are many more.

In 2006, the Friends of Cohasset Football were formed to help supplement support for the football program. The FOCF purchased the team's uniforms (two sets, home and away, shirts and pants). Over the years, the Gridiron Club has supported the uniform inventory by purchasing replacement sets of jerseys.

In Basketball, the Booster Club for years assisted in purchasing uniforms either replacement sets to fill in sizes as needed or whole sets, this is dating back to 2005 when I first joined Basketball Boosters.

For the 2010/2011 season, the Boys Varsity team members did their own fundraiser and purchased their own two full sets of uniforms (home and away). The Basketball Booster Club purchased one set of uniforms for the girls and the school purchased the other set. In addition the Basketball Booster Club provides warm-up jerseys and practice gear to the high school basketball program.

Organ assistance greatly appreciated

Thanks to the Mariner for the article on the restoration of the organ at St Anthony's Church. The music means a lot to the parishioners and with the reconstruction it sounds so much better.

I would also like to thank Hingham Lumber Co. for supplying a forklift truck and manpower to lift the completed consol up to the choir loft, and Cohasset Collision Center for lending us their ramp truck to transport the forklift truck back and forth from Hingham Lumber.

These very generous supplies of manpower and material saved us lots of time and expense, and are great examples of community cooperation. We are very grateful for their assistance.

COMMENTARY

Ulterior motive on budget?

TOM WOLF

A financial officer in the private sector who gave his or her CEO projections this inaccurate – without the presence of a cataclysmic influencing cause – would be looking for a new job.

Last week the Cohasset Board of Selectmen issued a press release that cited a significant if not startling change from the $600,000 projected deficit for the year ended last June 30 to a $1,000,000 surplus.

The original projection for a surplus was made by former Town Manager Coughlin and attested to by the Finance Director. When the BoS completed its convoluted maneuvering to oust Coughlin and install Milanoski one of the first pronouncements by the new Acting Town Manager was a projected deficit of $600,000 and an agenda of steps to be taken to deal with this situation. These included undoing virtually all that Coughlin had done, a spending freeze, invalidating contracts and the dismissal of Town employees Mark Brennan and Tom Gruber. In addition, the police overtime budget was cited as a major contributing factor to the deficit and set the stage for the ousting of Chief DeLuca.

When the Finance Director was asked which of the two budget projections she had endorsed was correct – Coughlin's surplus or Milanoski's deficit – she stated that the Coughlin surplus projection was made from incomplete information. In light of the eventual enormous budget surplus, which validated Coughlin's projection beyond doubt, it would appear that the information which caused the Finance Director to change her mind was the emergence of a desperate need by Selectmen for actual evidence to support their actions in ousting Coughlin and all else which ensued.

When we take an overview of Cohasset's budget, it is, in very round numbers, $45,000,000. Remove from this the school budget of about $30,000,000 and we're left with $15,000,000 over which the BoS has any control whatsoever. Let's assume, for argument sake, that at least half of this is comprised of relatively fixed and very predictable items; interest on debt, health insurance premiums contracted for well in advance, employee payroll and pension contributions, just to name a few, which should be accurately predictable within a percentage point or two.

This means that the original estimated deficit, as prepared and presented to the BoS by Acting Town Manager Milanoski, and verified by the Finance Director, was off by 20 percent. A financial officer in the private sector who gave his or her CEO projections this inaccurate – without the presence of a cataclysmic influencing cause – would be looking for a new job.

Which brings us full cycle to the $1,000,000 surplus. Once again, this announcement comes coincidental to a desperate need by the Selectmen: the search for evidence to justify a change in the town's constitution, the Town Manager's Act, in order to rectify Milanoski's illegal contract and extend his employment well into the future.

In no way am I saying or implying that the surplus, as certified by the DOR, is incorrect. What I will estimate is that the cost of settling up with, Coughlin, DeLuca, Brennan and the Fords for their respective actions against the town will possibly add up to if not exceed the entire surplus for the year, even more likely if you appropriately add in the legal expenses incurred by this BoS in exercising its management prerogatives in these matters.

When you go to Special Town Meeting on December 10 to vote on the ringing endorsement they are requesting by asking for a change in the Town Manager's Act, remember the old adage; "If it seems too good to be true, it probably isn't." It was never more applicable than in the selectmen's most recent attempt to blow their own horn.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Bring something different to the table

I am often drawn to the Thanksgiving meal my mother and father made when I was growing up, most of which was gathered from the grocery store.

JON BELBER

Oh, to be an organic farmer with a near perfect autumn for growing and thinking what will be on the Thanksgiving table. I am not a great designer of flower bouquets and arrangements, but one can still find hardy flowers and stems to rest in a vase for the meal on Thursday, or a meal any day for this week of celebratory harvest.

Though we have wild and annoying turkeys, who are also very difficult to persuade off the fields, we do not harvest them at Holly Hill for the Thursday supper, we stick to vegetables and produce. A recent visit to the farm stand yields turnips, potatoes, onions, local, organic cranberries and carrots, to name a few that play quite a traditional role for many at Thanksgiving.

I am often drawn to the Thanksgiving meal my mother and father made when I was growing up, most of which was gathered from the grocery store. I remember lots of mashed potatoes, brussel sprouts, candied yams, Mama Stamberg's cranberry relish, peas, gravy and pies. But in recent years and certainly these days I look for more locally, sustainably raised products with which to prepare, toss and cook.

So my visit to the farm stand forces me to look back to the comfortable memories of dinners past, while looking at the present variety to guide my dinner for the future. Tatsoi, bok choy, daikon radish, sun chokes, arugula and parsnips may never have appeared on a late November Thanksgiving plate before, but they will this year. Hardy greens such as tatsoi and bok choy make for a crunchy salad or delicious stirfry. Daikon radish can be roasted, tossed into that tatsoi salad or eaten raw as a hors d'oeuvre. Arugula can stand on its own with a lemony dressing or liven up the mashed potatoes. Parsnips are terrific for a soup or roasted with sweet potatoes.

I should pause there as I seek not to write a recipe book or offer too much advice about how to use funky, fall vegetables that dominate the farm stand tables and counter. I even failed to mention broccoli, which seems to be the Holly Hill bumper crop, similar to the one I have heard about in the late 1990s.

I could also spend a paragraph on these sun chokes, also known as Jerusalem artichokes, which are not limited to the farm on Jerusalem Road. These unique tubers with tall reaching stalks and flowers are making their way to school farm gardens as well. The chef at South River School in Marshfield has successfully roasted them for the students, as has neighbor and chef Maryann Saporito at her tapas restaurant Hola, also in Marshfield. With a slightly nutty taste and sculptural appearance, both delightful raw and cooked, they are also finding their way to the Scituate Food Pantry from the Gates Intermediate School in Scituate, where the garden is tended by eighth graders and perhaps future elected town officials.

Like many of the crops I have listed from Holly Hill Farm, at the hands of the hard working farmers magnificently and persistently coaxing these crops from the wet, rocky fields, the sun chokes are quite able to withstand the wind, rain and fluctuating temperatures. Hooray for good soil and crops close to and under the ground!

There are even still a few pumpkins about the farm, whose seeds have yet to be squirreled away and whose fleshy squash interior may make for some pumpkin pie. Folks close to me as relatives, friends and bakers swear by canned pumpkin for their delightful pies. But with a frosty pumpkin staring me in the face, having grown in the garden for over 100 days, I feel obliged to make it a part of the pie. The balance of looking back at my upbringing and the notion of Thanksgiving in the first place, is to use what is available and have it make sense as well. I will continue to walk the line of holding on to dear meals from my parents and create new, dear meals from farmers I know and thank.

Savoring what autumn offers

JAN TODD

I do like to cut back those perennials that are ugly now. By cutting them almost to the ground I hope I am discouraging those small critters who might enjoy eating my spring bulbs.

As much as the colors of the trees call out to us "the end of autumn will soon be here," Halloween also cries out that message. I look forward to seeing the children in costumes, jack O'lanterns and decorated gardens. Each year I await the arrival of the small ghosts who dance in a circle in front of the Common or the witch climbing a tree on Nichols Road. These are just a couple of the many Cohasset homes, which make us smile. With the threat of Sandy blowing over us, followed by the reality of loss and pain to so many in the Northeast, the trick-or-treaters and carved pumpkins welcomed a normalcy the day after the storm, for which we were all grateful. Halloween also marks the near end of another growing season. Festivals of the harvest and of giving thanks have cultural memory in our society. They come as we prepare to light our fires and to get ready for winter. We know that Halloween, the eve of all hallows, was that bit of fun before the Christian Church reminded us to remember on All Saints Day and All Souls Day. Thus, as the earth will soon freeze and what is left of our gardens has turned or will turn to brown or mush, we treasure the last of fall's warm days, get our gardens ready for winter, and gather items that might prove helpful to the celebrations ahead of us.

Our November gardens have treasure but you need to look for it. Certainly the leaves on your lawn are not hiding. They should be rich additions to your compost heap. Your perennials will thank you for some of the matured compost from that pile. Children in the garden will delight with you in searching for the many types of pinecones, nuts, berries and items to be dried to make wreaths and centerpieces and other types of decorations for Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's celebrations. The Community Garden Club's members have been busy doing just that to allow these items to properly dry before they become the holiday items to be sold at their Gingerbread Market in December. I do like to cut back those perennials that are ugly now. By cutting them almost to the ground I hope I am discouraging those small critters who might enjoy eating my spring bulbs. I do like to leave the ornamental grasses, sedum and a few other items, which provide food and shelter for birds and other wildlife I welcome during the winter. Listen: Your garden is still full of the sounds of birds. When there has not been rain, do remember that the birds need to have a drink. Fill your birdbath. You might also be surprised by all of the color that remains in your garden when you look closely. There might be a sapphire blue hydrangea amongst the masses of brown and wine colored flower heads. Then there are late season mums, the golden and red ends of nasturtiums and marigolds, as well as dahlias and even hardy roses that continue to open and bloom.

On gray days especially, it is joyous to be greeted by the Victorian memorial as Beach Street meets Atlantic Avenue. The Cohasset Garden Club keeps that container full of botanical interest around the year, but just now one has a choice to make: Do I follow the golden or the ruby path? Is there a symbolic message? Are we encouraged to think of Mr. Frost's words? Again, it makes me smile. I welcome all of the pleasures of Cohasset's surroundings as we store, and drain, and gather, and get ready for the cold days ahead.

Jan Todd is a member of the Community Garden Club.

FOR THE RECORD

Let the good times roll

This spring we covered a 50th high school class reunion and one of the classmates traveled all the way from Alaska to attend. Others flew in from California, Texas, Illinois and Florida.

GREGORY MATHIS

It's fun and entertaining to read about class reunions and see photos of classmates, now and particularly then if it's been a few years.

While school reunions are held throughout the year, right now seems to be the most popular time to gather and relive those glory days.

The reasoning most certainly has to do with the assumption that many people return to the place in which they grew up and went to school for Thanksgiving, even those who moved far away.

With this being the jackpot season for class reunions, you will notice a callout to readers in the newspaper and on the website soliciting your class reunion photos.

We'll run as many as we can in the newspaper over the next several weeks and find a spot for the rest in an online photo gallery.

While I'm a big fan of hearing and seeing about other people's class reunions, I haven't had too much first-hand experience since I've only been to three class reunions – two that were actually my classes.

The first reunion I attended – my five-year college class reunion – was a dud. It was a somewhat formal sit-down dinner in a function hall at the school and was sparsely attended. I didn't stay long. I later realized that although much can change in five years after college, it's really too soon to catch up with classmates.

My 25-year high school reunion was better, though. It was held during the summer at a popular outdoor, casual dining spot. There was really no long-term commitment if it didn't go well. But it actually went quite well. After 25 years it was great to catch up with people I hadn't seen in awhile, some since our high school days. My plan to just stay an hour turned into an all-night celebration with old friends.

The last reunion I attended was my wife's 20th high school reunion. She grew up in Pennsylvania so there was really no pressure on me since I wasn't going to know anybody. Fortunately I didn't have to deal with meeting any ex-boyfriends or hear awkward teenage stories, so the night was a success from this outsider's perspective.

But my stories pale in comparison to some of the reunion stories we cover, especially from classes celebrating 30th, 40th, or 50th reunions. This spring we covered a 50th high school class reunion and one of the classmates traveled all the way from Alaska to attend. Others flew in from California, Texas, Illinois and Florida. That particular reunion brought back 80 percent of the 62 in the graduating class and one of the classmates told us, "We've had a reunion every five years since we've graduated and they're always pretty well attended. The group was small enough that we just kind of had one big clique," he said.

Those types of stories give reunions a good name. So if you're gearing up for a milestone reunion, or even a gathering after a few years, be sure to snap some photos and share your experience with us, and don't be afraid to include a couple of photos from back in the day. It's always fun to see how times have changed, as well as the people.

ATTORNEY PART OF TASK FORCE

Newly minted lawyers struggle to find jobs

By Maryellen Dever

Prominent local attorney Richard P. Campbell was recently named to an American Bar Association (ABA) task force to review and make recommendations on the state of legal education and job opportunities for law school graduates.

Campbell, a Cohasset resident and chairman of Campbell, Campbell, Edwards and Conroy in Boston, served as president of the Mass Bar Association (MBA) from September 2011 to August 2012. He had long been concerned about the future of legal education, and assigned a task force of attorneys, law students, recent law school graduates, professors, judges, and others to study the cost and effectiveness of the current standard law school curriculum.

Campbell's concerns centered on the disconnect between the typical law school curriculum and the actual practice of law. He said law schools focus on teaching the theory and academics of law, while offering no training to students on the actual practice of law. Law schools have typically left that training up to the law firms who hire their graduates. The problem lies in the fact that while law schools churn out more and more scholars annually, law firms no longer have the resources to hire, let alone train, those scholars to be productive members of the bar.

Meanwhile, law school tuitions have escalated to the point where the typical graduate may face a loan debt of over $200,000; yet first year salaries have dropped to an average of $63,000. This makes that debt, assuming the student is hired by a well-paying firm, impossible to shoulder.

With 9 law schools in Massachusetts, and 16 in New England (excluding Harvard and Yale) whose graduates come to Boston looking for work, the market is flooded. The MBA's statistics show that about 2500 students pass the Mass bar annually, and yet there are approximately 700 new jobs available. Campbell said, "We have literally thousands who pass the bar [in Massachusetts] every year who have no job and no hope of a job as an attorney."

"Law professors study and write about the law. They don't think they have to train students to practice law."
Richard P. Campbell, attorney

Law schools

The question is, why aren't these newly minted lawyers being hired? Campbell and others believe the answer lies with the law schools themselves. "We found that law schools aren't training law students to be lawyers", he said, adding, "Law professors study and write about the law. They don't think they have to train students to practice law."

Many new lawyers would, in the past, be trained on the job through summer associate programs and other programs within a firm. Law schools relied on that, but now, largely because of the economy, firms are either unable or unwilling to spend their resources on training. Campbell explained, "Revenues [at law firms] certainly have hit a plateau generally, and some firms and some practice areas have seen declines in revenues. That is one reason for the spate of law firm failures that have taken place over the past few years. Law firm revenues drop because there is less work to be done. Lawyer compensation follows firm revenues. Starting salaries for lawyers have dropped (particularly at white-shoe firms). The huge starting salaries at the largest firms ($160,000) are now an urban myth as far as I'm concerned. Even firms that claim to continue starting salaries at that level have replaced "associates" with "contract" lawyers (at half the price)."

He went on to say that there is always a market for top-tier graduates from top-tier law schools, but even that market is much smaller. He said it isn't uncommon to hear of law review editors without jobs. Then, he asks, "What happens to the high performers who manage to get a job at a white shoe firm 2 or 3 years out? The turnover rate is very high. Not many new lawyers remain at large firms after 2 or 3 years." This could explain the firms' reluctance to invest in training new lawyers – the firm either doesn't see a return on that investment; or with the glut of experienced lawyers on the market they don't need to invest in training at all.

The disconnect has been apparent for some time, and is the subject of a recent book, "Failing Law Schools" by St. Louis' Washington University School of Law Professor Brian Z. Tamanaha. In his book, Tamanaha echoes many of the concerns Campbell has expressed. He discusses the rising costs of law schools, fueled, he says, by the never-ending thirst for prestige. Prestige comes from law professors who achieve academic fame through research, not through teaching practical skills. That prestige causes bidding wars for faculty at top schools, in turn causing sharp increases in tuition.

Law schools are rated by US News and World Report according to 12 factors. Academic factors and subjective "reputation" ratings by judges and lawyers make up 40 percent of the total ranking score. Law students use this report to choose schools, although not a single factor currently assesses the effectiveness of a school's ability to prepare students for the practice of law.

MBA study

This issue caused Campbell to commission the MBA study, "Beginning the Conversation", which is available on the MBA website, to identify ways to make law students more employable. The study made recommendations including a complete revamp of the third year of law school, to make it into an internship year, and also suggested creating a "residency" program for the first years of a new lawyer's career. The study compared law school admission rates, tuition, and job prospects unfavorably with medical and dental school programs. It found that in the case of law schools, admission rates were in the 67 percent range, where medical and dental schools were in the low 40 percent. By contrast, most, if not all, new dentists and physicians had jobs on graduation. The reason, the study found, was that schools tied admission rates to jobs available. Law school does not.

Campbell said, because of that MBA study, the ABA tapped him to be part of their similar national study. While neither the MBA nor ABA can require law schools to change, he feels that change may have to come, if only because of tuition costs. Both associations, he said, lead primarily by use of the "bully pulpit". But, the ABA has significant power to impact curriculum through its accreditation rules. ABA accreditation of a school is required by many state licensing agencies for a lawyer to sit for the bar exam. Therefore, if the ABA finds, through this 2-3 year study, that practical training needs to be added to the law school course work, schools will have to embrace that change.

He said Tamanaha's book has started to make law schools pay attention. As a member of "The Legal Academy", he is "one of them", and he is exposing their secrets. The biggest secret? Law schools are funded by tuition dollars, which in turn are funded by federally underwritten student loans. In the current economy, with a rising federal deficit, this stream will eventually dry up.

Campbell's wife of 43 years, Barbara (Lydon) put him through law school, and, as he says, she has "put up with me ever since." They have 3 children, Rich, who is a partner in their law firm, Sean, a VP at Fidelity, and Lauren, a "brand new mother" who also works at the firm in HR. They have 6 grandchildren.

Campbell has devoted a lot of time to advancing legal education and the profession. He is also currently serving on the Board of Trustees of the University of Massachusetts. He has some practical advice for parents facing escalating college costs: "[The University of Massachusetts] is a beacon of opportunity and hope for most kids in the Commonwealth. While a person living in Hingham [or Cohasset] may see their child as a candidate for Harvard or Yale, they should be looking at the University of Massachusetts as the best education dollar for dollar they can get for their kids."

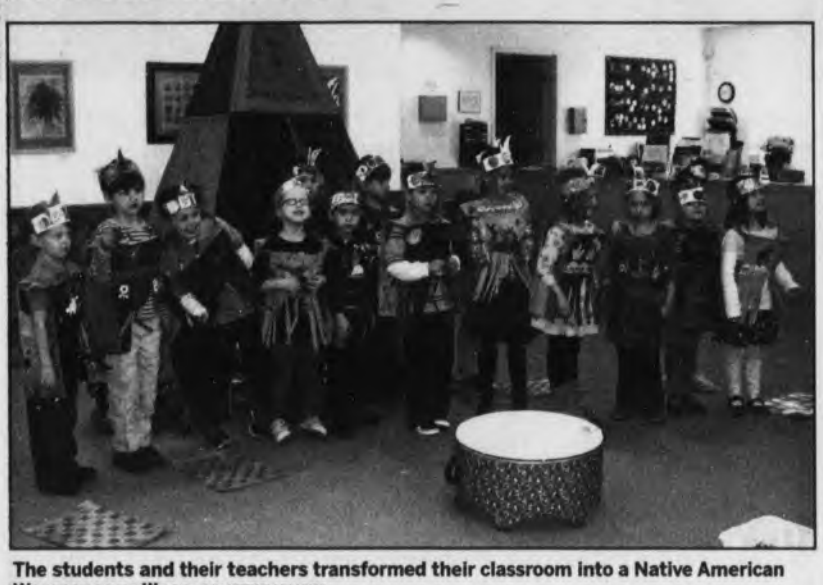
This week, Beacon Hill Roll Call begins a series of reports highlighting legislation approved by the House and the Senate and signed into law by Gov. Deval Patrick in the 2011-2012 session.
ALIMONY CHANGES (S 1989)	Y	Y
House 151-0, Senate 36-0, approved a law making major changes in the state's alimony laws including allowing some alimony payments to be reduced, suspended or terminated upon the payer reaching the full age of retirement or the remarriage or cohabitation of the recipient. It also bases the duration of payments on the number of years the couple is married. For example, for marriages of five years or less, the maximum alimony term would be 50 percent of the number of the months of marriage, while 15 to 20 year marriages would be capped at 80 percent. More than 20 years would be up to the judge and could be mandated indefinitely. (A "Yes" vote is for the law.)
DNA EVIDENCE (S 1987)	Y	Y
House 155-0, Senate 37-0, approved a law allowing individuals who have been convicted of a crime to request access to DNA evidence for forensic testing that could grant a new trial. Prior to the law's passage, Massachusetts was one of only two states that did not have this law. (A "Yes" vote is for the law.)
APPROVE CHANGES IN PENSION SYSTEM (S 2065)	Y	Y
House 152-0, Senate 27-10, approved a law making changes in the pension and retirement systems for employees of the state and cities and towns. The measure reduces pensions by raising the minimum retirement age for most public employees by five years, from 55 to 60, and changing the formula on which pensions are based. Other provisions include requiring that current employees serve at least one year in a group at the end of their career to retire from that group and establishing a minimum pension of $15,000 for state workers who have spent 25 years in state government. Currently, many retirees receive annual pensions of $12,000 to $13,000. (A "Yes" vote is for the law. A "No" vote is against it.)
HABITUAL OFFENDERS - MELANIE'S LAW (H 3818)	Y	Y
House 139-14, Senate 31-7, approved a law that denies parole eligibility for third-time violent felons for certain crimes. Other provisions include requiring a two-thirds vote of the parole board to grant a prisoner parole while serving a single life sentence; preventing parole eligibility for felons serving multiple life sentences based on separate incidents; and reducing mandatory minimum sentences for certain non-violent drug offenses. (A "Yes" vote is for the law. A "No" vote is against it.)
ORGAN DONATION (S 2067)	Y	Y
House 155-0, Senate 36-0, approved a law requiring the state to adopt the Revised Uniform Anatomical Gift Act. The measure streamlines the donation process and establishes revised rules and regulations for organ donations for transplantation or study. (A "Yes" vote is for the law.)
CHANGES IN THE STATE'S ENERGY LAWS (S 2395)	Y	Y
House 149-6, Senate 38-0, approved a law aimed at reducing the high cost of electricity in Massachusetts and creating more competition. The law requires investor-owned utilities to competitively bid proposals from renewable energy suppliers for long-term renewable energy contracts. It also increases the overall net metering cap from 3 percent to 6 percent, thus doubling the existing limits on municipal and privately owned projects that generate their own renewable energy. (A "Yes" vote is for the law. A "No" vote is against it.)
"THE VALOR ACT" TO HELP VETERANS (S 2254)	Y	Y
House 154-0, Senate 38-0, approved a law expanding financial, housing and education benefits and many other services for veterans and active-duty military personnel and their families. Provisions include facilitating seed money for the start-up and expansion of veteran-owned businesses; expanding eligibility for the Massachusetts Military Family Relief Fund that provides help with the cost of food, housing, utilities and medical services; allowing for a minimum 90-day license renewal extension for service members returning from active duty for certain Department of Public Safety licenses, including engineering and firefighter licenses; and permitting cities and towns to provide a property tax exemption of up to $750 for veterans who do volunteer work in their community. (A "Yes" vote is for the law.)
AVOID FORECLOSURES (H 4323)	Y	Y
House 153-0, Senate 35-0, approved a law prohibiting banks from pursuing foreclosure on a homeowner unless they have first taken "reasonable steps and good faith efforts to avoid foreclosure." A key provision requires the bank to offer a modified loan to the borrower if it is more profitable than the amount the bank would recover through foreclosure. (A "Yes" vote is for the law.)
ALLOW CHILD CARE WORKERS TO UNIONIZE (H 3986)	N	NV
House 122-31, Senate 34-4, approved a law allowing child care providers who work out of their homes and receive voucher payments from the state to join a union. The proposal does not affect private day care workers or those who work in day care centers. Voters rejected a similar proposal on the 2006 ballot by a vote of 951,517 in favor and 1,042,253 against. (A "Yes" vote is for the law. A "No" vote is against it.)
MBTA BAILOUT (H 4174)	Y	Y
House 127-24, Senate 27-9, approved a law providing for a one-time transfer of $49 million from the revenue generated from motor vehicle inspections to the MBTA and $2 million to regional transit authorities. The authorities would also receive $1.5 million in surplus snow removal funds. (A "Yes" vote is for the law. A "No" vote is against it.)

Atlantic Symphony's Joyful Noise sets the holiday tone



Celebrate the holiday season with a concert of joyful music, presented by Atlantic Symphony Orchestra on Saturday, December 1 at Thayer Academy's Center for the Arts, 745 Washington St., Braintree. Thanksgiving: Kindergarten style

ELAINE SORRENTINO

In true Thanksgiving tradition, one boy said he was thankful for food and for the Native Americans because they taught us how to plant.

I was recently invited to visit the South Shore Conservatory's Kindergarten classroom to talk with the students about Thanksgiving. The students and their teachers, Jill Martin and Karen Hill, had transformed their classroom into a Native American Wampanoag village with a Wetu, student-created Native American vests and authentic-looking artifacts. For a moment there I thought I was at Plymouth Plantation!

The students eagerly shared their vast knowledge of the Wampanoag tribe. Their first order of business was to correct my reference to their Wetu as a teepee. Their favorite fact to share was that the Native Americans accidentally discovered popcorn. The students confidently articulated how the Wampanoags gave the Pilgrims the means to take care of themselves, teaching them how to plant corn and other crops, and build their shelters.

While all the kindergarteners agreed that the first Thanksgiving was in celebration of a good harvest, there was lively debate about what the first Thanksgiving Day might have been called. However, the group was pretty certain about the first Thanksgiving Day meal. According to the students the menu included turkey, meat, venison, turkey, corn, turkey, mashed potatoes, turkey, clams, turkey, mussels, fish, and popcorn, with plums for dessert. (What, no turkey for dessert?)

When asked what they were grateful for at home, they all wanted to answer at once. One student was excited that his grandma was coming. One little girl said she was grateful for her brother and her family, and, not to be outdone, the girl next to her said she was grateful for her WHOLE family. The next student said he was grateful for food and his mom, dad and brother who ALL cooked. In true Thanksgiving tradition, one boy said he was thankful for food and for the Native Americans because they taught us how to plant. And finally, one child was simply thankful for everything.

At school the students are thankful for their friends, their teachers, the tables, learning, reading with Ms. Brown, the toys and one boy just blurted out "MATH!" One very honest student answered "I like lunch." Careful not to leave anyone or anything out one child added, "the school and everything and everyone." Ms. Martin was thankful for the music and art that they have in their school. As a class they all decided they were thankful for the earth, and we all agreed that the Native Americans were most likely thankful for the earth as well.

Part of the kindergarten Native American unit included asking each student to choose a name for him/herself in the Native American style of describing their connection to the earth. Before I bid the class goodbye and Happy Thanksgiving, their red-haired teacher, "Scarlet Fur", dismissed the children individually by beating a drum to the rhythm of their Native American names: Woodland Woman, Golden Sunrise, Chirping Chickadee, Crystal Waterfall, Moving Rock, Blowing Leaves, Morning Moose, Skipping Deer, Twirling Rose, Flying Hawk, Chipping Axe, Wild Horse, Warrior Wolf, and Tall Grass.

All of your friends at South Shore Conservatory wish all of you a Happy Thanksgiving! May your day be full of turkey and popcorn and turkey...!

Jingle Bell Walk happening today

The South Shore Community Center would like to invite everyone to join in the fun as they present the 18th Annual Jingle Bell Walk on Friday, Nov. 23. The festivities will begin at 2 p.m. when Santa, Mrs. Claus and his elves, along with some special friends, arrive at Cohasset Harbor via a fishing boat. Join the parade and follow Santa's horse-drawn wagon to the Community Center where hot chocolate, coffee, punch and cookies will await.

To welcome Santa, Mrs. Claus and the elves, Carillonneur Mary Kennedy will play Christmas season festive music from 2 - 2:30 p.m.

There will be holiday carols and the Rusty Skippers Band will be there to provide music to get everyone into the holiday spirit. Big Ryan the Storyteller will entertain children of all ages and children will be able to create their own special holiday ornament to take home. There will be Open Bowling for all to enjoy.

Bring your cameras because Santa will be available for you to take that special holiday photo. And also enjoy your own Holiday Hayride around the Town Common.

PUSHING THE EDGE

Giving Thanks

There is much that we have and take for granted. Thanksgiving is an opportunity to acknowledge those things that enrich our lives.

GLENN MANGURIAN

Thanksgiving is my favorite holiday. This national holiday has evolved from a celebration of harvest to a time for family reunions, high school football rivalries and over eating. But more important than the food and the football, it is a time to interrupt our fast paced lives and remember to give thanks for all that we have.

Yes, I understand there is suffering in the world and some of that suffering is not far from Hingham. Bad things happen, grab our attention and crowd out all the good things. Even when we notice something good, we tend to forget about it more quickly than we do the bad things. But maybe we can take time to pause and celebrate the abundance in our lives.

Gratitude is a positive emotion. Psychologists believe that it is one of humanity's most powerful emotions. It makes you happier and can change your attitude about life, like an emotional reset button.

There is much that we have and take for granted. Thanksgiving is an opportunity to acknowledge those things that enrich our lives. While we may each have a unique list, there are a few items that we can celebrate together:

- Our Police and Firefighters: for keeping us safe and responding to our emergencies, thank you.
- Our Soldiers - for protecting our way of life, thank you.
- Our Teachers - for creating a caring and safe environment to learn and become responsible adults, thank you.
- Our Doctors and Nurses - for caring beyond the health care, thank you.
- Our Neighbors and Friends - for the people we encounter every day who offer a smile or an act of kindness when no one asks, thank you.
- Our Parents - for their love and commitment that instilled the values we practice today, thank you.
- Our Spouses - for the love, understanding and patience that make our lives whole, thank you.
- Our Children - for the gift of life, vitality and optimism, thank you.

Do you know someone who never seems happy? Be ready with a smile and a kind word. It will make their day (and yours). If we can be thankful one day, maybe we can try a second day. And if we can be thankful two days, maybe we can try a third. And, if we can do three days – well, you get the idea.

Glenn Mangurian is a Hingham resident of 25 years. He spends his time consulting, teaching and being thankful. He welcomes your comments and can be reached at gmangurian@frontierworks.com

INSIDE THE 6 SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Final 2012 poll: Weymouth boys, Norwell girls reign supreme

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

It was a high school soccer season that will undoubtedly go down as one of the best in recent years. A record number of teams from the South Shore region qualified for postseason play, and when all was said and done in the Inside the 6 area, we had one South Sectional champion and three teams that reached the Sectional finals. These rankings are more of a reflection of the teams' postseason tournament, but I also took into consideration what teams did during the regular season. And when the numbers were crunched and final votes tallied, the Weymouth boys and Norwell girls finished atop the standings.

Boys

1. Weymouth – By far the most consistent team this fall, the Wildcats had a heck of a run, one that carried them deep into the Division 1 South Sectional tournament. After beating Barnstable in the first round, rivals Braintree in the quarterfinals, and then Oliver Ames in overtime in the semifinals, the 'Cats fell to Needham in the South finals, finishing the year at 17-2-4. They retained the No. 1 Inside the 6 spot for the entire season.

2. Marshfield – The Rams wrapped up their fine season with a 14-4-2 record and saw their tournament run take them all the way to the quarterfinals after picking up a win over Dighton-Rehoboth in the preliminary round and then Greater New Bedford Voc-Tech in the first round. Unfortunately for the Rams, it all ended in the quarterfinals with a loss to eventual South and Eastern Mass. champions Needham.

3. Braintree – A great tournament run capped an up-and-down season for the Wamps, who finished at 11-9-3. They started the Division 1 South Sectional tournament with a win over Silver Lake on penalties before beating B.C. High in the first round. The Wamps' season ended in a 1-0 loss to rivals Weymouth in the quarterfinals.

4. Silver Lake – After losing just three games during the regular season and making one of the strongest second-half-of-the-season pushes, the Lakers bowed out early in the Division 1 postseason, falling on penalties to Braintree in the preliminary round. Still, the Lakers had a fine campaign, going 13-4-3.

5. Hingham – The Patriot League champion Harbormen took their momentum into the Division 2 South Sectional tournament and opened with a 2-0 win over Milton in the first round.

Cohasset's skipper set to return after accident ended last season early

By Dick Trust
The Cohasset Mariner

He abandoned the wheelchair in June and is walking with specially designed orthotics.

If Bo Ruggiero can walk, he can coach. That's just what he'll be doing Monday, Nov. 26, when the Cohasset High School boys basketball team opens practice for the 2012-13 season.

"I'm doing stuff that the doctors are very impressed with," Ruggiero said. "I've got really good kids and I'm looking forward with great anticipation to getting back to what I love to do. That's coaching, and getting back involved. "There'll be some limitations on what I could do as opposed to what I can now do. There'll be no limitations at practice, but, as I tell the kids, 'I can't dunk anymore.' Of course, I couldn't dunk before, either."

Ruggiero's humor is intact and so is he. That in itself is reason for celebration. He survived a horrendous car crash last winter and has lived to tell about it.

"February 16, 1:30. I'll never forget it," Ruggiero said. Ruggiero was en route to practice at 1:30 in the afternoon when the Lexus sedan he was driving on Route 53 in Hingham was struck head-on by a pickup truck operated by an alleged drunk driver.

Ruggiero was transported to South Shore Hospital and spent days in the intensive care unit with blood on his brain, a pinched vertebra in his neck, and fractures of the ribs, both wrists, right knee and the right ankle and foot.

Painful days and nights turned into weeks and then months of treatment and rehabilitation. The Skippers played on after the accident, assistant coach Dick Lawless taking temporary custody of the team.

Cohasset finished the regular season with a 15-6 record, going 1-1 during the head coach's absence, then ended 2011-12 by going 1-1 in the postseason and bowing out in the Division 4

Despite a 1-0 loss to Canton in the quarterfinals, the Hingham boys put together a solid season, finishing with a 14-2-4 record.

6. Cohasset – The upstart Skippers showed flashes of brilliance during the regular season and then turned it on in the Division 3 South Sectional tournament. After beating Monomoy on penalties in the preliminary round, the Skippers (12-7-2) knocked off New Testament in the first round before falling, 1-0, to Seekonk in the quarterfinals.

On the bubble: Scituate, Hanover, Norwell, Duxbury, Pembroke, Holbrook

Final week of regular season: 1. Weymouth, 2. Silver Lake, 3. Marshfield, 4. Scituate, 5. Hingham, 6. Norwell

Girls

1. Norwell – A well-deserved No. 1 finish for the Clippers, who closed out the year with a 15-3-4 record. The South Shore League champs fought their way to claim the Division 3 South Sectional title by beating Dover-Sherborn on penalties in the South finals. This came after a penalty-shootout win over Ursuline in the semifinals. They also beat Pope John Paul II and a tough Hanover side to start the tournament. They lost on penalties in the Eastern Mass. finals to Weston, but allowed just one regulation goal during their five-game run in the postseason, something no other team in the region did this year.

2. Duxbury – A 15-3-4 finish for the Dragons, the runners-up in the Patriot League. A tough, 1-0 loss to eventual Eastern Mass. champions Medfield in the Division 2 South Sectional finals ended Duxbury's season, but the Dragons pulled off a massive victory over Canton on penalties in the South Sectional semifinals. This came after victories over both Diman Regional and Holliston to start the tournament.

3. Marshfield – The Rams finished the year with a 16-3-2 record and in second-place in the Atlantic Coast League, going 2-1 in the Division 1 South Sectional tournament. After beating Hingham, 2-1, in the first round, the Rams blanked Bishop Feehan in the quarterfinals before bowing out to eventual Division 1 South and Eastern Mass. champions Franklin in the South semifinals.

4. Scituate – It may go down as the best season ever for the Sailors, who ended the 2012 season with a 16-2-3 record. In the Division 2 South Sectional tournament, the Sailors beat Sandwich, which finished in third place in a tough Atlantic Coast League, and then lost, 1-0, to a very strong Canton side in the quarterfinals.

5. Plymouth North – The Atlantic Coast League champion Blue Eagles had a tremendous late-season surge to win the conference title, but had a tough go in the Division 1 South Sectional tournament. Regardless, after losing, 1-0, to North Attleboro in the first round, the Eagles finished the season with an impressive 13-4-2 record.

6. Abington – Making their first appearance Inside the 6 this season, the Green Wave were certainly the Cinderella team this postseason. They came into the Division 3 South Sectional tournament as the No. 17 seed and then beat Seekonk in the preliminary round before handing No. 1 Norfolk Aggie its first loss of the season, a 2-0 defeat in the first round. The Green Wave then beat Nantucket in overtime in the quarterfinals before bowing out to Dover-Sherborn, 1-0, in the semifinals. The Green Wave ended the season with a 12-9-1 record.

On the bubble: Hingham, Plymouth South, Carver, Weymouth, Hanover, Avon

Final week of regular season: 1. Plymouth North, 2. Marshfield, 3. Scituate, 4. Duxbury, 5. Norwell, 6. Hingham

South Sectional quarterfinals.

One shining moment early in Ruggiero's recovery was his appearance at the annual postseason banquet March 29 in the Atlantica restaurant at Cohasset Harbor. He rose out of his wheelchair and, taking hold of a walker, stepped slowly to a microphone. He addressed his players and others in the crowd, and lifted the spirits of his well-wishers.

Spring turned into summer and on into fall, and Ruggiero thought of two things: making a full recovery and returning to his Skippers as their head coach for a fifth season.

One out of two is half-good, half-bad.

The half-bad stems from a recent visit that Ruggiero made to Brigham and Women's Hospital, where a specialist delivered disturbing news.

"Unfortunately, my physical situation took a little bit of a turn for the worse," Ruggiero said. "The lisfrank fracture in my right foot was feeling OK, and frankly I was working through the pain and I thought there was an end in sight. But when it didn't get progressively better, we made arrangements and saw a specialist. I was told that my right foot will never be the same ever again. I can't run or jog. I can play golf, but I have to take a cart.

"I may be able, in a year or so, to go back and have them reevaluate me for another operation, but it would mean a fusion. That would mean less pain, but I'd have less flexibility and I'd have to be immobile for another three or four months again.

"It's just not what I had hoped for. I'm here, though, and, to see me, the body's the same but the foot isn't."

Ruggiero walks without a limp but not without aches "Basically, it's a pain in the foot and ankle area consistently when you try to walk too much," he said. "I'm icing it, I get treatments, but there's nothing that can be done to make it better. There's a lot of stuff that can be done to make it more comfortable."

Ruggiero's post-accident foot surgery required the insertion of screws, which stayed in for three months.

"When they took the screws out, the bone had healed," Ruggiero said, "but the impact of that horrific accident was so high-energy that all the cartilage in my foot and toes is gone. It's not what I would have liked to have happened, but I've got to move on."

Moving on means moving and working hard to maintain your physical fitness. Toward that end, Ruggiero and his wife, Mary, joined the YMCA in Foxboro.

"My wife and I are swimming there," said Bo, "and I'm doing whirlpool and other stuff. You've got to be in as good a shape as you can be."

With Lawless and junior varsity coach Jim Willis on hand again, Cohasset's hoop captains are seniors Shane Haggerty and Christian Davis. Haggerty is a 6-foot-4, fourth-year starter and two-year South Shore League all-star.

Davis, 5-9, started last season and was on the varsity as a sophomore when the Skippers went to the Division 4 state final at TD Garden.

While this will be Ruggiero's fifth season as Cohasset head coach, he has held the same position elsewhere in a career spanning more than 30 years.

His résumé includes high school stints at Medfield, Taunton, Foxboro and King Philip, and college gigs at Bridgewater State and Boston University under Rick Pitino.

Cohasset has gone 62-31 during the Ruggiero Regime, winning 15 games his first year, followed by nine, 22 and 16. He's looking for a big number this coming season.

"I feel very good in the situation I'm in," Ruggiero said. "I've got great kids, great assistants, and the parents and the booster club are terrific. I know there'll be good, strong teams in our league, but we'll be starting up soon and we'll be as good as we can be."

At Holy Cross this past week, Bo Ruggiero, Boys Basketball Coach at Cohasset High School and member of the MBCA Coaches Board presents Scituate High School Girls Basketball Coach, Brian Buckley with the MBCA 2012 D-II South Coach of the Year Award. Buckley's team finished the season at 24-1 and won the D-II South Championship. This is the second year in a row that Buckley has received the award. Buckley who coached at Scituate for eight seasons with a record of 132-47 and four Patriot League Championships retired after last season. In 27 seasons as a head coach of college and high school teams Buckley leaves the game with 353 wins. COURTESY PHOTO

Paul DeRensis, Cohasset Town Counsel, was named in November 2012 as one of 2012's New England Super Lawyers along with two other members of his firm, Deutsch Williams Brooks DeRensis & Holland, P.C.

DeRensis' practice is concentrated in the area of municipal law, and he was one of only 11 lawyers in New England, seven from Massachusetts, given recognition as a Super Lawyer in the government/cities/municipalities law area throughout the entire six state New England region. DeRensis has achieved recognition as a government/cities/municipalities "super lawyer" eight times, in 2004, 2005, 2007, 2008, 2009, 2010, 2011 and now 2012.

DeRensis is a graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Law School, and is admitted to practice in New York and Massachusetts and in various federal courts including the United States Supreme Court. He serves as Town Counsel to a number of Massachusetts municipalities. DeRensis has served as Cohasset's Town Counsel for 16 years.

All New England Super Lawyers are listed in November's issue of Boston magazine. The list of 2012 Super Lawyers is assembled by Thomson Reuters in conjunction with Boston magazine based on peer nominations by attorneys, independent research conducted by the Thomson Reuters research staff, and peer evaluations by practice area across the six New England states aimed at selecting as Super Lawyers the top 5 percent of New England attorneys in more than 60 practice areas and reflects both peer recognition and professional achievement verified through a selection process to determine New England's best.

Something sweet for our troops

Dentist office conducts candy drive

Kristine A. Grazioso, DMD PC (d.b.a. South Shore Children's Dentistry in Cohasset) has donated over 750 pounds of Halloween Candy to overseas troops. Grazioso was looking for ways to encourage children in her practice to show their appreciation to the troops while simultaneously promoting dental awareness.

South Shore Children's Dentistry decided to engage patients by hosting a Halloween Candy Give Back event in conjunction with Operation Gratitude, a National Guard affiliated organization that annually sends 100,000 care packages to U.S. Service Members deployed in hostile regions, to their children left behind and to Wounded Warriors, Veterans, and First Responders.

Throughout the month of October, the practice encouraged its patients to consider donating some or all of their Halloween candy in appreciation of our overseas troops.

Over 375 patients chose to donate their Halloween Candy to this worthy cause. In a Nov. 2 event held at Grazioso's practice in Cohasset, staff collected patients' candy and in turn entered their names into a raffle to win an iPod Touch, gift certificates, and other items. In addition, children were asked to write cards to the troops with words of appreciation and encouragement. The cards will be delivered along with the candy. Over 250 cards were collected.

"We are thrilled with the turnout we received and the enthusiasm from our patients! It's wonderful to see the children giving their candy as an act of gratitude to our troops. Parents should be very proud of their children!" said Grazioso.

The candy and cards are being delivered to the California Army National Guard for distribution through Operation Gratitude. Items will then be sent to our troops within the next three weeks. For more information on this event, please contact Julie Fitzpatrick or Jen O'Donnell at South Shore Children's Dentistry, (781) 383 0003, visit us online at www.drgrazioso.com or visit us on Facebook at South Shore Children's Dentistry. Rusty Skippers in tune with season

The Rusty Skippers, Cohasset's own community concert band, will be performing their annual Holiday Pops Concert at the Meeting House of First Parish Unitarian Universalist, on the Cohasset Common, on Saturday, Dec. 1 at 12 p.m.

There is something for everyone in this year's program, including popular tunes such as "Rockin' Around the Christmas Tree," orchestral favorites from "The Nutcracker Suite'" as well as less familiar carols including "I Saw Three Ships." There will be featured solos for Cohasset vocalist Lilly Sestito and oboist Sally Davenport of Hingham., as well as singalongs for the audience.

The concert is free but a freewill cash offering for the Cohasset Food Pantry will be taken.

The Rusty Skippers will also play this program on Sunday, Dec. 16 at Holy Nativity Church (8 Nevin Rd., Weymouth) at 3 p.m. The program last about one hour.

The Rusty Skippers play under the direction of Steve Biagini, the instrumental music teacher at Deer Hill School. The group first performed in 1995, with about a dozen players marching in the Cohasset Harborfest parade. Now comprised of musicians from towns all over the South Shore, the Rusty Skippers Band is bigger and better than ever, with new members bringing the number of players to about forty at a given concert.

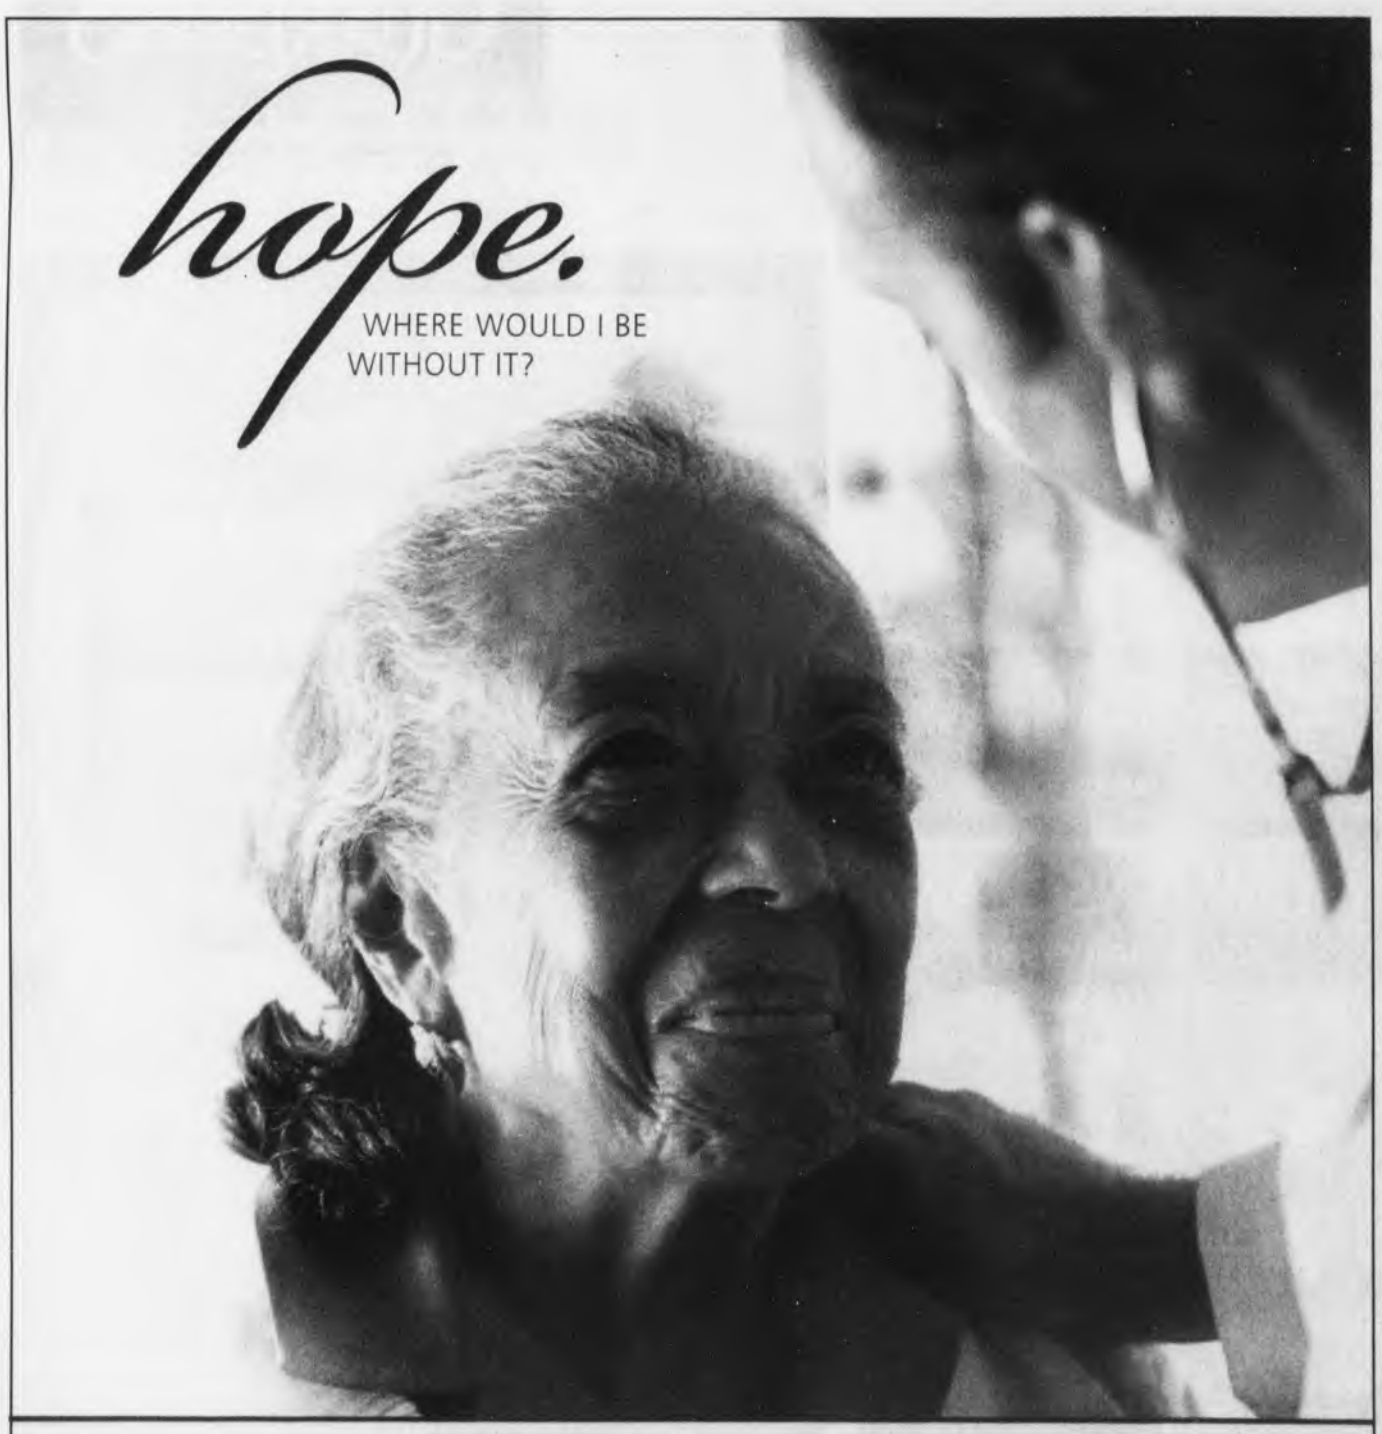
MARK YOUR CALENDAR

Village Fair coming Dec. 1

The annual Village Fair returns to the Cohasset Common from 10am - 3pm. on Saturday, Dec. 1st. The three worshipping communities on the Common join together once again to you this wonderful town tradition. All proceeds from the event go to support the ministries of First Parish, Second Congregational, St. Stephen's, and Cohasset's Appalachian Service Project (ASP).

Here's what you'll find at this year's Village Fair:



• At First Parish UU, find a great selection of gently used housewares, linens, furniture, antiques, children's clothing and toys, jewelry, books, sporting goods, decorative and holiday items. This sale is a win-win for everyone – you can make inexpensive purchases for yourself or others, you will be helping a charitable organization, and you will be contributing to the health of the planet by reducing waste and taking advantage of good usable items. Come and enjoy the fun of the search and the pleasure of the find.

• At Second Congregational, stop by for the chowder bar and cheese table and shop for gifts at the crafts tables while your children spend time at the "Make-it-Yourself" craft table. There will be a silent auction and Metco wreathes for sale. And every hour, there will be a surf & turf raffle for four filet mignons and shrimp.

• At St. Stephen's, the famous book sale returns yet again. Browse hundreds of recent hard covers, paperbacks, bestsellers, classic, and children's books. If it's anything like last year, the books will start to overflow the hall! Also at St. Stephen's, check out the craft tables, the bake goods sale, and the village kitchen, which serves hot food and beverages all day.

Downstairs at St. Stephen's, Cohasset ASP will once again run their "Secret Room." In the Secret Room, children, escorted by an ASP teen-volunteer, begin by making a list of those for whom they will be buying gifts. Then, in the "retail area" they can purchase gifts for their siblings and parents (and pets!) that range in price from $1 to $7 each. Finally, they will move through the cashier to the "wrapping room" where they will wrap and label their gifts, ready to put under the tree!

Top off the day with a visit from Santa Claus on the Common. All are invited to come to the Village Fair.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF DEC. 3, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You've let yourself be distracted from what's really important. But love finally gets your attention this week. However, it comes with a challenge that could create a problem.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Be careful not to bully others into following your lead. Best advice: Persuade, don't push, and you'll get the cooperation you need to move forward with your plans.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Resist the urge to gloat now that you've proved your detractors wrong. Instead, charm them back into your circle. Remember: A former foe can become your best ally.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might want to claim all the credit for making this holiday season special. But is it worth producing a lot of hurt feelings by rejecting offers of help? Think about it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Ignore a co-worker's questionable behavior. Instead, put your energy into making your own project special. Then sit back and purr over your well-deserved applause.

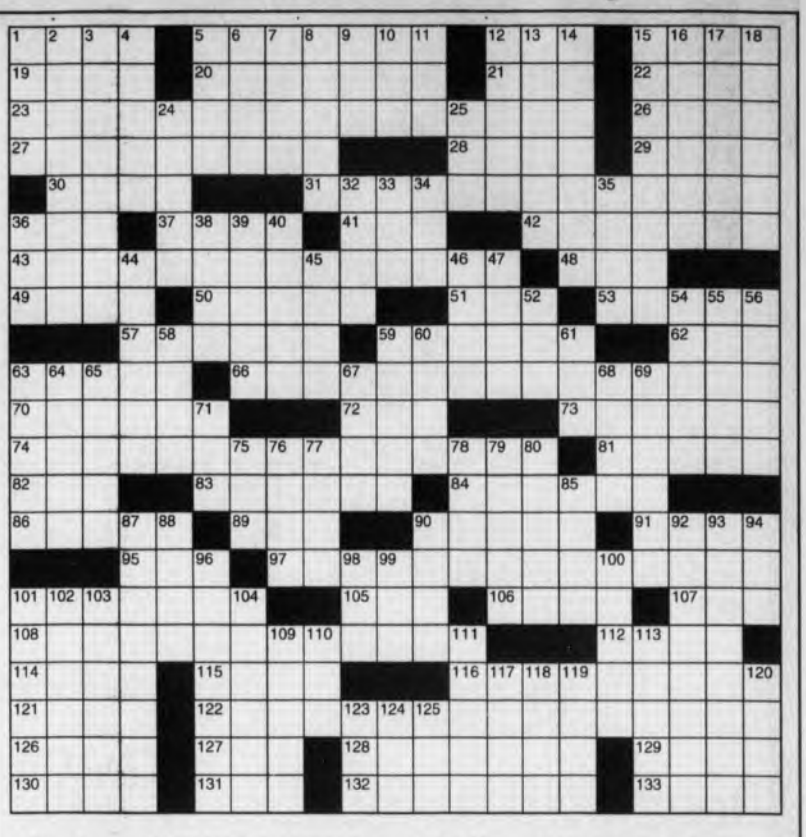
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might not want to accept those suggested changes in your workplace. But don't chuck them out before you check them out. You could be happily surprised.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your holiday planning might have to take a back seat for a bit so that you can handle a problem with a friend or family member. Your schedule resumes by the 8th.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Relationships in general benefit during the early part of the week, including in the workplace. Also expect some overdue changes in a personal situation.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) "Prudence" should be your watchword this week. Best not to be too open about some of the things that are currently happening in your life.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Money is on your mind, so you'd best mind how you're spending it. Take another look at that holiday budget and see where you can make adjustments.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Resolving to revive an old friendship could open some old wounds. Are you sure you want to risk that? Think this through before making a commitment.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your need to know more about a new friend could lead to some startling revelations. Best advice: Keep an open mind about what you learn until all the facts are in.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your loyalty to friends makes you a very special person to those whose lives you've touched.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Handbell concert in Hingham Nov. 30

In what is becoming an annual event, the Concert Handbell Ringers of the Wheeler School of Providence, R.I., will perform at 7:30 p.m., on Friday, Nov. 30, at House of Prayer, 916 Main St., Hingham.

Through the efforts of a few musical visionaries, the English handbell is slowly becoming a part of the larger and more traditional world of music. Schools, colleges, churches and community ensembles comprise a worldwide movement to promote this unique and historic instrument.

This year, the Wheeler Concert Handbell Ringers will perform settings and music by Bach, Vince Guaraldi, John Rutter, Sigman and DeRose, Ralph Vaughn Williams and Mykloa Leontovich. A free-will donation will support handbell education and the ensemble's CDs will be available for sale after the concert.

The Wheeler Concert Ringers rehearse together four times each week and spend additional hours individually to master their ringing assignments. COURTESY PHOTO

DeLuca's through

Chief's contract was not renewed

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset Police Chief Mark DeLuca, who has been suspended with pay since late May, will not have his contract with the town renewed.

DeLuca's three-year contract is up in January, and the chief has received $2500 per week during his suspension. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski placed the chief on paid leave on May 25 after Cohasset's police union filed 11 allegations of misconduct against the chief. DeLuca told the media last month that the accusations against him were all false.

Milanoski said Wednesday that a hearing did not take place. DeLuca's contract would not be extended, and DeLuca would be paid for the remainder of his contract.

The allegations have not been shared publicly, except for four general descriptions that Acting Town Manager Michael Milonoski wrote in his suspension letter to DeLuca: "Using your position as chief to secure benefits for which you and others were not entitled to; forging important documents; physical abuse; abusing your authority during an internal affairs investigation."

School board votes teachers' contract

Acting Town Manager votes 'nay'

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

After a long period of negotiation for a new contract with the Cohasset Teacher's Association, the School Committee voted unanimously (5-0) Wednesday night to approve the ratification of agreement.

"Rest assured, we do have a ratified contract," School Committee chair Jeanne Astino said during Wednesday's meeting.

"If you would like to read the statement into the record, we're happy to hear it."
Jeanne Astino, School Committee

For full text of Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski's statement to the School Committee on the teachers' union contract ratification, see page 3.

School committee member Helene Lieb motioned to approve the contract, which is from Sept. 1, 2012 to Aug. 31, 2015, and noted that the negotiations took place over "17 to 18 meetings."

School committee member Paul Schubert thanked the teachers and Superintendent Barbara Cataldo for all of the time and effort they took to negotiate a contract. Then the committee voted unanimously to approve it.

However, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski balked that he was not part of the discussion, or the vote, because "my role as town manager authorized by state statute is to have an equal vote and to represent the entire municipality during the school union's collective bargaining."

Astino invited him to the school board's table after the vote had been taken, and Milanoski then began to read a statement. Schubert interrupted with a point of order, stating that the committee had already voted.

"There's always discussion with a vote," said Milanoski.

HAPPENING SATURDAY

Village Fair fun for all ages

What:
The annual Village Fair returns to the Cohasset Common from 10am - 3pm. on Saturday, Dec. 1st. The three worshipping communities on the Common join together once again for this wonderful town tradition. All proceeds from the event go to support the ministries of First Parish, Second Congregational, St. Stephen's, and Cohasset's Appalachia Service Project (ASP).

Happenings:

• At First Parish UU, find a great selection of gently used housewares, linens, furniture, antiques, children's clothing and toys, jewelry, books, sporting goods, decorative and holiday items. The Rusty Skippers, Cohasset's own community concert band, will be performing their annual Holiday Pops Concert at the Meeting House of First Parish at 12 p.m.

• At Second Congregational, stop by for the chowder bar and cheese table and shop for gifts at the crafts tables while your children spend time at the "Make-it-Yourself" craft table. There will be a silent auction and Metco wreaths for sale. And every hour, there will be a surf & turf raffle for four filet mignons and shrimp.

• At St. Stephen's, the famous book sale returns yet again. Browse hundreds of recent hard covers, paperbacks, bestsellers, classic, and children's books. Also at St. Stephen's, check out the craft tables, the bake goods sale, and the village kitchen, which serves hot food and beverages all day.

• Downstairs at St. Stephen's, Cohasset ASP will once again run their "Secret Room." In the Secret Room, children, escorted by an ASP teen-volunteer, begin by making a list of those for whom they will be buying gifts. Then, in the "retail area" they can purchase gifts for their siblings and parents (and pets!) that range in price from $1 to $7 each. Finally, they will move through the cashier to the "wrapping room" where they will wrap and label their gifts, ready to put under the tree!

• Top off the day with a visit from Santa Claus on the Common. All are invited to come to the Village Fair.

Holiday Stroll caroling is Dec. 8

Hey there, Songsters! For the 10th straight year, First Parish Church in Cohasset is sponsoring a Holiday treat for young and old — on Saturday, Dec. 8th.

Everyone is welcome! This is a community event for young and old, especially those with school-age children, in conjunction with the Holiday Stroll. Bring some friends! Exceptional singing voices are NOT required; Allegra Martin, backed by the "world-renowned" First Parish Choir, will lead us in a medley of familiar and simple carols — and we'll have songbooks for everyone.

Participants will meet in front of Darilynn's store on Main Street around 4:45 to enjoy hot cocoa, hot cider and cookies (cookie donations will be much appreciated) — look for Jim Hamilton's antique Jeep. We'll then do our singing for about 30 minutes.

Come join your friends for an old-fashioned holiday get-together, and pass the word! The more the merrier! For further information contact Darilynn Evans (383-1002) or Woody Chittick (383-3215).

Missing Jeep in 'joy ride' turns up on Joy Place

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 44-year-old Sohier Street woman reported to police on Saturday (Nov. 24) that her gray, 2006 Jeep Commander had been stolen. She said her daughter was the last one to drive the vehicle and it was in the driveway at midnight. She called around to see if someone had borrowed the Jeep but no one had the vehicle. The keys were in the cup holder and it was unlocked, police said. The following day (Sunday), the Jeep was located off Joy Place and did not appear to be damaged. Police believe someone took the Jeep for a joy ride and are investigating.

Underage

An 18-year-old Cohasset teen is facing charges of being a minor in possession of alcohol and keeping a disorderly house after police broke up an apparent underage drinking party on Rocky Lane at around 7:38 p.m. on Tuesday (Nov. 20). Police responded to a call about a house party; upon arrival they found a large group of partygoers in the yard and were able to identify the party host, who was arrested. Parents of the other minors were called to retrieve them. All were underage and all were from Cohasset. The alcohol was mostly beer, police said. The party host was arraigned the following morning in Quincy District Court. The party appeared to be a celebration among college students home for the Thanksgiving holiday, police said.

Refrigerator

Police responded to a call last week about a kitchen-sized refrigerator that had washed up on the rocks by the causeway near the 400 block of Atlantic Avenue. Police said the appliance apparently washed up during the nor'easter earlier this month. The refrigerator was not related to the Gloucester fishing boat that washed up at Nun's Cove during the same storm, police said.

Walker

Police checked out a report of a "suspicious" person walking in the area of Brewster Road last Monday (Nov. 19). The caller described the older man. Police said they know the man and he was just out walking.

Deer accident

At 6:45 a.m., on Tuesday (Nov. 20), police responded to a deer-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). Police said a deer darted out in front of a 2011 Mercury sedan, operated by a 30-year-old Cohasset woman, who was headed north. There was heavy damage to the car, which had to be towed. There were no reported injuries except for the deer that was killed in the accident.

Paint spill

A North Main Street resident, who was power washing his 30-foot sailboat in his yard last Wednesday (Nov. 21), apparently washed off the blue paint from the bottom of the boat that ran all over the ground and onto the road, police said. The health department and police responded and told the resident to take steps to clean up all the paint. There was also concern about the paint running into the vernal pool across from the house. The conservation commission and health department are following up, police said.

Accident

Police responded to a one-car accident on Thanksgiving (Nov. 22) at 12:40 p.m. on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). A 68-year-old Franklin Park, N.J., woman in a 2007 Subaru wagon hit the metal gate in front of Hingham Lumber doing damage to the right, front of her vehicle. The vehicle was drivable, police said.

Sideswiped

A 53-year-old Cohasset man in a 2007 Chevrolet sedan was traveling north on North Main Street near the intersection with Jerusalem Road at 12:23 p.m. on Friday (Nov. 23) when he sideswiped a parked, 2001 Volvo sedan police said. He was issued a citation for failure to stay in marked lanes.

MV crash

Police responded to a two-car accident at 7:38 a.m. on Saturday (Nov. 24) on King Street in front of the Avalon complex. A 2001 Ford, operated by a 52-year-old Hull man, was traveling south when a 2002 Saturn sedan, operated by a 21-year-old Rockland woman, cut in front of him to make a left into Avalon. The Saturn was traveling north, police said. The vehicles collided and both were towed. A passenger in the Saturn, a 22-year-old Scituate woman, was transported to the hospital. The driver of the Saturn was cited for failure to use caution, police said.

Speeding

Police routinely receive speeding complaints all over town and do their best with their resources to respond, police said. Last Wednesday (Nov. 21), a caller asked for additional patrols between Fiori's Gulf Station and the Scituate line on Route 3A due to speeding vehicles. The speed limit there is 35 mph.

Civil matter

Police advised a Doane Street landlord to seek legal remedy through the civil process after he reported that his tenants, who had been evicted, basically trashed the rental property, leaving it filthy, and damaging the paint, moldings, doors and doorjambs.

Domestic

Police responded to a domestic incident involving a married couple with two children last Wednesday (Nov. 21) at around 10:13 p.m. It was a verbal argument and did not involve physical abuse, police said. The couple was separated for the night and neither the husband nor wife wanted to seek a restraining order.

Last week, the Mariner learned from DeLuca's attorney, Edward McNelley, that a hearing was scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 27 to discuss the allegations. It was not known at the time if it would be a public or closed hearing.

However, Milanoski said Wednesday that a hearing did not take place. DeLuca's contract would not be extended, and DeLuca would be paid for the remainder of his contract.

Milanoski wrote to DeLuca in a letter dated Oct. 19. 2012 that the chief's contract with the town will expire on Jan. 24, 2013. The Mariner received a copy of this letter on Wednesday.

DeLuca's yearly salary for the current fiscal year is $136,000. During Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting, a discussion on the Police Department budget explained that $50,000 was coming out of the personnel budget and going into the legal budget. It was not made clear whether the $50,000 is coming out of the salary line item for police chief.

As for finding a replacement for DeLuca, Milanoski said that he plans to "keep everything status quo until the end of the fiscal year."

Deputy Chief William Quigley has served as acting police chief; Fire Chief Robert Silvia is overseeing the entire public safety department's administration and finances while Quigley and Assistant Fire Chief John Dockray are handling day-to-day affairs.

DeLuca started his law enforcement career 30 years ago in the Metro Dade Police Department in Florida before becoming a Boston cop in 1987. He became the Duxbury Police Chief in 1999 and was at that post for 10 years before his contract was not renewed in 2009.

DeLuca was selected for the Cohasset post from a pool of 80 applicants for the post. DeLuca replaced former Police Chief James Hussey. Deluca was hired at a salary of $111,000.

Messages left with DeLuca and McNelley were not returned by press time.

Astino said they didn't need to discuss the matter because it had already been voted.

"You didn't give me the opportunity to participate in the discussion," said Milanoski, adding that he would vote "no" for the contract.

Astino reiterated that they had already voted, however, "If you would like to read the statement into the record, we're happy to hear it."

Milanoski then read his statement, saying that he was "unfortunately" unable to vote for the contract due to two "principal issues"— the additional ten minutes added to the school day "does not address the main issue" of elementary and middle school teachers having to teach for 6 hours a day while high school teachers teach for four and a half hours with equal pay, said Milanoski.

The acting town manager's second problem with the contract, based on "pro-forma analysis," is that it could lead to a structural deficit of $250,000 in its second year and $450,000 in year three.

"Based on those two issues, and I'm here to represent the entire town, I vote against" the contract, said Milanoski. However, he said that he supports the efforts by the school committee and teachers.

Astino responded, "We are committed to living within our means and discussed your structural deficit, and don't feel the numbers are that high. We're ready to move forward."

Milanoski statement on teachers contract

TO: School Committee
FROM: Michael Milanoski
DATE: November 28, 2012
SUBJECT: Contract Ratification

I want to thank the School Committee for the time and effort you put into negotiating the proposed Teachers Contract. Also as a Cohasset resident and father of two children in the Cohasset School District we are blessed by having such dedicated and hardworking teachers along with involved parents who support and make our district one of the top-performing districts in the state. This is an important asset to our town, makes us unique, creates pride in our community and adds significant value to our town.

My role as Town Manager authorized by state statute is to have an equal vote and to represent the entire municipality during the School Unions collective bargaining. Unfortunately, I will not be supporting the current proposal based on two principal issues as I have shared with the School Committee during our deliberations. First, although the proposed contract does add an additional ten minutes a day of instructional time to the whole district it does not address the main issue.

Currently, elementary and middle school teachers per their contract are required to have six hours of instruction time, however high school teachers are only required to have four and a half hours of instructional time base on three 90 minute classes with the same pay, benefits, plus opportunity to leave the High School Open Campus for the day when no longer teaching.

Second, based upon preliminary financial pro-forma analysis of the proposed teacher's contract run by the School Business Manager and myself earlier this fall it appears in year two there may be a $250,000 structural deficit and in year three there may be a $450,000 structural deficit with the proposed contract.

Thank you and I want to thank our district wide teachers for the good work they do for our children.

CPC approves rec, Town Hall, historical society requests

Capital Budget, selectmen weigh in

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

There are currently 148 communities in Massachusetts that have adopted the CPA. Local funds come from a 1.5 percent surcharge on Cohasset property taxes with some level of state match.

There are several Community Preservation articles on the Special Town Meeting (Dec. 10) warrant. Cohasset's Community Preservation Committee (CPC) has approved requests to fund a study to renovate Old Town Hall; build a new clubhouse for the Sailing Club; repair the fences at Milliken Field; and restore hardwood floors in the Historical Society's Pratt Building.

The CPC recently began hearing requests for recreation and capital improvement projects that were not previously allowed; however, under new state legislation this year, the CPC can now consider projects it had to shut the door on in the past.

The CPC is an outgrowth of the Community Preservation Act (CPA), a 10-year-old law that set the stage to increase the amount of historical preservation, open space, affordable housing, recreational facilities, and other community enrichment projects. There are currently 148 communities in Massachusetts that have adopted the CPA. Local funds come from a 1.5 percent surcharge on Cohasset property taxes with some level of state match.

Following the recent legislative changes, recreation properties that were not acquired using CPA funds are now allowed under the act. The changes also included a one-time $25 million transfer to the statewide CPA trust fund.

When Governor Patrick approved the changes in July, after the fiscal year 2013 budget was approved, CPC chair Russ Bonetti expected the floodgates to open when it came to new requests. However, at the committee's first official public hearing on the matter last month, representatives from a few boards, including the Recreation Commission, Sailing Club, Historical Society and Housing Authority, came to pitch their projects and ideas.

Sailing

The Sailing Club went before the CPC last year to seek CPA funds for its planned clubhouse on Government Island, but the CPC reluctantly turned the club away. This time around, the project was embraced.

The CPC voted to give the SC half of the $520,000 project, as the club has raised roughly $220,000 through donations, according to Bonetti. Town Meeting will have the final say on whether the CPC should use $260,000 in CPA funds toward the clubhouse.

Bonetti said that agreeing to help with the project, however, was a no-brainer: "The Sailing Club needs no introduction," the CPC chair said during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting. "Probably everybody on this board has gone through that program, or has friends who have... There's very little need to explain what importance the Sailing Club has to the town; it's woven into the fabric of this town. It's an extremely worthy project."

The selectmen, Advisory Committee, and Capital Budget also voted unanimously to recommend this usage of CPA funds to Town Meeting.

The CPC, Advisory and selectmen were also in agreement when it came time to vote on the $75,000 study to renovate Town Hall (see related story). When it came to Historical Society floors and Recreation fences, however, the committees were split.

Floor restoration

While the CPC agreed to fund $37,113 (of the total $39,613 needed) to restore birch wood flooring in the Historical Society's Pratt Building, there was some debate on why the HS shouldn't fund half their project when the SC had to split the costs with CPC. CPC member and selectman Leland Jenkins voted against the HS project because he felt they should pay at least half; he also felt their request was "not an emergency."

The Advisory Committee reportedly had similar concerns. However, since the Pratt Building is on the National Register of Historic Places, Bonetti said that he felt the project was worthy; the HS also had less available money to contribute to the project, Bonetti said. One of the CPC's charges is to restore historic structures, he continued, calling the Pratt Building an "asset" to the town's historical character.

"It's probably the essence of what the CPC was originally written for by the legislation," the CPC chair said. Historic preservation is "the bulk of what the CPC does."

Advisory ultimately voted against this project, while Capital Budget did not opine. The selectmen voted 4-1 to support it, with Jenkins voting against.

Officials talk Town Hall renovation

CPC OKs $75,000 study for Town Meeting vote

By Erin Dale

"At the end of the BIM study, you come out with a crystal clear matrix, dollar data, and a bold imagery close to what the end result will be. Everyone far and wide will understand what they're going to get."
Susan Hoadley, Community Preservation Committee

"Old" Town Hall could soon be getting a facelift. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski and Brian Joyce, Director of Project Management and Planning, have been shopping around a renovation project to various boards, including the Community Preservation Committee (CPC), and conducting tours of the building. One of these tours was given during Tuesday night's Board of Selectmen meeting.

"I think everyone who's been on the tour has had an eye-opening experience," said Milanoski. "There's clearly a public safety issue with the building; it's been made very clear with the building inspector, fire inspector and electrical inspector... We have to address those."

During Tuesday's tour, Joyce pointed out water damage and faulty electrical work, among other dangers.

"When they did the electrical work back in the day and needed a new wire, they just cut it and abandoned it," Joyce explained. "There's an old fuse panel downstairs; we know something needs to be done in that respect."

The 155-year-old building was restored in 1929, and Joyce noted that the current electrical system "isn't much younger than that."

While Milanoski also discussed energy efficiency and departmental organizational issues, Joyce said that it all really boils down to safety.

"The building is at risk; the people who use it on a daily basis and the community at large are at risk," the project manager explained. "It's not up to code as far as fire safety... If you couple the old wood timbers with the antiquated electric system... if it were to spark a flame, it would go up quickly."

On Monday night, the CPC voted to approve a $75,000 study to determine potential models for renovating or rebuilding the structure. The notion to fix up Town Hall, which was built in 1857 and restored in 1929, is nothing new; five years ago a committee explored potential renovations and came up with two plans: scheme 'A' and 'B.' Scheme B involved flipping the current layout so that the first-floor auditorium would be on the second floor.

The old options have been discussed, as well as a scheme 'C' that would be a hybrid of both. After meeting with the CPC and Capital Budget Committee in a joint meeting on Monday, Milanoski conceded that the old plans could be "put on the back burner" while new options are explored.

The new study is a BIM (Building Information Modeling) survey, and CPC member Susan Hoadley proved to be an expert on the subject. BIM technology creates a three-dimensional model of the building that would allow viewers to take a virtual "walk-through."

"It's the absolute best way to record existing conditions" of the building, said Hoadley. "At the end of the BIM study, you come out with a crystal clear matrix, dollar data, and a bold imagery close to what the end result will be. Everyone far and wide will understand what they're going to get."

Capital Budget committee vice chair Jack Keniley said that he has purchased a BIM survey before and recommended it as a time and money-saver.

While the BIM study will take a few months to complete, if the Dec. 10 Special Town Meeting approves the use of CPC funds for the study, the proposed renovation project could be ready in time for consideration at the Spring Annual Town Meeting.

The CPC voted unanimously in favor of using $75,000 of Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds for the BIM study. The Board of Selectmen also voted unanimously to recommend the article at Special Town Meeting.

However, CPC chair Russ Bonetti said that, at first, he wasn't sure if the project fell under the CPC's purview. "I have no doubt that Town Hall needs work," he said Monday. "My only question is, what portions fall under CPC?"

Capital Budget chair Steve Gaumer was also resistant, at first, questioning whether the project qualified as historic renovation and whether renovation would be costlier than building a Town Hall replica.

"The base question is, what's the purpose?" asked Gaumer. "Do you save it? Restore it? Start over? Or walk away from it? I'm not talking about the existing building, but what you want to get from the end project."

Hoadley called the proposed project a "renovation with historic components," but not a historical renovation. While the Town Hall building is located within a historic district on the National Register of Historic Places, the building itself is not on the register. This gives the town some leeway on what could be done with the space in the future.

As CPC member Alexander Koines said, "With the way technology's changing every five years, are we even going to need a town hall in 25 years? We may be sitting in our kitchens with holographic images."

Milanoski discussed trying to turn a historic structure into an energy-efficient building, and whether or not that could be done; Gaumer said that the question was whether "this historic structure" could be upgraded in such a way. Milanoski conceded that they were unlikely to turn it into a "zero-carbon building."

However, the Acting Town Manager has plans to restructure the town departments into five main sectors in order to create better "synergy between departments... redesigning Town Hall from the multiple little fiefdoms we have."

Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore wanted to know if one of the desired outcomes through the proposed project is to create more space in the building. "Personally, I'd hate to undertake this kind of project and not end up with some additional space."

Milanoksi responded that the building doesn't "need more space, but more efficient sectors. We've become more efficient with technology, but the space doesn't allow us to utilize the technology we need to."

The BIM study could reveal multiple outcomes for the building, said Hoadley, including adding more space or leveling the entire structure and suggesting a new design.

"For that amount of money, it should identify and build a structure that understands what all the stakeholders have a stake in," said Hoadley. "We need to identify those pieces that keep the character of the building intact, the architectural elements intact for those who study it in the future, and keep the overall building intact so the reasons that make it important are intact... What are the portions that make the building what it is? An assembly place where hundreds of years' worth of our town has come together... can that just get stripped away? It starts the conversation about what's really important and what's not."

Gaumer agreed that the BIM study "appears to be a reasonable and rational starting point" for the project at large.

CPC member Todd Goff said that no matter what the study shows, the town should do its part to maintain its historic structures.

"Given the town we're all blessed to live in, we're obligated to protect and preserve it," Goff said of Town Hall. "I've lived all over the eastern seaboard over the years and understand what is not Cohasset... There are not many towns with commons like this. Town Hall is a resource to what makes [Cohasset] historical... It has an immense amount of importance to the aesthetic that is Cohasset. Within reason, we need to do what we need to do to preserve it for our kids and grandkids."

Fence fix

As Recreation Department director Ted Carroll explained, the fence at Milliken Filed is in dire need of repair. The 47-year-old fence that runs along Bancroft Road is showing its age and has become a safety hazard.

"It has been on the capital plan for three or four years and definitely needs serious work," said Carroll.

The rusted, chain link fence would be replaced with a vinyl coated fence that would not rust as quickly. The new fence would also lack the spikes on top — or, as Capital Budget chair Steve Gaumer referred to them, "kiddie catchers." There would also be wider gates and handicapped accessibility.

"It's an improvement to the neighborhood," said Bonetti. "This is a good benefit for short money."

The fence repairs would total $25,000, and the CPC narrowly approved the funds with a 4-3 vote (one member abstained). While some CPC and Advisory members debated whether the project should be classified as maintenance or repair, Bonetti said the only difference between those things are "verbs. The thing needs to be replaced."

Milanoski said that he didn't think the CPC was setting a bad precedent by allowing this type of project, as the current fence is "dangerous."

Jenkins voted against the project because he felt that the repairs did not qualify as recreation; if it were a fence around a tennis court, he would feel differently.

Selectmen vice chair Diane Kennedy said that she also didn't think a fence repair fell under a CPC/recreation project, but Bonetti read language from the CPA that explained how capital improvement projects can fall under CPC purview.

"It's one of the things we can do under the guidelines," said Bonetti. "This is something that fits. It's come up a lot, why doesn't the CPC do more for the town? This is a case where we can... we will fund any project that will fit."

The selectmen voted 4-1 to recommend the article, with Jenkins voting against. Advisory reportedly voted for the project.

Opposition

Resident Howie Altholtz, who spoke out against the CPC funding a church window restoration at First Parish during the May Annual Town Meeting, is also against one of the CPC articles at the upcoming Special Town Meeting.

While Altholtz said that he is for the use of CPC funds for the Town Hall renovation study, Sailing Club clubhouse and the fence repair, he is against the Historical Society's request to pay for floor repairs.

Altholtz wrote in an email to Bonetti on Monday, Nov. 26, "I believe it [the Historical Society] is a private organization and the work would be to benefit their privately owned property, and simply not a good use of Town money. Particularly in light of the extraordinary needs of the town and limited funds.

"My understanding is that they have already received quite a bit of Town (CPC) money," Altholtz continued. "While they do laudable and interesting work which no doubt has value, that is simply not enough. This request does not significantly advance the interests of the Town."

LIFE AT CHS

Musical will keep you in stitches!

WHITNEY MALONE

I encourage all of you to come out, not only to support the students, but also for an entertaining night of non-stop humor!

This last week of November felt unusually long, considering it was the only full five-day week of the month!

Tuesday night, both the Boys' Soccer Team and the Girls' Field Hockey Team formally closed their fall seasons with team banquets. The Field Hockey coaches and players enjoyed a delicious dinner at Atlantica, and then shared their final thoughts of the season and excitement for next year. As a senior, it was especially bittersweet; while I look forward to new experiences next year, I am going to miss the teammates and coaches with whom I have shared so many memories in the past four years. I wish you all the best of luck next year!

To address a misunderstanding in last week's article, the All School Band Day Concert did not take place this Wednesday. Mismarked on the school calendar, All School Band Day will be held in the spring, as usual! The upcoming band performance is the Holiday Music Tour Friday, December 14th, followed by the High School Winter Concert on Tuesday, December 18th. Every year in the Holiday Tour, the members of the CHS Concert Band, myself included, look forward to playing our favorite holiday music for those at the Joseph Osgood School, the Deer Hill School, and Linden Ponds!

Tonight at 7:30 is the opening production of The Drowsy Chaperone by CHS students! Don't worry if you are unable to attend tonight; we will also be performing the show Saturday night at 7:30 pm and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 pm. As described by Mrs. Moriarty, our director and choreographer for the show, The Drowsy Chaperone is "a comedy within a musical." I encourage all of you to come out, not only to support the students, but also for an entertaining night of non-stop humor! As a member of the stage crew, I'd like to thank Mrs. Moriarty, Mr. Mahoney, and Mr. DeWaal for their incredible commitment to organizing tonight's performance! I will always look back on my experiences shared with this cast and crew as a memorable part of my senior year.

Santa Claus is coming to town!

Cohasset ASP is once again helping out at the annual Village Fair to be held on the Common, this Saturday, December 1.

"We've been doing this for probably 20 years. It's such a heart-warming experience to watch our teenagers helping little children do their own holiday shopping," observes Rev. Gary Ritts, coordinator of the project.

The SECRET ROOM (open from 10 to 2) will be held up the hill at St. Stephen's Church, first floor "Water Melon" room. In the Secret Room, children, escorted by one of Santa's "Elves" (a CASP teen-volunteer), begin by making a list of those for whom they will be buying gifts. Then, in the "retail area" they can purchase gifts for their siblings and parents (and pets!) that range in price from $1 to $10 each. Finally, they will move through the cashier to the "wrapping room" where they will wrap and label their gifts, ready to put under the tree!

SANTA CLAUS will also make his annual appearance on the Common (2nd Congregational Church, side entrance - if rain) between the hours of 11 a.m. and 2 p.m..

All are invited to come by and help make the holidays complete and, at the same time, contribute to this town-wide outreach charity through the non-profit Cohasset Appalachia Service Project home repair program

Cohasset kids present 'The Drowsy Chaperone'

In between holiday events, the Cohasset High School music department offers another reason to celebrate this season: Tonight, this year's fall musical "The Drowsy Chaperone" debuts.

Many of the school's top performers are starring in the comedic musical, which takes place in the 1920s. The story is a musical-within-a-musical and follows an unnamed character simply called "The Man in the Chair," a recluse and Broadway musical enthusiast who listens to a recording of the fictional show, "The Drowsy Chaperone," to cheer himself up as he shuns the outside world. As he listens to the show, the characters appear around him, and his dingy apartment is transformed into a glitzy Broadway set, with the "Man" giving a running commentary throughout the show.

Freshman Daniel Toomey, 14, stars as "The Man in the Chair." This is his first musical, although the young actor performed in one-act plays when he was in middle school. Toomey described his character as "sort of a middle-aged man who's recently been through a bad divorce and listens to musicals by himself on a record player in his apartment."

While the "Man" has no name, Toomey said that he and his fellow cast members have speculated. "I think it's Kenneth," he joked.

Daniel Toomey stars as "The Man in the Chair," who listens to a record of the fictional musical "The Drowsy Chaperone" in his dingy apartment. As he listens, the characters burst into life, and his home is transformed into a Broadway set.

The cast is all smiles during dress rehearsal for the CHS production of "The Drowsy Chaperone." The Music Department puts on an all-school musical every other year.

MUSICAL

Obviously, Toomey and his cast mates are "having a ton of fun with the show."

While there has been plenty of joking around, freshman Madison Pratt, 15, who plays Mrs. Tottendale, said that the cast and crew work well together, and have been working hard.

"So far rehearsals have been very productive," said Pratt. "We get a lot done and it's always a lot of fun; we're always having a good time."

The play's story-within-a-story, according to senior Bobby Nahill, 18, "starts out as one wedding and turns into four."

Nahill plays George, the best man, whom the CHS senior describes as a "dynamic character." George has three pieces of string tied to his fingers, reminding him to "pay the band, yell at the florist, and find a minister."

Like many of the show's upperclassmen, Nahill performed in the last all-school musical, "The Wiz," two years ago under the direction of retired music teacher Bryan Marks. This year, CHS Music Director Stephanie Moriarty directs and choreographed the show; new music teacher Daniel Mahoney serves as the music director.

Nahill called "The Wiz" a "fantastic experience," noting that it was the first time he'd ever sung before. But "Drowsy" has afforded the senior another new experience: learning to tap dance.

For senior Andrew Barrett, 17, it was his first time singing a solo. It wasn't so hard, explained Barrett, who plays the "Latin lover" called "Adolpho."

"I sing my name," Barrett joked. "My song is, 'I am Adolpho.'"

Since the cast includes all grade levels from freshmen on up, Nahill noted that many of the kids have never been onstage before. The experience, however, has been "great for everyone," said Nahill. "I don't think anyone regrets doing it."

The various classes have managed to come together seamlessly to produce the show, said Pratt. "With all the different grade levels working hard together, we've bonded and made a lot of friends. Being a freshman, it's definitely exciting."

Senior Evan Ackley, 17, who plays "Robert Martin," the "suave, classy, debonair bridegroom," said that the cast has become "one big family."

Senior Ben Williams, 18, who plays "Underling," the "frustrated butler to Mrs. Tottendale," agreed. The show is "awesome because of the camaraderie we have," said Williams. "The cast and crew did a phenomenal job."

Junior Maggie Littlejohn, 16, stars as the bride, "Janet Van de Graf," and agreed that the musical has a "really good cast this year. I love all the people, and the music is really fun, too."

While rehearsals were "a little rocky at first," according to Littlejohn, things improved swiftly. "We pulled together thanks to the fantastic choreography by Mrs. Moriarty."

Ackley also credited the show's directors, Moriarty and Mahoney. "They work so hard, and it's sad because not everyone appreciates what they do."

This past week leading up to the performances is referred to as "tech week," where the cast and crew run the whole show onstage with costumes, props and lighting, and try to work out any kinks before the curtain falls on opening night.

"It's going to be a lot of work, but it's going to be fun," said Littlejohn of the final run-throughs. "This is the week where everything comes together."

Moriarty said that she selected "Drowsy" as this year's musical because "it's not well-known and, ultimately, we want it to be a learning experience as much as it is fun for everybody. It's a very well-written, smart piece, and brings up issues of stereotypical social norms from the 1920s."

The show, the director continued, has "teachable moments on what's funny versus what offends and how the culture has changed" over time.

While the story may have some life lessons embedded in the script, in the end, said Moriarty, "It's a comedy, and who doesn't love to laugh?"

The cast poses for a group shot during a dress rehearsal for Cohasset High School's production of "The Drowsy Chaperone."

OUR VIEW

Always lock your car

When it comes to crime, some people believe there is little that an individual can do to prevent it. After all, we live in challenging times. Drug abuse is a societal issue that is at the root of much illegal activity.

However, there is a simple way to prevent your motor vehicle from being "entered" and ransacked: lock it!

We would like to think that a car parked in our driveway is safe. We like to hark back to those "Andy of Mayberry" days of our youth when Cohasset and surrounding communities had that "small town" atmosphere where most people did not even have to lock their homes. While it is debatable whether leaving our homes unlocked was simply foolish or totally safe because the world was a safer place – the time has come to face reality and lock up.

Cars often contain a treasure trove of "stuff" for a would-be thief. There are GPS units, loose change, sometimes cameras or cell phones and more.

Cars often contain a treasure trove of "stuff" for a would-be thief. There are GPS units, loose change, sometimes cameras or cell phones and more.

Recently in Cohasset at the Avalon apartment complex off Route 3A, 11 cars were "entered." Two young men were later arrested and changed with the crimes after they used a credit card taken from one of the vehicles. All the cars were unlocked.

Cohasset is not the only town with the ongoing problem of car break-ins. Last weekend in Hingham, there were five cars "entered" at various locations around town. All were unlocked and in the driveway. Items taken include a knife, watch, flask, lacrosse stick, credit cards, pocketbook, sunglasses, and a GPS unit.

If there is an item of value in plain view in a car (such as a pocketbook or packages) a would-be thief might take things a step further and break the window to retrieve the items if the car is locked. So please – especially during the holiday shopping season – put items out of view in a locked trunk. If you are taking your dog for a walk, for example, at Thayer and Whitney Woods – put any valuables in your trunk before heading out.

There is no excuse for not locking your car at night or in any parking lot or area. With today's remote devices, if you think you forgot to lock up – just press the lock button and listen for that familiar signal from your car that it is locked.

Common sense and the Town Manager

Our Acting Town Manager Milanoski inherited an accounting nightmare, but his energetic and intelligent efforts have brought order to the chaos – and the welcome revelation that we are in better financial shape than the bumblings of his predecessors had indicated.

Yet a letter from Tom Wolf in last week's Mariner suggests that the Special Town Meeting vote against a proposed change in Cohasset's Town Manager Act; a change which would permit us to label and contract with Mr. Milanoski as our Town Manager, rather than endure the red tape complications (or limitations) attendant on continuing to label him as "Acting" Town Manager, and increase his executive effectiveness. The change is proposed by serious, well-informed and responsible individuals, and is recommended by our elected Board of Selectmen. Our S&P credit rating is at costly risk because of the prospect of continuing instability in our town management, so it behooves us to stick with a known quantity in our very effective manager, Milanoski.

Beats me how the cost of "settling up" with Coughlin, DeLuca and others (if there are costs) has any relation to the disadvantages of continuing to label the competent and conscientious Milanoski as "Acting" Town Manager. Where is the "ulterior motive" in ensuring continuation of the benefits of the new-found competence in Town management?

R. Murray Campbell,
217 Jerusalem Road

'Qualified' town manager needed

As a lifelong resident and 25 year employee for the Town of Cohasset I have seen many good and bad decisions made in town hires and dismissals. We have had and have some outstanding leaders in all parts of town government including the schools. These people came to Cohasset as qualified, experienced and hardworking people who had no other agenda than to do the best job for Cohasset and its' residents. They also came without the baggage that has been on the backs of the former Town Manager, the suspended Police Chief and the current Interim Town Manger.

The Interim Town Manager seems like a decent person with some knowledge of town government, but not enough to quantify him as a permanent Town Manager. He lacks the experience to deal with residential priorities, union negotiations and personnel issues as shown in the recent lawsuits that have been brought against the town. These suits are going to cost us dearly both financially and by pitting neighbor against neighbor. And there are likely more to come. I would rather see our tax dollars going toward increased residential services and fees cut for the most vulnerable in our town.

As a member of the second town manager search committee I can tell you that there are many qualified, experienced and hardworking people that can come to Cohasset and be unbiased in their decisions that are needed to manage a community like Cohasset. All you have to do is check for red flags. It seems to me that the Board of Selectmen are doing us all a disservice by not finding the best candidate for the job and are just going to hope that the interim can hold things together rather than be a leader. Shame on them and shame on us if we let this continue. It's up to us whether we want democracy or dictatorship.

It is for these reasons that I urge anyone who is interested in having a qualified and experienced town manager to vote against any and all changes to the Town Manager Act Article at the Dec. 10 Special Town Meeting and to insist that our elected officials do the right thing and put together a search committee and find us a "Qualified Town Manager."

Mary Snow,

COMMENTARY

Perspective on budget process

SAM WAKEMAN

Tom Wolf's commentary in the Nov 23, 2012 Mariner was substantially off base and misleading.

I was very involved in creating and setting the Town of Cohasset budget for FY2012. This process started in the late summer and fall of 2010. At that time is was all too obvious that the Town of Cohasset's Financial Statements and controls were in a shambles and as a result extremely inaccurate.

At that time the only prudent direction to take was to create an extremely conservative budget. This means erring toward understated revenue and overstated expenses. This budget was completed in the winter of 2011 and sent to the ATM that spring. At that time we still did not have a grasp of what was correct or not correct. We did know that a new financial reporting system would eventually give us honest data, but that was at least a year away. The use of that system would not start until the summer of 2011, already into FY 2012.

At the STM in November of 2011 the new Town Manager presented a number of account transfers and increased spending authorizations to amend the FY2012. At that time I asked the question where the dollars were coming from to increase spending. I did not receive a specific answer only a "round about", "we will have more revenue". I should have pushed further, but the amounts seemed relatively small and knowing the budget was conservative I felt there was probably enough room to accommodate this.

At this point in time we are several months into a new financial reporting system and still trying to reconcile past discrepancies in FY2011. In other words we had no reliable or accurate financial information.

To state that a financial officer who gave inaccurate financial information to his/her CEO would be looking for a new job might be correct in that context, but in the context of where the Town was at that time is a totally misleading statement. Mr. Wolf seems to feel that we had solid financial information, but that is an erroneous statement. At that point in time we were struggling to gain some degree of accuracy and our Finance Director was working hard to correct prior year's figures and insure the accuracy of FY2012. To imply that this was done to manipulate the scenario for political purposes is just not true.

I would also suggest the Mr. Wolf check his figures. The total revenue for FY2012 per the recap was $35,582,439. Of that $35mm, $24,680,363 was available to split between the Town and school budgets. Of that I estimate about $15,000,000 was allocated to the School District and the remaining $9,680,363 to the Town Departments.

It is obvious to me that Mr. Wolf is spinning facts and figures to influence you the voters to oppose any correction to a very flawed Town Manager Act.

New associates added to Elder Affairs Board

Cohasset Elder Affairs is proud to announce that it has recently added three new associate members to its board. Kelli Gildea, Cindy Swartwood and Paul C. Kierce, all residents of Cohasset, were approved for membership at a recent Selectman's meeting.

"We are pleased to welcome Kelli, Cindy and Paul," said Elder Affairs board chair John Campbell. "This is an exciting time for Elder Affairs and the energy and enthusiasm that they bring to the table is greatly needed as we continue to build broad community support for helping our seniors."

As associate members of the Cohasset Elder Affairs Board, Gildea, Swartwood and Kierce will add their voice and contribute their time to Elder Affairs activities and programming by serving on board subcommittees, attending board meetings and contributing to community conversations on senior issues.

COMMENTARY

Ends don't justify means

KAREN QUIGLEY

Former Town Manager Coughlin maintained to the bitter end that there would be a surplus in FY12. There is.

The press release issued by the Board of Selectmen (published Nov. 16) was a strategic ploy in hopes that you will agree with them that the end justifies the means. That as long as our financial house is in order, it doesn't matter if process, procedure, precedent and bylaws are ignored. That reputations and careers are ruined.

The path to financial stability was set two years ago. The BoS deserves credit for staying the course. It does not, as they hope you will believe, support their contention that the Acting Town Manager is vital and that it is essential we vote to revise the Town Manager Act at the December Town Meeting so that his illegal contract can be made legal.

Former Town Manager Coughlin maintained to the bitter end that there would be a surplus in FY12. There is. Thereby putting lie to the contention there ever was a deficit. Does it matter that he was correct? Does any of it matter?

It matters to Mike Coughlin who had his reputation and career ruined and who is now suing the Town and the Board of Selectmen.

It matters to Mark Brennan and Tom Gruber who also had their reputations tarnished and were let go. There was no money to pay them but there was money to hire a younger individual to replace them. Mark Brennan filed an age discrimination complaint against the Town and the Acting Town Manager.

It matters to Police Chief Mark DeLuca who the BoS and the Acting Town Manager accused publicly of unfounded criminal charges. At a time when police overtime is a major concern, he has been on paid administrative leave since May. What are certain is that the BoS will vote to terminate him, or let his contract run out in January, and that his career in law enforcement is over. What subsequent action DeLuca may take, if any, is unknown.

It matters to our pocketbooks because insurance isn't free and there will be a long-term financial cost to these lawsuits and subsequent settlements that will never restore the reputations or future career opportunities of good people who served our Town well.

It matters to the 11 Town employees who under the guise of a financial crisis had their contracts invalidated and their raises rescinded. It matters to them that they were coerced into accepting new contracts under the threat of take it or leave it while the Acting Town Manager was hired at top dollar.

It matters to the Police Union who made substantial concessions in order to help the Town out in its financial crisis.

It matters to Debbie Cook, Sarah Charron and Dick Karoff who also had their reputations trashed before being ignominiously removed from the Conservation Commission because the Selectmen's friends, the E-20, thought these Commissioners might not vote their way.

It matters to the 200+ citizens who signed a petition protesting this action by the BoS only to see their request for an independent investigation to review the actions of the Selectmen turned into a vehicle to position Michael Milanoski as the shadow government and heir apparent to then Town Manager Coughlin.

It matters to the Ford Family who had their project denied by the Conservation Commission on behalf of another of the BoS's allies, Water Commissioner Peter DeCaprio. The Fords have filed an appeal in Superior Court.

It matters because Milanoski chaired the Governance Committee bringing forward the revision to the Town Manager Act; it was he who first initiated these revisions and who is the beneficiary.

It matters to the Planning Board and the Housing Authority who took votes of no confidence in the BoS.

It matters to our pocketbooks as our Transfer Facility and Beach sticker cost was significantly increased due to the ersatz financial crisis.

The actions of the previous and current Selectmen (Ted Carr, Paul Carlson, Fred Koed, Diane Kennedy, Lee Jenkins) and their Acting Town Manager, Michael Milanoski, have brought division and discord along with monumental legal fees.

The urgency that we vote at the December Town Meeting to revise our Town Manager Act in order to retroactively make legal the illegal contract the BoS gave to Milanoski is that of the Selectmen and of them alone.

Good sense and advice from governance experts from the state dictate that any revisions to the State Act by which our Town is governed be made thoughtfully, transparently, and comprehensively.

SENIOR SCENE

T-Day dinner was delicious!

LOUISE SMULLEN

A large number of Cohasset's elders enjoyed the annual turkey dinner at Atlantica. This is graciously hosted by Joe and Janet Campbell.

Hurricane Sandy put a crimp in the seniors' Halloween party in that Mr. D.J. had to cancel his visit as a result of the storm. He was to have us stroll down memory lane to exercise our cognitive skills. Hopefully, the program will be rescheduled. However, Liza Salerno filled in by telling about the evolvement of Halloween from way back when to the present time. Then we took part in a round of Wheel of Fortune with Aylsa Goodrich being the prizewinner.

On Nov. 7, Patricia Nihill of North River Home Care led us in a game of Bingo. That is always fun and five prizes were won.

The next week Peg McDonough of S.H.I.N.E. (Serving the Health Information Needs for Elders) was the speaker. She talked about protecting ourselves and loved ones against healthcare errors, fraud and abuse, also deceptive marketing tactics. We also discussed Medicare and Medigap plans. Peg handed out printed information regarding the various plans, cost and coverage.

A large number of Cohasset's elders enjoyed the annual turkey dinner at Atlantica. This is graciously hosted by Joe and Janet Campbell. Many thanks to them and the many volunteers who served us. A fifty-fifty raffle was held, with half the proceeds going to the winner and half to the Cohasset Food Bank.

Halloween and Thanksgiving have flown by, and now we are looking toward Christmas. Fairs abound, held by churches, schools and other groups. Cohasset's own Village Fair, held annually by the churches around the Common, will be held this coming Saturday, the first day of the Advent season. There you will find homemade crafts and ornaments, books, gently used items, baked goods and of course, good food.

Remember when you were a child? It seemed like we waited forever for special days, and now they just whiz by. At least that has been my experience.

Wishing everyone the joy of the season.

COMMUNITY GARDEN CLUB

Cohasset's Village Stroll: Ann Helbock and Sue Reagan are making gumball topiaries for the Gingerbread Marketplace on Dec. 8. COURTESY PHOTO

JAN TODD

Cohasset's Village Stroll evokes the feeling of Christmas in many hearts. This year, for the first time, the Community Garden Club of Cohasset will enter into the Village Stroll's spirit by hosting a Gingerbread Marketplace from 1 to 6 p.m. in the Community Center, 3 North Main St. As the strollers move between the many businesses, they will be offered tastes of delicious foods and watch a professional sculptor create a wonder from a block of ice. They will delight in the stream of wreaths, each decorated in its own special way by the many members of Cohasset's Chamber of Commerce and others participating in the Stroll. Those wreaths will be raffled in support of Cohasset's Food Pantry. There will be engaging activities for children. Information sheets will guide one through the multitude of sites to be visited.

Upon entering CGCC's Gingerbread Marketplace there will be much to see: Handcrafted items, handmade decorations to admire, and homemade baking that will fill the air with the scent of cinnamon, nutmeg, ginger and butter. The Community Garden Club of Cohasset has been busy creating the types of seasonal ornaments one will want to save and reuse year after year or to give as a treasured gift. There will be hand-painted glass ornaments, miniature bells, and tree ornaments commemorating Cohasset. Our town's seaside location has encouraged starfish, sand dollars and shells to metamorphize into glittering ornaments sometimes and Santa or a reindeer other times. Members have knitted cozy hats and scarves. There will be handmade jewelry as well as herbal soaps and candles.

Of course gingerbread people of different shapes and sizes will take a major bow. There will be many other examples of Christmas baking as well, the type of baking European housewives would be able to keep for months in an airtight container. Some of the baked cookies to be sold are Speculaas, originally from Holland; Viennese Crescents; Leckerli, the Tyrolean honey cookies; shortbread and so many other holiday cookies, as well as breads, cakes, candies, etc. Come and taste the season.

Gum Drop Topiaries, peppermint trees, tree ornaments of gingerbread or tiny stockings holding candy canes "– and visions of sugarplums danced in their heads" – will delight children and adults alike. Are these to be only admired and to add to the fun or will they be consumed almost immediately? If it is the latter choice, just remember that gumdrops don't really grow on trees. A trip to Shaw's or Stop & Shop will recreate your topiary in a new burst of foliage. The Village is waiting for you to join in the Stroll, a week from tomorrow, next Saturday, Dec. 8. See you in the Community Center from 1 p.m. Remember – the early bird gets the – pick of the best.

FOR THE RECORD

Trio of new films pass the screen test

GREGORY MATHIS

When I began my career in journalism I was given the opportunity to do some arts and entertainment writing that included movie and concert reviews.

One word has ended my rather lengthy absence from movie theaters.

Actually it's one word times three.

Let me explain.

"Argo" was the first movie I saw in a theater in more than a year. Two weeks later, I found myself taking in "Flight." Then "Lincoln" drew me in for a third time in less than two months.

It's been a stunning turn of events.

Somewhere along the line I lost interest in going to the movies much to the disappointment of my wife. Ticket prices had something to do with it. Snack prices definitely did. But so did the restless children who acted like they were being dragged to the movies against their will, and the more mature viewers who treated the theater as if it were their living room and each scene was up for discussion. Given the various social obstacles, I preferred to enjoy movies well after their release in theaters in the comfort – and quiet – of my own home.

There was a point, however, when it was hard to keep me away from the movies.

The year 1980 comes to mind because the long-awaited sequel to "Star Wars" – "The Empire Strikes Back" – made its way to the big screen. After three long years between episodes, I was eager to see what space adventures were next for Luke, Han Solo, Princess Leia and Chewbacca.

I was so eager, in fact, that my best friend and I saw it nine times at the movie theater. Keep in mind this was well before BluRay and DVDs were options. There was no Netflix, no Redbox. Cable TV and Beta and VHS were brand new, so the only way to see a movie multiple times was to pay for a ticket and see it in the cinema.

When I began my career in journalism I was given the opportunity to do some arts and entertainment writing that included movie and concert reviews. It was an enjoyable part of my job, although covering high school sports was my main beat.

I'm not really sure if anyone cared about my opinion on movies and music, but it was sure fun giving it.

As newspaper staffs shrink, news holes tighten, and freelance opportunities lessen, it seems arts and entertainment is getting squeezed off our pages, which is too bad. The days of reading a review of the latest movie in the newspaper before deciding whether it was worth seeing probably ended before my theater boycott began.

It's safe to assume, though, that social media has picked up the slack providing instant feedback from friends on Facebook or trending hashtags on Twitter with more immediate reaction and commentary on films and much more.

It's difficult to say whether the recent movie-viewing activity is a blip in the boycott, but I do know that other than the obvious similarities with the one-word titles, it was the historical aspect of both "Argo" and "Lincoln" that piqued my interest in those films. Denzel Washington was the reason I was on board for "Flight."

I don't see myself going back to moonlighting as a movie critic, but if I were I'd have two words for these one-word titles – worth it.

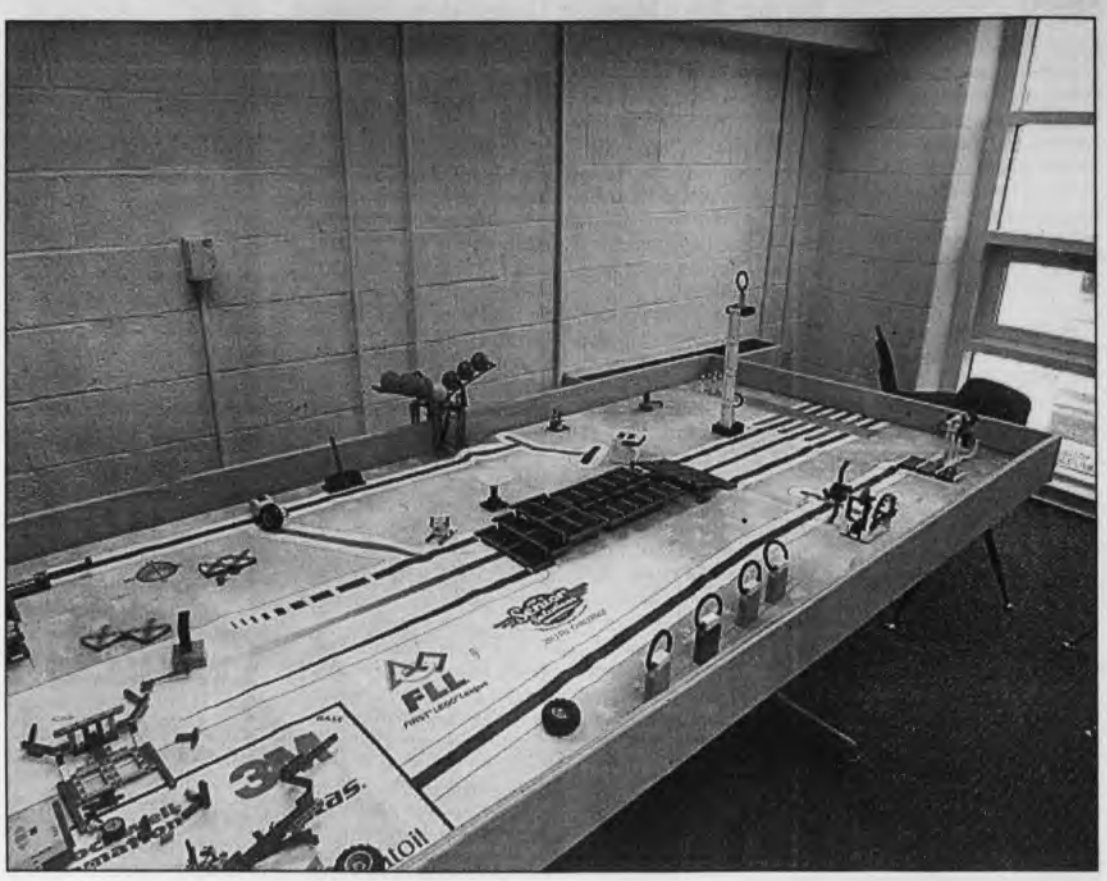
CEF SPOTLIGHT

FIRST LEGO League Teams at Cohasset Middle School!



MARY MCGOLDRICK

Cohasset Middle School students are getting excited about robotics. Thanks to a grant from the Cohasset Education Foundation awarded last June, FIRST LEGO League robotics is now being offered as an after school activity in the district.

FIRST LEGO League is a worldwide robotics program for 10- through 14-year-olds designed to get children excited about science and technology and teach them valuable employment and life skills. This is the first time the program has been offered in the Cohasset Schools, and this fall the response was so great that there was a wait list.

The Middle School is running the after-school program with two robotics teams, one led by Laura Humphrey, High School math teacher and one led by Jon Fortin, Middle School math teacher. Both teams meet twice a week for 10 weeks and participate in a challenge designed by the FIRST LEGO group. Said Laura, "Jon and I are merely mentors for the team. It's not for us to tell them (the students) what to do – our role is to let them do, and provide the resources they need to discover together how best to solve each challenge." Jon Fortin said, "One of the greatest challenges I think the kids have encountered with this program is having the teacher in the group step back and allow the students to figure everything out. They are being forced to work together as a team and are learning not to rely on me for the answers." The teachers are assisted by high school students that also act as facilitators.

Each fall FIRST LEGO League issues a challenge and student teams attempt to conquer it by building and programming an autonomous robot to score points on a themed playing field (robot game), developing a solution to a problem they have identified. Past challenges have been based on topics such as nanotechnology, climate, quality of life for the handicapped and transportation. This year's theme is "senior solutions" with a robot game board based on challenges that senior citizens encounter as they get older or activities that many seniors participate in. There is a bowling activity, quilting challenge, a dog retrieving a cell phone challenge, a turning off the stove challenge, a taking medicine challenge, even a weight lifting challenge! In addition, students also need to complete a project where they research and create an innovative solution to the theme of the competition. This year again that theme is the challenges facing senior citizens.

TJ Coffey and Amby Tierney work on programming the robot for the senior challenge.

Emma Humphrey, an eighth grade participant, enjoys working with students from different grades. Her sister Maeve, a sixth-grader, loves "learning about technology, seeing all the pieces in front of me, and trying to put them together so they will work." Nathan Arnold, a fellow sixth-grader, recognizes that, "everything is challenging but when we put our minds together, we can get it done."

Jon's team, the "Pioneers" and Laura's team, "Cohbots and Applesauce" will be completing their challenges and heading to Worcester Polytechnic Institute on Dec. 1 to compete with other teams in the region. Said team leader Jon Fortin, "At the competition on the 1st, each team will present their project solution and then at the end of the afternoon will compete in the robot game. Judges at the competition will be looking for how well teams work together and specifically how well they do without the support of the adult mentor on the team."

If successful, the winning team will then head to compete nationally. When asked if he would participate in the program again next year, team member Thomas Guinee said, "Of course I'll do it again! This is cool!"

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

Gov. Deval Patrick provided plenty of controversy when he issued an executive order that will allow young illegal immigrants in Massachusetts to pay the lower in-state resident college tuition and fees rate at the state's 29 public colleges and universities as long as they obtain work permits through a new program ordered by President Obama. No legislative approval is required for either of the orders.

Obama's order offers "deferred status" to these illegal immigrants by forbidding the federal government from deporting those under the age of 30 who came to the U.S. before age 16; have lived here for at least five years; have no criminal record; and are military veterans or have a high school diploma or GED. Patrick used Obama's action as the basis for a letter he wrote last week to Higher Education Commissioner Richard Freeland informing him that these "deferred status" immigrants must be offered in-state tuition at public colleges and universities in Massachusetts.

Supporters say many of these students were babies when they were brought here by their parents and had no choice about entering the country illegally. They note many are unable to afford the higher tuition and end up skipping college and working in low-pay, low-skilled jobs rather than contributing to the economy in a more meaningful fashion.

Opponents say the state should not offer financial rewards to anyone who has broken the law and is in this country illegally. They argue it is outrageous to offer low tuition rates to these students while legal citizens from outside Massachusetts, including war veterans, are required to pay higher rates. They noted many programs that help full-fledged citizens have been reduced over the past few years in Massachusetts.

Here are some comparison numbers: The cost at UMass Amherst this year for tuition and fees is $13,230 for in-state residents and $26,645 for non-residents. That's a savings of $13,415 for in-state residents. Worcester State College checks in at $14,237 vs. $8,157, and Bunker Hill Community College's numbers are $13,880 vs. $5,640.

This week, Beacon Hill Roll Call reviews local legislators' votes on illegal immigrant issues.

REQUIRE PROOF OF LEGAL RESIDENCE TO REGISTER AUTO (H 4238) — Y Y

House 135-19, Senate 24-10, overrode Gov. Patrick's veto of a bill that would require applicants to provide proof of legal residence in order to register their cars.

Supporters of the bill said it would prevent illegal immigrants from registering their cars. They noted a loophole has allowed unlicensed drivers to legally register their cars and then drive illegally without a license.

In his veto message, Gov. Patrick said allowing an illegal alien to own a vehicle in Massachusetts does not jeopardize the public's safety. He argued the bill seems aimed at using the Registry of Motor Vehicles to identify and police undocumented people.

LOWER TUITION FOR ILLEGAL IMMIGRANTS (H 1230) — * N

House 57-96, rejected a bill allowing illegal immigrant students to pay the in-state tuition rates and fees at Massachusetts colleges and universities if they have attended a high school in Massachusetts for at least three years and have graduated or received the equivalent of a diploma. The measure also requires these students to provide the college with an affidavit stating that he or she has filed or will in the future file an application to become a citizen or permanent resident.

Arguments of supporters and opponents were the same as they are over Patrick's directive last week.

This is the most recent time the Legislature voted directly on this specific issue. The vote is from 2006. Representatives who were not yet elected in 2006 did not vote on the proposal.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against it.)

ILLEGAL IMMIGRANTS IN PRISON (H 3500) — * Y

House 73-84, rejected an amendment that would require the state to join the federal Secure Communities Program.

Under the program, the fingerprints of all individuals in Massachusetts jails would be checked with FBI and Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) databases for the criminal's immigration status and prior criminal record. The Obama Administration had mandated that all states join the program by 2013.

Amendment supporters said the program is a fair one that would ensure illegal aliens who commit serious crimes will be deported. They noted that under the program, ICE has so far deported some 81,000 illegal immigrants who have been convicted of crimes. They argued that "colorblind" fingerprints would be taken from all prisoners and disputed opponents' charges that the program would lead to racial profiling.

Some amendment opponents said the program would lead to racial profiling. They noted that 27 percent of those deported had only a misdemeanor offense and 54 percent had no criminal conviction at all. They argued the program would result in women in domestic abuse situations being afraid to call the police.

(A "Yes" vote is for requiring the state to join the Secure Communities Program. A "No" vote is against it.)

STUDY AND DELAY ASKING IMMIGRANTS FOR ID (H 3781) — * Y

House 110-45, approved an amendment that would replace a proposal to require the state to verify that anyone over 18 who applies for state benefits is legally in Massachusetts with an amendment to launch an investigation about whether the state should study the proposal instead. The amendment would require the House Committee on Post Audit and Oversight to investigate whether the state should "authorize a study of the services provided by the commonwealth to residents and non-residents of the commonwealth and the monetary distinction between such residents." The amendment also requires the committee to consider "any potential civil rights violations that could occur if a study was conducted."

Some supporters of the investigation on whether to study said the original proposal is mean-spirited and anti-immigrant and noted many illegal immigrants are hardworking people who perform jobs most Americans would not do. Others said the House should gather information before making a rash decision and noted this problem really should be solved on the federal level. Some argued there are many legal immigrants who would find it difficult to produce the necessary documentation.

Opponents of the study said it is simply another example of a way for legislators to avoid a direct vote on the proposal itself. They said the study would never be conducted and the measure would never be implemented. They noted state services, with some emergency exceptions, should not be provided to people who broke the law and are here illegally. They emphasized the legislation would only apply to illegal immigrants and includes many safeguards to protect individual rights.

(A "Yes" vote is for investigating whether to study the amendment. A "No" vote is against the investigation and favors the verification policy.)

CHECK IMMIGRATION STATUS OF CASINO EMPLOYEES (S 2015) — Y *

Senate 32-6, approved an amendment that would require casino owners to check and verify their employees' immigration status using a program operated by the United States Department of Homeland Security, the United States Department of Labor, the Social Security Administration or a private verification system.

Amendment supporters said this would simply ensure these desperately needed new casino-related jobs will be filled by legal residents and not illegal immigrants.

Amendment opponents argued there are already sufficient federal requirements that companies verify their employees' immigration status.

SCHOOL NEWS

Inclusive Schools Week

Dec. 3-7 marks the 12th Annual Inclusive Schools Week, which is celebrated in classrooms and communities around the world. The week, sponsored by the Inclusive Schools Network, calls attention to the work schools are doing to realize academic achievement and success for all children. This year's theme is "2012 –Social Inclusion: More than a Seat in the Class!"

The topic is timely to the Cohasset Public Schools, which is currently working in collaboration with Pamela Ely, of The Ely Center in Newton, Mass. Ely has trained directly with Michelle Garcia Winner (creator of Social Thinking) and brings to the district expertise in Social Cognition.

Cohasset's work with Ely supports teachers in addressing the social pragmatic, executive functioning and sensory integration needs of students within their general education settings.

"It's all about making the school community more aware of the social piece of students in the classroom with a disability or a difference."
Lori Villani, Director of Student Services,

This is an important topic that faces all schools in the commonwealth on a daily basis, as school communities continue to expand on resources and knowledge in supporting and providing quality education to an increasingly diverse student population, including students who are marginalized due to disability, gender, socioeconomic status, cultural heritage, language preference, and other factors.

Lori Villani, Director of Student Services, gave a presentation on Special Education during the Wednesday, Nov. 28 School Committee meeting and discussed how best to integrate special ed. with Inclusive Schools Week.

"It's all about making the school community more aware of the social piece of students in the classroom with a disability or a difference," Villani said during her school board presentation. The initiative is "really inclusive of all differences" among students.

Villani will also present at the SEPAC (Special Education Parent Advisory Council) meeting on Tuesday, Dec. 4 at 7 p.m. in the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The presentation is free and open to the public. Light refreshments will be served. Please visit our website www.cohassetsepac.org for more information regarding this and other presentations around the South Shore.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Grateful for JBW support

The South Shore Community Center would like to express our sincere thanks to the many merchants, contributors and volunteers who helped make our annual Jingle Bell Walk a great success! The sun was shining on Cohasset Harbor as Santa, Mrs. Claus, eight Happy Little Elves and Friends cruised across the Harbor to an eager and happy crowd waiting to greet them and mark the official opening of the Holiday Season in Cohasset! Santa and friends boarded a hay wagon for a jingle bell parade through the streets of town, arriving at the Community Center where hot cocoa, coffee and sweet treats were enjoyed by all. The Rusty Skippers Band played holiday tunes and everyone sang along. Storyteller Big Ryan held the children enthralled with his tales, and Santa visited with dozens of children as their families took holiday pictures. Downstairs – families bowled and children made their own holiday ornament to take home and enjoy! Hayrides around Cohasset Common were the perfect way to enjoy the beauty of Cohasset Village.

UPDATE

State Dept. of Revenue conducting review

The state Department Revenue (DOR) has been conducting a management review in Cohasset. So far, the DOR has met with the Governance Committee and the town's financial staff, and has several more meetings scheduled next week, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said during Tuesday's selectmen meeting.

The DOR's recommendations will be compiled in a report that should be released in February. For now, said Milanoski, the review is "ongoing and productive."

High-tech times for commuters

Monthly passes now on smartphones

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

"About 13,000 have already downloaded the app, amounting to more than $54,000 in transactions."
Joe Pesaturo, MBTA spokesman

There's good news for Hingham and other South Shore commuter boat and rail riders.

For the first time, monthly passes for both services are available on smartphones, "marking the latest milestone in mTicketing," said MBTA Spokesperson Joe Pesaturo.

Senior MBTA staff and local elected officials took the 8:20 a.m. morning commuter boat from Hingham to Boston Wednesday morning, Nov. 28 – the first day this feature was offered for the Hingham commuter boat and Greenbush rail line — to promote this new smartphone option. The ferry departed from Hingham at 8:20 a.m. MBTA staff was at the commuter boat dock to answer any questions about mTicketing.

"[This feature] has been wildly successful on the commuter rail lines north of Boston, where it was launched two weeks ago. No more cash or paper tickets needed!" Pesaturo said. "About 13,000 [commuters] have already downloaded the app, amounting to more than $54,000 in transactions."

Individuals who use mTicketing to buy a monthly pass for either service will receive a $10 discount in addition to benefiting from the added convenience. These passes are geared toward commuters who do not use subway or bus service.

More information is available on the MBTA website, including where mobile ticketing can be used and how to purchase it; which services it can be used for; how to handle technical difficulties; what happens if a commuter loses his or her smartphone and buys another one; multiple ticket purchases; what happens if cell phone service is lost while riding the commuter rail or if one's smartphone battery dies before the conductor sees the mobile ticket; and other information.

Gillis, Haggerty brothers torment Hull

"It's a family affair, that's for sure. They will have wonderful Thanksgivings, I'm sure, and sit back and enjoy the day."
Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw

By John R. Johnson
For the Patriot Ledger

The Thanksgiving meal tasted twice as nice at the Haggerty and Gillis residences here.

Junior quarterback Chris Haggerty teamed with older brother Shane for a key reception early in the game, and brothers Tim and Ryan Gillis each played major roles in Cohasset's 54-37 victory over Hull.

The 91 points scored represent a new record in the 26-year-old series, which tilted in Cohasset's favor (13-12-1).

Chris Haggerty was almost perfect on the day, completing 9 of 10 passes for 188 yards and four touchdowns for the Skippers (6-5).

Junior running back Ryan Gillis ran for 138 yards, including a 72-yard touchdown to open the second half. Sophomore back Tim Gillis amassed 111 yards and three TDs. He passed the 1,000-yard mark for the season late in the game.

"It's a family affair, that's for sure," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "They will have wonderful Thanksgivings, I'm sure, and sit back and enjoy the day."

The game didn't look like it was going to go in Cohasset's favor when Hull captain Sonny Hill raced 70 yards on the first play of the game and kicked the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

Cohasset stormed back, though, Chris Haggerty connecting with Shane Haggerty on a 52-yard reception to set up an 8-yard TD run by Tim Gillis.

"One of the biggest question marks on Thanksgiving is whether the kids will come out and perform, or will they get overtaken by the moment," said Afanasiw. "Obviously, Hull came ready to go on that first play. Their seniors used that momentum to their advantage, but we responded in turn and from that moment we executed our game plan very well."

Cohasset pushed its lead to 14-7 when Haggerty found Rocco Laugelle for a 30-yard TD score, and the Skippers led 20-7 after a Haggerty-to-Conor Dooley 1-yard TD pass with 7:43 left in the first quarter.

Haggerty continued to spread the wealth, finding Christian Davis for a 4-yard TD pass and a 27-7 edge.

The Pirates (4-7) finally made some noise when senior quarterback Mack Murphy hit Hill with a 46-yard scoring pass to pull within 27-13. Hull couldn't sustain the momentum, allowing Tim Gillis to score from a yard out for a 34-13 halftime edge.

The Pirates suffered a major blow when they lost senior captain and two-way lineman Bobby Spitz with a knee injury. The Pirates had trouble stopping the Cohasset run after that, allowing a 72-yard scoring run by Ryan Gillis and a 9-yard TD run by Tim Gillis in the second half. Haggerty added a TD toss to Ryan Gillis.

Hull scored three times in the second half, with Murphy hitting junior receiver Michael Warren for an 8-yard score, Murphy scoring on a 1-yard keeper, and senior Jon Young scoring from 2 yards out.

GIMME SHELTER

Francis wants a home for the holidays

PAULA J. FATERSIK

What would be the perfect gift for Francis? Well, a warm and loving home for the holidays would be a wonderful start! This handsome guy came to us just a few weeks ago and has such a great personality. Francis is very affectionate and being in the shelter is a little difficult for him as he was used to love and attention in his former home and we know he misses that so much.

Since he started out a little bit timid, it is wonderful to see him coming out now for petting, flopping on the floor with a happy purr and when he gets really comfy, settling in for a belly rub.

This is a really special treat for him and he shows such contentment. Once he knows you, Francis will be right there to greet you when you walk in the door. If he thinks he is being forgotten, he will follow you and ask for love and play.

Francis arrived here a few weeks ago with his 8-year-old mom, Bootsie, who was adopted very quickly, and his brother Patrick. After spending time with his mom, it is easy to see how he turned out so handsome and sweet. His fur is silky black and Francis has an engaging look as he watches you with his stunning, green eyes. Francis seems to speak through those eyes as if he is contemplating and anticipating how soon you will talk to him and get cuddly.

Watching the game? Francis just may be sitting there with you. He really enjoys being attached to his human friends. It would probably be good or him to be an only pet, as he does like to be the center of attention. Okay, he needs to be spoiled. And he deserves that. Certainly, this young man will be a wonderful companion.

Given room to explore a home again, Francis will no doubt get back to his curious and playful self and then later, enjoy sitting in a window watching the world outside. It would be so special for him to have someone to connect with soon.

Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on Francis and our other available cats. Visit us during Open Hours on Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. or Saturday from 2-3 p.m. at 50 L St. in Hull. Our phone number is 781-925-3121 and you can visit: www.hsar.org and view other available pets in our shelter.

You can always order our Kittendales calendars at www.kittendales.com and have them in time for the holidays! Congrats to the winners of our raffle baskets! They were loaded with fabulous items for some very lucky pets.

As always, we are thankful for the continued support and efforts of our volunteers who make it in to the shelter to care for our family of cats and kittens, even on holidays. It is a generous gift and is appreciated by all. There are many other volunteer activities going on and we are very grateful for everyone's efforts.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF DEC. 10, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Start preparing now to make sure you get the credit you're due for all that effort you put in to get that project off the ground. A new challenge emerges after the 15th.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're still charging full steam ahead on the job — and that's fine. But take time to share the joy of preparing for the upcoming holidays with folks you love.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A former detractor resists joining your ranks just yet. Give him or her time to learn more about what you're doing. Meanwhile, devote more time to friends and family.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Be careful not to be goaded into a tiff by someone who might be looking for a fight. Remain cool as you make your exit. Be assured that others will rally to your support.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Kudos on getting the well-deserved Lion's share of the rewards for a job well-done. Now you can take a breather from your workaday duties and spend time with your family.

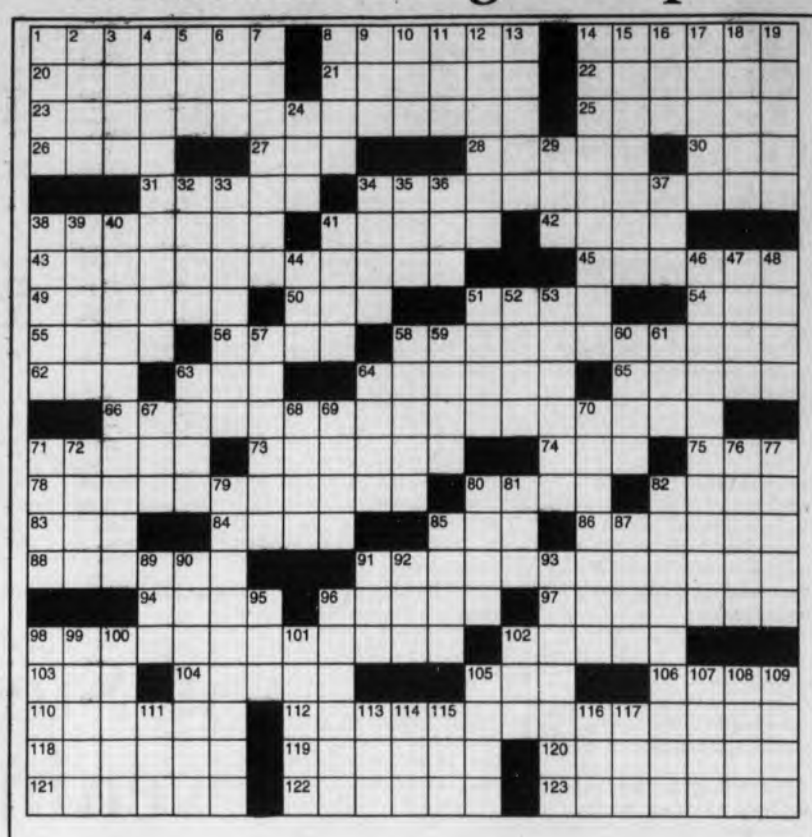
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You enjoy a quick spurt of renewed energy just in time to meet that upcoming deadline. A potentially romantic situation looms. How it develops will be up to you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Watch out for distractions that could cause delays and leave you running twice as fast to finish your work by the 15th. Then go ahead and have fun.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might prefer to work on current tasks on your own. But be open to a potentially useful suggestion from someone who admires you and wants to help.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Avoid rushing full gallop into that volunteer project without knowing what's expected of you. Take things a step at a time as you begin to find your way.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Good news: You should begin to feel more comfortable expressing your emotions. This will go a long way in helping you with that personal situation.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An old friend gives confusing signals. Best advice: Don't assume that things will necessarily work themselves out. Ask questions and demand straight answers.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A new relationship needs time to develop. Be careful not to let your emotions flood your natural sense of caution. Meanwhile, check out that new job offer.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your sense of right and wrong sometimes causes you to come into conflict with others. But you invariably come out ahead.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

St. Stephen's to host evening on Celtic Prayer

Author, preacher and spiritual retreat leader the Rev. Martin L. Smith will lead a workshop on praying with the classic Celtic prayer St. Patrick's Breastplate at 7:30 p.m., on Dec. 10, at St Stephen's Church.

Smith, author of such classics on Christian spirituality as "A Season for the Spirit," "The Word is Very Near You," "Reconciliation" and "Compass and Stars" describes the workshop as an evening for "exploring ways to use our imagination to sense different and complementary ways in which Christ wants to be in our lives [as reflected in the prayer] and to allow them to open new dimensions in our prayer."

For the last decade Smith has lived and served in Washington, D.C., where he served at one of the Episcopal Church's largest parishes, St. Columba's – which happened to be the same church that sponsored the Rev. Margot Critchfield, rector of St. Stephen's, when she discerned a call to the priesthood. "Martin came a few years after I'd gone to seminary, and having read his books I'd always looked up to him as one the great spiritual writers. So when I first met him I was a little intimidated. But he's a very down to earth and funny man." Smith retired this past July to devote himself to his wider ministry of teaching and writing.

Note: This workshop will be the second in a three-part series hosted by St. Stephen's on Monday nights during Advent. On Dec. 3, Rev. Critchfield will lead a workshop on Ignatian Prayer, and on Dec. 17, Gordon Stevenson will lead a workshop on Christian Meditation. All three are open to the public and free of charge.

SUNDAY AUTHOR TALKS

Author shares her journey

Molly Birnbaum will speak at "Sunday AuthorTalks" on Dec. 2, at 4 p.m., at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. She will discuss her recent book, "A Season to Taste," an enchanting celebration of human experience that is at once memoir, narrative, research study, and a paean to food.

In the midst of preparing to matriculate at the prestigious Culinary Institute of America, Birnbaum was hit by a car while jogging. Her severely fractured body eventually healed, but her sense of smell was destroyed, and consequently, her dream of becoming a chef shattered. She dropped her school plans, quit her job, and moved to New York, where she struggled to recreate a map of her life and regain her ability to smell and taste. "A Season to Taste" is her account of this journey.

Birnbaum's blog "My Madeleine," is certain to drive even the most reluctant cook into the kitchen.

A madeleine and wine reception will follow her talk, and her book will be available for purchase. Admission is free, but seating is limited. To ensure reserve a seat either online at cohassetlibrary.org or phone the library at 383-1348 ext 1 or pick up a ticket at the library's circulation desk.

"Sunday AuthorTalks" is sponsored by Dean and Hamilton Realtors and The Cook Estate. Bruce Sinclaire, owner of A Taste for Wine and Spirits, donates the wines for post-talk receptions.

Football for Charity fundraiser held

Membership in the Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club is open to all residents of Scituate and Cohasset.

The Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club knew it wanted to do something to help those in need for the holiday season, so it organized its third annual Football for Charity fundraiser. Knowing that the food pantries in both Scituate and Cohasset were always in need of donations, and that the services they provide to both towns is invaluable, it seemed most fitting that they would be recipients. The Newcomers Club was able to present a check to each of the food pantries for $500 each in November. This is the third year that the Newcomers were able to donate to the pantries, and their hope is that these donations will make getting through the tough holiday season just a little bit easier.

Both the Scituate and Cohasset pantries are volunteer organizations dedicated to assisting needy citizens of Scituate and Cohasset through the provision of food and other necessary staples to residents who demonstrate the need for charitable assistance.

The Scituate Food Pantry operates out of the Masonic Lodge at 344 Country Way and this year volunteers have received requests for Thanksgiving dinners from more than 100 needy families. They are open on Tuesdays from 11 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. and also on the last Tuesday of the month from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

The Cohasset Food Pantry is at St. Anthony Parish Rectory, 129 S. Main St.. Donations to the Cohasset pantry may be dropped off at the Pantry between 9 and 9:30 a.m. on Tuesday s. Donations are always needed and gratefully accepted at both pantries.

Membership in the Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club is open to all residents of Scituate and Cohasset. In addition to raising funds for local charities, the club hosts many social events for individuals and families looking to meet new people and get more involved in their community. Events include Ladies Night Out, Monday Night Football at TK's, dinner outings and children's playgroups. It's a great way to meet new people even if you're not new to town. If interested in joining, or to find out more, visit www.scnewcomers.com.

FOOD PANTRY

Give back this holiday season

The Cohasset Food Pantry is seeking donations and volunteer help this holiday season.

Food Pantry Director Jane Corry said that she could use help from students during school vacation. Students helped out over the summer by running the pantry's table at the Thursday farmers' market each week.

The food pantry will also have a table at next week's Holiday Stroll in the village on Saturday, Dec. 8, from 4 to 7 p.m.

The pantry recently brought a nutritionist on board to provide healthy meals and recipes to families in need. In addition to the usual canned and boxed items, those who come to the food pantry will also occasionally receive fresh produce and a bag with recipes and ingredients to make healthy meals.

On Dec. 18, the pantry will give out dinner boxes, said Corry.

At the moment, any and all donations are appreciated, including money or gift cards. Corry said that the one food item the pantry does not need, however, is pasta. "We need tomato sauce!" she said.

The Cohasset Food Pantry is located at 129 South Main St., in the rear of St. Anthony's rectory. The pantry's mailing address is: P.O. Box 297 Cohasset, MA 02025

The pantry is open every Tuesday morning from 8:30 to 10:30. Donations may be left at the pantry from 9 to 10:30, any Tuesday. They may also be left at any Church in Cohasset on Sunday mornings.

St. Anthony's Parish Center is open to receive donations from 9 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. Monetary donations may be made out to the Cohasset Food Pantry and mailed to the P.O. Box. You can also reach the pantry by email – corryjm@gmail.com – or leave a message on the food pantry line at St. Anthony's: 781-383-0219 ext. 25.

Stop & Shop and Shaw's supermarkets provide donation boxes for the Cohasset food pantry.

The Cohasset Food Pantry serves any resident in need. Anyone seeking assistance may call and speak to a director. Applications must be completed and two forms of identification, a license and proof of residency are required.

Offering High-Quality, High-Value Education

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

The University of Massachusetts Boston was honored last month to host U.S. Under Secretary of Education Martha Kanter, who joined UMass President Robert Caret, our students and community members, and me for a roundtable discussion on college affordability.

Higher education is a priority of the Obama administration, Kanter told our audience, citing President Obama's goal to increase the percentage of college graduates in the United States to the highest of any nation in the world. To do so, she said, the administration is also responding to the growing costs of higher education, which are making many potential students' dreams of college unattainable.

I agree that colleges and universities need to be more accessible to those who wish to further their education. I also agree that the debt load many of today's students graduate with is too great a burden for them.

I am grateful that our students had the opportunity to learn more about this important issue, and I continue to be committed to keeping UMass Boston an accessible, affordable choice for all students.

A full-time undergraduate student who resides in Massachusetts is charged $11,980 each year for tuition and fees at UMass Boston. Most of our students apply for and receive some of the $132 million in financial aid that we distribute each year. Financial aid is awarded on a first-come, first-served basis. To receive maximum financial aid consideration, new students should complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) by March 1.

We are always seeking ways to make UMass Boston even more affordable to students. For example, we continually create new scholarships (such as the Boston City Scholarship, whose inaugural class is currently studying on our campus) and new work-study and paid internship positions for students.

Keeping college accessible for students in this economy is hard work, and I am pleased whenever our institution is recognized for our successes in this area.

Earlier this year, The Princeton Review named UMass Boston one of the 150 "Best Value Colleges" in the country. Ours is the only public institution in Massachusetts named to the list, which consists of schools with excellent academics, generous financial aid, and/or relatively low costs of attendance.

The Princeton Review has also named UMass Boston one of the "Best in the Northeast" for the second year running. The colleges chosen for this list represent the top 25 percent of the nation's 2,500 four-year institutions.

Word on our great value is spreading: at our Open House in October, a record 2,881 prospective students and their families came to our campus to learn more about the excellent education we provide.

If you missed October's Open House, or November's Graduate Showcase, and you'd like to learn more about undergraduate or graduate programs at Boston's only public research university, call 617.287.6000 or visit us online at umb.edu/best_value.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

TMA change up for vote

Moderator to call for secret ballot

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Special Town Meeting is this coming Monday, Dec. 10, starting at 6:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium.

Seven months have passed since the May 12 Annual Town Meeting, and Cohasset has seen plenty of changes since then. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski was two months into his new role as the town's Chief Finance Officer (CFO), taking the helm after former town manager Michael Coughlin was removed without cause after only six months on the job; a Chief Technology Officer to be shared between the town and schools was discussed and eventually hired (Rob Bonell); the town also hired a new Treasurer Collector (Jane Lepardo), Health Agent/Administrator (Felix Zemel), and Director of Project Management and Planning (Brian Joyce).

These decisions led to some controversy and debate, especially as Joyce's position seemingly replace the two positions of former town engineers and assistants to the town manager who were originally hired as consultants to oversee the town's Greenbush rail project, "Greenbush Guys" Mark Brennan and Tom Gruber. The two were laid off by Milanoski in March. Brennan recently filed an age discrimination complaint against the acting town manager (see related story).

Since last Town Meeting, the Board of Selectmen have

Cohasset actor takes center stage

Kevin O'Donnell stars in off-Broadway play

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Knowing that Humphrey Bogart once graced the stage at Town Hall, it's no secret that Cohasset has long had ties to Hollywood. Now, one of Cohasset's own is carrying on the community's performing arts tradition, taking the New York theater world by storm.

Kevin O'Donnell, who spent much of his childhood in Cohasset and graduated from CHS in 1995, is starring in the off-Broadway play "Let's Kill Grandma This Christmas," running now until January 6.

The title may be a bit off-putting, and O'Donnell knows it, but said that it's all in good fun.

"It sounds darker than it is, but it's also pretty funny," O'Donnell said in a phone interview Tuesday, the day after the show's opening night. While the comedic play involves a "Grandma whipping out a gun, and drunken tirades from angry couples trying to kill people," there is a deeper meaning behind the dark humor.

"There's also a message of economic uncertainty this generation is facing right now, that there's no sense of anything getting any better any time soon," said O'Donnell. "The idea is, what choices will people make when they're put up against a wall? Do you maintain your humanity or become an animal and think murderous thoughts?"

Village Stroll

Celebrating the holidays

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

It might not be Christmas just yet, but the village gets into the spirit early with the annual Holiday Stroll. Downtown Cohasset comes to life with holiday decorations, lights, caroling and hayrides.

The stroll, sponsored by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, takes place in the village and along Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) tomorrow (Saturday, Dec. 8), from noon to 7 p.m.

Darilynn Evans, owner of Darilynn's in the village and a board member on the Chamber of Commerce, helps organize the stroll each year (there is also a summer version) and encourages both locals and visitors to come and enjoy the holiday festivities.

"We love to have people in the village and have it look lively and festive and Christmasy," said Evans.

The shop owner and her fellow merchants love to participate in the stroll each year, she said.

"All the merchants enjoy [the stroll]; it's got that small-town feel. It's just the charm of living in Cohasset, being able to have things like this. It's charming, but not commercial; a very hometown, low-key, nice evening. We hope people come out and enjoy the festivities."

The 3A portion of the stroll is from noon to 4 p.m.; the stroll then picks up in the Village and lasts until 7 p.m. The village portion kicks off with the annual parade, featuring Santa Claus and First Parish carolers. A deejay will also spin holiday tunes in the street.

There will also be refreshments and beverages

DID YOU KNOW? By Bob Rankin

Safety rules for pedestrians

Questions

- Do you WALK on the left facing traffic on a road with no sidewalk? (Can others see you? If they don't, you can react and avoid them).
- Do you go to a crosswalk or take a chance that a motorist will see you between cars?

Rules

- State law requires you to use a crosswalk when one is available. If an intersection has a traffic signal, press the button and wait for the WALK signal. Intersections with no push buttons automatically give WALK signals. Be patient!
- Do not cross if the signal says DON'T WALK.
- Before you cross a roadway, stop at the curb, look left, look right, and look left again for traffic. Do this even on a one-way street. Be alert while crossing. Be especially alert at intersections that allow motor vehicles to turn right on red.
- If you must enter the street from between parked cars, stop and look before crossing.
- You must use a sidewalk when one is available. When no sidewalk is available, you should walk on the shoulder facing traffic.
- Never walk along or across expressways, interstate highways, or turnpikes.
- Wear clothing with bright colors or reflective strips, especially at night.

From the MA.RMV Drivers Manual, Rules of the Road, June 2012.

PICTURE THIS

The Mariner caught up with new columnist John McSheffrey at the Town Common this week. You can read John's first column on page 13. If you see John around town, be sure to tell him you saw him in Picture This! PHOTO/MARY FORD

John McSheffrey

Name: John McSheffrey.

Occupation: New Cohasset Mariner columnist; married, father of 2 and business owner.

Best day of your life: (non-family related) Seeing Nelson Mandela speak in Boston only months after he'd been released from prison.

Best vacation: Last year – 3 days in NYC during the Christmas season; it was spectacular for so many reasons.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Favorite junk food (or meal): Sunday morning breakfasts w/ the family at Toast.

Best book: "To Kill a Mocking Bird," by Harper Lee.

Best movie: "All the President's Men," "Airplane" and "The Polar Express 3D" (has to be 3D).

Best TV show: Any Red Sox game.

Best music, group, or artist: The Beatles by a long shot followed by U2 and the Clash.

Pet peeve: Drivers who don't use their blinkers and anonymous nasty bloggers.

Most embarrassing moment: I'm not a big fan of my early gray hair.

Fun fact: in 2011the BBC news program "Witness" did a 10 minute segment about the 2004 Red Sox/Yankees series from my perspective – it was broadcast worldwide.

Goal: To write a monthly piece that makes people think and or smile.

Person you'd most like to meet: I've already met my kids, so I'd say Nelson Mandela.

Biggest worry: Day-to-day work stress.

Best part of Cohasset: I can no longer say Bergson's, so it's a tie between the incredible views and the Music Circus.

Officials talk town dept. reorganization

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski asked the Board of Selectmen to vote to support an initiative he plans to implement in fiscal year 2014: a reorganized town departmental structure.

Milanoski would like to consolidate the multiple town departments into five main sectors: Finance; Public Safety; Permits/Inspection; Facilities, Utilities and DPW; and Human Services. The hope is that this consolidation would coincide with a renovation of Town Hall, Milanoski explained. The Town Hall renovation project will come up during Monday's Special Town Meeting under the Community Preservation Committee article discussion, asking voters to approve spending $75,000 of CPC funds to pay for a study of Town Hall.

While selectmen said they were generally in support of Milanoski's plan to restructure the department, they questioned why he wanted them to vote the matter since overseeing the departmental organization is part of the town manager's job description. Some also felt the discussion was premature.

"I think we should reorganize Town Hall first," said selectman Martha Gjesteby.

The officials were reluctant to approve any changes up front since some of the restructuring could involve new department heads, job title changes, or possible salary increases. Milanoski said that the initiative would not add any new head count to Town Hall. He also explained that if the selectmen voted to support his initiative, they wouldn't be voting to OK the departmental changes; they would be giving him the authority to "endorse this concept, explore it, and come back with recommendations." Selectmen responded that Milanoski already has that authority.

"I'm just looking for some type of concurrence that you're in support of exploring this. It's an important priority that has to be done."
Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski

Selectmen vice chair Diane Kennedy said, "I'm uncomfortable with the motion. I think you know we want you to move along with this course."

Milanoski responded, "I'm just looking for some type of concurrence that you're in support of exploring this. It's an important priority that has to be done."

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson agreed with Milanoski, saying, "I think it's a discussion we have to have."

Carlson asked about making an informal statement of support rather than a motion, while Kennedy said that even if they did approve a restructuring plan, Town Meeting would have the final say before any changes are actually made.

"It [also] has to go through you and Advisory," said Milanoski. "At the end of the day, we may not come up with anything, but right now the structure we have will not survive the next 20 years."

Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore responded that his committee would not have a say on the restructuring, but would only review the plan if dollars are being spent. If consultants are hired to study the matter, that money would likely come out of the Advisory fund, a matter that will be voted on by Town Meeting first.

The selectmen voted 4-1 to endorse Milanoski's plan to explore restructuring options, with Gjesteby voting against it.

POLICE BEAT

92-year-old victim of 'Grandparent Scam'

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

The infamous "grandparent scam" has resurfaced in Cohasset costing a 92-year-old grandfather $2500, police said.

Police said the grandfather, who lives at Sunrise, reported receiving a call around 12:30 p.m. on Wednesday (Nov. 27) from a man who identified himself as "Mr. Douglas," a police official from Mexico City. Douglas told the Cohasset man that his grandson had been speeding and hit a telephone pole and told him that he should wire $2500 to get his grandson out of jail.

The Cohasset man went to Wal-Mart in Hanover and sent a MoneyGram.

The grandfather received a second call on Wednesday (Nov. 28) explaining there was a further issue that the pole his grandson hit had struck a dump truck causing damage and an additional $5,000 was needed. The Cohasset man went to Shaw's to wire the money but called his grandson before doing so. His grandson was not in Mexico City but in his New York City apartment, police said.

The Cohasset man did not wire the $5,000 and notified police.

Police believe that scammers are most likely calling random numbers until they happen to reach a senior citizen. The scammers' usual tactic is to pose as a grandchild and let the unsuspecting grandparent fill in the blanks.

If someone is scammed or thinks there is an attempted scam — they should notify the police right away. Please spread the word to grandparents so they do not become a victim, police said.

Vandalism

Police responded to a report from a 45-year-old Wheelwright Farm woman on Monday (Nov. 26) about damage to her deck. There was a white powdery substance on the deck that the woman believed could be white paint. Police thought it might be dried bird droppings. They said there was no permanent damage and the substance could be washed off with water.

Uninsured

A 52-year-old Cohasset man is being summonsed to court for allowing operation of an uninsured motor vehicle on a public way, police said. An officer conducting radar surveillance on North Main Street near the village at 7:20 a.m. on Friday (Nov. 27) clocked a 1996 Ford Bronco traveling south at 39 mph in a 20 mph zone. The officer stopped the SUV and identified the driver as a 22-year-old Cohasset man, who was cited for speeding. Further investigation revealed that the registration of the vehicle had been revoked for non-payment of insurance. The vehicle belongs to the operator's father who is being summonsed, police said.

Fraud

A 76-year-old Cohasset man went to the police station on Tuesday (Nov. 27) to report he was the victim of credit card fraud. His credit card company did not allow two unauthorized charges ($270 at Sears and a $1000 cash withdrawal attempt), but alerted the cardholder and turned the card off, police said. The resident made the report and received an identity theft packet, police said.

Domestic

Police investigated a domestic incident on Wednesday (Nov. 28) involving an Avalon couple. The wife went to South Shore Hospital with injuries. Police were notified by the hospital, interviewed the woman, and subsequently arrested her husband for domestic assault and battery. He was later arraigned on the charge at Quincy District Court. The state Department of Children and Families (DCF) was notified because there was a young child at home, police said.

Suspended license

A 38-year-old Cohasset man is being summonsed to court for operating with a suspended driver's license, police said. An officer was on patrol at 9:28 a.m. on Wednesday (Nov. 27) when he stopped a white, two-door Tesla (electric sedan) with no license plate. A check on the driver revealed his license was suspended.

The car did not have a Massachusetts plate and the operator could not provide proof of insurance. There was a paper dealer-plate from California that fell down in the back window and was not visible, police said. The insurance and registration status of the car is being investigated.

Road rage

Police sent an operator on his way on Thursday (Nov. 29) at around 6 p.m. on Route 3A with a verbal warning after another motorist had reported him as driving erratically. Police said the two motorists had been involved in an apparent road rage incident involving flashing high beams.

Fraud

Police are investigating a letter received by a Cohasset woman offering her two free, first-class plane tickets anywhere in the world on American Airways. The woman recognized the offer as a potential scam and brought the letter to police. Detectives are following up. Police said the woman did the right thing by bringing the letter to their attention.

Rear-ended

Police responded to a two-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) and Pond Street on Friday (Nov. 30) at 5:14 p.m. Police said a 2008 Jeep Grand Cherokee, operated by a 55-year-old Hull woman, had stopped at the light when the Jeep was rear-ended by a 2000 Ford sedan, operated by a 29-year-old Weymouth man. Neither vehicle was towed; there were no reported injuries. The Weymouth man was cited for following too closely, police said.

Unlocked cars

A 22-year-old Beechwood Street resident notified police on Monday (Dec. 3) at 6:45 a.m. that his two unlocked motor vehicles were gone through overnight. Cohasset and area towns have seen a rash of break-ins to unlocked motor vehicles. Police ask that residents lock their cars in their driveways.

Altercation

Police responded to a local business last Wednesday (Nov. 21) around 10:30 a.m. Upon arrival a 17-year-old employee, whose neck was red from apparently having been grabbed, refused medical attention and would not cooperate with the investigation. Apparently there was a physical altercation between him and another male who came into the business and grabbed him by the neck. Police are checking the video surveillance to try and get more information.

Warrant article overview

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Article 1: Expand Sewer District to include the proposed Senior Center (indefinitely postponed)

This article, which concerns the expansion of the town's sewer district to include the proposed senior center, was indefinitely postponed. According to Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, the article is being postponed on recommendation from Town Counsel due to additional legal concerns. Adding the as-yet-to-be-built center to the town sewer would require a Home Rule Petition with the state legislature. The article could be ready for the spring's Annual Town Meeting instead. The legalities do not concern the senior center building project itself, but only the sewer connection.

Article 2: Unpaid bills from previous years

This asks Town Meeting to vote on paying for unpaid bills from previous fiscal years that were not paid for in the fiscal year they were originally received in; this includes a few fire department bills for electrical work and CPR equipment and a few bills from the water department's previous operator, American Water, that were billed at the beginning of the new fiscal year in July instead of in the previous fiscal year. The water department got a new operator, Woodward and Curran, this past spring.

The Water Commission, Advisory Committee and Board of Selectmen all voted unanimously to recommend this article on the Town Meeting floor.

Article 3: Supplemental appropriations for Fiscal Year 2013

This asks Town Meeting to vote on additional funds to be drawn from taxation and the town's general revenue to be added to the town manager's fiscal year 2013 budget. These supplemental appropriations were discussed at length during last Thursday's Advisory Committee, during which chairman Peter Pescatore explained that he and Milanoski went over the figures with a fine-tooth comb before deciding on final numbers. The article asks for $8,000 to pay for professional services, namely paying financial consultant Eric Kinsherf for work he did on the water-sewer capital project.

This article also deals with the Police and Fire department's overtime expenses, which are due to structural staffing problems, as both Deputy Police Chief William Quigley and Fire Chief Robert Silvia have explained at selectmen and Capital Budget meetings. Both public safety departments are dealing with manning issues while working to fill vacant positions.

Another item of interest in this article: $50,000 for legal services. Milanoski confirmed that these monies are being transferred out of the police department's personnel line item as a result of the departure of Police Chief Mark DeLuca, whose contract with the town will not be renewed when it expires at midnight on Jan. 24, 2013.

Both the selectmen and Advisory voted unanimously to recommend this article.

Article 5: Community Preservation Committee report and recommendations

This article presents four different projects that could be funded with CPC monies, which come from a 1.5 percent surcharge on Cohasset property taxes with some level of state match. The CPC is an outgrowth of the Community Preservation Act (CPA), a 10-year-old law that set the stage to increase the amount of historical preservation, open space, affordable housing, recreational facilities, and other community enrichment projects. There are currently 148 communities in Massachusetts that have adopted the CPA.

The CPC is asking Town Meeting to vote for:

- $260,000 to construct the Sailing Club's new clubhouse on Government Island;
- $75,000 for a study to explore reconstruction options for Town Hall
- $25,000 to fix a dilapidated, nearly 50-year-old fence at Milliken Field;
- $37,113 to help pay to restore floors at the Historical Society's Pratt Building.

Each of these items gets a separate vote. The selectmen, Capital Budget and Advisory committees all voted unanimously to recommend the first two projects, while they were somewhat split on the latter two; while Capital Budget voted unanimously in favor of repairing the ball field fence, Advisory voted 8-1 and selectmen 4-1. Capital Budget did not opine on the floor restoring project, but selectmen approved it unanimously while Advisory was once again divided on the issue.

Article 6: Allocation of funds for one-time cost

This article identifies five potential ways to divvy up the near-$1 million in Free Cash certified by the state Dept. of Revenue (DOR). These are one-time costs and cannot be added into the town's annual operational budget. If approved by Town Meeting, much of the money will go into the town's stabilization and reserve funds.

"The finances of the town are in good shape, and we're making the appropriate investments in the infrastructure and our stabilization reserve funds for the long-term financial health of the community," Milanoski explained in a phone call Wednesday.

The acting town manager's recommendations for usage of the free cash are as follows:

- Nearly $500,000 would go into the Stabilization fund (both Advisory and selectmen approved this notion unanimously);
- $100,000 would go into the trust fund to help pay for the $32 million liability the town owes for Other Post-Employment Benefits (OPEB); Advisory and selectmen are also unanimously in favor of this;
- $250,000 to put toward the Chief Technology Officer's town-wide IT plan; while there has been some discussion on whether or not this is a capital expenditure, Milanoski explained that it is only a one-time cost and therefore qualifies for use of free cash; Capital Budget and selectmen voted unanimously in support;
- $90,000 to pay for consulting and professional services; the use of the funds seemed vague, so it was decided during the Advisory committee that the board would be the watchdogs of these monies. Finance Director Mary Gallagher said that this means Advisory would have to sign off on every invoice and approve any expenditure of these funds; while the selectmen voted 5-0 to OK this, Advisory voted 6-1;
- $20,000 to cover the costs for professional services and construction of a sewer line connecting the Light Keepers House to the municipal sewer; both Advisory and selectmen voted unanimously to support this item.

Article 12: Amendment to Water Enterprise Fund FY '13 budget

This article sparked some debate during Tuesday night's selectmen meeting. While the Water Commission voted 2-1 to lower water rates, selectman Fred Koed was concerned that the cut would only truly benefit the biggest users in town. Water Commission chair Peter DeCaprio explained that the Water Department has a surplus in their current fiscal year budget, and that money should be returned to the ratepayers.

"There's almost three-quarters of a million dollars in surplus," said DeCaprio. "We should return the money to our customers until we need it."

Water commissioner Leonora Jenkins voted against lowering rates, however. "I don't feel we should do rate reductions at this time; our recovery charge does not cover what our debt is," she explained, adding that she preferred having the water department focus on capital projects "I'm not comfortable until we see where we really are and prefer more concrete numbers."

DeCaprio countered, "We have more than enough money to cover our capital needs."

Koed asked if the water commission would be willing to do a rate study, and DeCaprio said he'd be happy to. Selectmen vice chair Diane Kennedy, meanwhile, said that she was in favor of lowering the rates: "That's what people want."

Advisory chair Peter Pescatore said that he objected due to a process issue, since the rate reduction was not added to Article 12 until late Tuesday afternoon, a little less than a week before Special Town Meeting. "It would be great if changes to the motion were redlined, but I missed it completely."

The selectmen voted 4-1 in favor of the rate reduction, but Advisory has not voted on that piece of the article yet. The water commission was split 2-1 on reducing the rates but voted 3-0 to approve the rest of the amended budget.

Article 13: Lease of town property for the use of a solar energy array—water plant

Article 13 concerns the AEC's initiative to lease the water plant site to a vendor for the installation of solar arrays. In previous town meetings, voters already approved the lease of two other town sites – the Middle-High School roof and the town's capped landfill on 81-91 Cedar Street – for the installation of solar panels. This article is merely asking Town Meeting to add the water plant as an additional site to the RFP they're planning to publish. The Water Commission is onboard with this idea, reportedly looking for more ways to save money; this would allow them to utilize their assets to realize electricity savings.

An RFP has not yet been published, but the AEC, along with the school department, is ready to move forward. The costs of the project are not yet known, but the only way to realize the costs, according to AEC co-chair Tanya Bodell, is to go through the RFP process. If solar panels do not turn out to be an economically viable option for the town, the AEC will not go through with the project and could explore other alternative forms of energy to help the town save money.

Bodell wrote the following in an email to the Mariner this week:

"After receiving permission at last year's Town Meeting to enter into a long-term lease for the landfill and school roofs, the Alternative Energy Committee has been hard at work developing the competitive RFP process and associated project contracts over the next couple weeks. As part of this process, the Alternative Energy Committee identified another potential site owned by the town for potential inclusion in the RFP — the Water Plant land. Given that the Water Plant is the second largest consumer of electricity in Cohasset, it would be fitting to place a solar energy array on the site to help reduce costs. The Alternative Energy Committee proposes to include the Water Plant site in the RFP, and is requesting permission from the Town to allow the Water Commission to enter into a long-term lease for the site for purposes of development of a solar energy array. Inclusion of a third site increases the probability of success and the ability to find the most economic sites the town has to offer."

All of the boards that reviewed this article – Capital Budget, Water Commission, Advisory and selectmen – voted unanimously to support it.

Article 14: An Act to amend the Cohasset Town Manager Act

Article 14 is perhaps one of the most controversial on the STM docket and will be voted for by secret ballot: the proposal to change the language in the Town Manager Act, which was enacted in 1997, and thus open the door for town employees or town officials to become a permanent Town Manager, recommended by the town's Governance Committee. Currently, in the Act, a town official must vacate their position for an entire year before being allowed to take the top job; if voted by Town Meeting, the act's wording been trying to extend Milanoski's employment contract with the town, which expires on June 30, 2013. While the board voted to keep him onboard until 2015, they have run into a few legal "snags" preventing them from making him a permanent Town Manager and have been working with Town Counsel to find potential solutions.

The town's current Town Manager Act, which was enacted in 1997, prevents town employees and elected and/or appointed officials from taking the helm as a permanent town manager, although they can serve as acting for a period of time (and continue to be renewed every few months). Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said when Milanoski was appointed as acting in March that since Milanoski had served on town committees (he chaired the Governance Committee for a few months in late 2011 and early 2012, and was an associate member of the Conservation Commission starting in the summer of 2011), he was exempt from becoming a permanent town manager. This is a problem for a majority of the selectmen, who feel Milanoski is doing a good job and would like to keep him employed.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said during last Thursday's Advisory meeting, and repeated at Tuesday's selectmen meeting, that he would personally rather hire someone they know to be town manager rather than conduct a search and bring in an outsider.

"The board already voted four to one – a super majority – to keep Michael Milanoski onboard till 2015," said Carlson. "I doubt many good candidates would apply... given our enthusiastic review of Milanoski." Carlson further stated that past town manager searches "have not worked out," and "you never know a person as well as you may think. This is why companies often promote from within. It's better to stay with Michael Milanoski rather than take a gamble on an unknown."

Meanwhile, the town's Governance Committee, which was appointed and charged by the selectmen to review the Town Manager Act (TMA), town bylaws, and all town boards and committees and consists largely of members of the former town manager search committee, has made some recommendations regarding the TMA. The language change they've proposed would make it so that only selectmen are barred from becoming town managers, and even a selectman could take the job after vacating their position for 15 months. Currently, the Act says in section 3 (i) that no "person holding elective or appointive office in town" may be appointed as town manager, unless he or she has left their other position for at least a year.

"I decided to use the secret ballot because I understand that more than a handful of people have expressed concern about voting in public, given that the amendment may directly affect the eligibility of the acting town manager to be considered for the town manager role."

Town Moderator, Dan Evans

The proposed change to the TMA is detailed in Article 14, which will be voted for by secret ballot. The Town Moderator, Dan Evans, explained why he felt a secret ballot was necessary for this article: "Secret ballot may be used at moderator's discretion, or may be required by a majority of voters present at the meeting. I decided to use the secret ballot because I understand that more than a handful of people have expressed concern about voting in public, given that the amendment may directly affect the eligibility of the acting town manager to be considered for the town manager role."

While the majority of the GC pushed for this change, chair Christine Cunning told the Mariner last month that they were "agnostic" as to whether or not this change needed to be voted on at this fall town meeting, or whether it could wait for spring.

Other items of interest on the docket Monday include divvying up the nearly $1 million in Free Cash certified by the Dept. of Revenue earlier this fiscal year. The potential use for these funds will be dealt with in detail in Article 6.

Another subject that has garnered some controversy around town is a zoning bylaw change that would allow the possibility of a veterinary clinic being built in the business district on King Street along Route 3A. Town Meeting will be asked to amend a bylaw that deals with veterinarian hospitals and their buffer zone to residential homes. However, voting the bylaw change through will not guarantee the clinic will be built, but will rather allow the Zoning Board of Appeals to review the project; under the current bylaw, the board cannot consider the project.

While the warrant is relatively small, with 15 articles altogether, some of the subject matters are weighty and controversial. There has even been discussion on whether some of these matters, particularly the Town Manager Act and zoning bylaw changes, are "heavy hitters" better left to Annual Town Meeting.

Officials were also taken to task by townspeople who felt that the 6:30 p.m. start time is disrespectful to commuters and that the Dec. 10 disregards those who celebrate Hanukkah. One of the reasons for the earlier start time (town meetings typically start at 7 p.m. when they fall on a week night) was due to a new Recreation Dept. drop-off program for kids, featuring pizza and games. Officials were unable to change the town meeting date in order to accommodate the holiday, but have discussed having an earlier fall town meeting in October or November next year.

Despite some contentious articles, Milanoski said that for the most part, the various town boards that reviewed the warrant articles at length – the selectmen, Advisory, and Capital Budget committees – are in accord when it comes to their recommendations.

"All of the items have been vetted and reviewed by all the appropriate committees, and the majority if not all of the articles have been voted overwhelmingly in support of," said Milanoski.

Read on for a more in-depth look at several of the Special Town Meeting articles. The warrant has been mailed to residents, and the Town Manager's motions (complete with committee votes on whether or not to recommend each article) is available to view on the town website: http://www.cohassetmass.org/.

WARRANT

will change the word "person" to "selectmen," exempting only members of the Board of Selectmen from becoming Town Manager. The language change will also up the time of absence from 12 months to 15, lasting for an entire election cycle. Many townspeople have expressed concern that this article is being expedited in order to resolve Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski's current employment contract with the town, which expires in June 2013. Critics have said that the selectmen are trying to amend the law to keep Milanoski onboard when they should be opening up the position with a national search. Selectmen chair Paul Carlson explained the article to the Advisory Committee last week, who ultimately voted in favor of sending the article to STM to let Town Meeting decide. However, Adv. Chair Peter Pescatore said that while he's in favor of letting Town Meeting vote on the article, and acknowledged that Milanoski has done a good job as Acting Town Manager, he dislikes the process and worries that it "looks bad" for political reasons.

Despite the controversy, the Advisory Committee voted 6-2 to recommend the article at Town meeting, while the Board of Selectmen voted 4-1.

Article 15: Zoning bylaw amendment

A proposal for a walk-in dog clinic at 240 King Street (across from Stop & Shop, next to Smith Appliance) was initially brought before the Zoning Board of Appeals by local veterinarian Dr. Fawn Stevenson, but was withdrawn without prejudice due to complications with an old zoning bylaw. The language in the bylaw lists veterinary practices in the "agricultural" category, referring to livestock and other large animals. The current bylaw requires a 200-foot buffer zone between the practice and neighboring residences.

Stevenson has purchased the property there and is hoping to open a clinic more akin to a pet spa than a kennel or hospital. The proposed project is similar to her current practice, Crazy Paws, which is located in the James Brook Crossing shopping center along Ripley Road.

The Planning Board voted 4-1 to recommend the bylaw change, which would redefine veterinary hospitals, practices, and pet grooming facilities in the town bylaw to create a distinction between livestock and household pets.

However, abutters are troubled by the proposed bylaw change, which they have argued affects the many while benefiting the few. Dawn Peterson, who lives next door to where the clinic would be, has appeared before the Planning Board and selectmen to explain how eliminating the 200-foot buffer zone in the bylaw would leave only a 17-foot buffer between her home and a facility that could house dogs overnight. Fellow abutter Kevin O'Donnell supported Peterson's position, calling the proposed change unfair.

As none of the proponents for the bylaw change attended Tuesday's selectmen meeting to discuss the warrant article, the board voted 0-5 in support of the article; in other words, the selectmen will not be recommending this article on the floor of Town Meeting.

Voting in favor of the article on Monday would not guarantee that Stevenson's clinic will be built, however; it will only allow her to reapply for a permit with the ZBA.

COHASSET REC

Babysitting program offered at Town Meeting

On Monday, Dec.10th your kids will be begging you to go to Town Meeting when they find out that Cohasset Recreation Department has an All-Star team waiting just for them. Kevin Dykas will be there with his town-wide famous dance party, along with Strong Kids' own Kelly Grech and Marie Dunkelberger of R.I.S.E. with games and fun; as well as Toddler time and crafts with Linda Bolster. For only $5, including pizza, this offering by the Recreation Department is definitely something that is expected to get a YES vote by parents.

"We're offering this babysitting service so that parents who might not ordinarily be able to attend a nighttime meeting are able to do so," said Ted Carroll, Director of Cohasset Recreation Department. "We want to make it as easy as possible for everyone to participate in Town government, for themselves, and for the youngest generation of residents."

Town Meeting starts at 6:30 p.m. in the Cohasset High School Auditorium. The Recreation Department program has a check in of 6:15 p.m. in the foyer outside the High School Gym and activities will take place in the cafeteria, multipurpose room and the gym. This program is for Toddlers to 5th graders. Pre-registration by 5 p.m. on Monday night to guarantee a spot.

Register NOW at cohassetrec.com This is not a school sponsored event.

Historical Soc. Wassail Party

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its annual Wassail Party from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday Dec. 9, in the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St. The community is invited to join the Society members and friends in celebrating the holiday season with light refreshment, the Wassail Bowl, and friendly conversation.

The tradition of the "Wassail" is thought to date back to an old English practice of going door to door, singing carols and receiving a measure of drink and a wish for good health in return. Other sources attribute "Wassailing" to the ritual of serenading the trees in the apple orchard in hopes of stimulating a good harvest in the next year. Whatever the history, the Cohasset Historical Society wishes all 'Good Health' and prosperity for this holiday season and into the New Year.

Holiday thoughts

Hi there Cohasset....how is everyone? I know that I am a little up and down mood-wise this week with the changes in the weather as well as the hectic pace that seems to have picked up as the month progresses. I am going to remind us all (myself included) to make sure to slow down enough to reflect on the season, the true meaning of it all and the magical beauty that surrounds us in both large and small ways. Whether you celebrate Hanukkah, Christmas, Kwanzaa...have huge celebrations or small or like and have Elves that are part of your families daily routine for a few weeks or not, remember that each day and each moment you create and celebrate now, are what makes and carries the traditions and memories for years and generations to come. Happy Holidays friends!

BC High news

Andrew Fontaine and Trevor Schramn of Cohasset, seniors at Boston College High School, helped Boston Housing Authority employees feed poor families this past Thanksgiving.

Fontaine and Schramn are members of "The Model of Leadersip" class at the school, which started a school-wide two-week food and money drive in early November. On Nov. 19, the young men held a collection ceremony in the BC High gym where all the money and food were gathered from the various homerooms.

The young men with their Models of Leadership class then went to the Boston Housing Authority and helped sort the food and learned about the BHA and section 8 housing. The BHA employees and the 17 BC High students were the sole providers in feeding more than 300 families.

Irish Dance

On November 16th, Madeline Ronzoni, an 8th grader at the Cohasset Middle School, competed in the 2012 New England Regional Championships of Irish Dance held in Providence, R.I. placing 2nd overall in the Girls Under 13 group, making her the top placing dancer from Massachusetts in her age group. In doing so, Madeline once again qualified for the world championships at the regional level.

Earlier this year in July, Madeline qualified for worlds at the national level when she placed 15th at the North American Irish Dancing Championships held in Chicago, Ill.

The 2013 World Irish Dancing Championships will be held in Boston at the Hynes Convention Center this coming March. This will be Madeline's fourth straight year of competing on the world stage, as she previously competed in the 2012 world championships held Belfast, Northern Ireland, the 2011 world championships held in Dublin, Ireland, and the 2010 world championships held in Glasgow, Scotland. Also at the international level, Madeline competed in the 2011 All Ireland Championships held in Killarney where she placed 34th. Madeline has been dancing with the Dunleavy Shaffer School of Irish Dance in Norwell for the past seven years.

The last Cohasset Café of the season will be held on Monday, Dec. 10 from 9 to 11 a.m. at Cohasset Lightkeeper's. Sponsored by The Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs, café is a casual environment where seniors drop in and socialize. The Friends are pleased to announce that for the first time, Café will resume for the winter, starting Jan. 7. During the winter months, Café will be held at the Our World Children's Museum behind the Paul Pratt Library each Monday. Here are some more senior events for all to enjoy.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

LIFE AT CHS

Sharing with 8th-grade parents

WHITNEY MALONE

Seniors Bobby Nahill and Charlotte Barszewski each shared their experiences at CHS, highlighting that students' participation is never bound to one given sport or extracurricular club.

Last weekend, CHS's production of The Drowsy Chaperone could not have gone better! I hope you all were able to attend (and enjoy!) the performance. Having been the last school musical for the juniors and seniors, this experience and the bonds that have formed throughout it are memories we will hold forever as we move on from CHS. Certainly, we look forward to seeing the current underclassmen's show in two years!

Monday night, high school students spoke to eighth-grade parents at High School Curriculum Night. Seniors Bobby Nahill and Charlotte Barszewski each shared their experiences at CHS, highlighting that students' participation is never bound to one given sport or extracurricular club; it is common for Cohasset students to be invested in sports and academic clubs, like Math Team or Model United Nations, as well as the Arts, Concert Band, or Chorus. Bobby, Charlotte, and the other high school students answered individual questions from parents about specific courses, such as AP classes, and suggested that students take advantage of the atypical courses offered at CHS, such as Principles of Finance or Jazz Theory.

This week, the Debate and Math Teams had their monthly competitions against local high school teams. The Debate team competed in Old Rochester on Wednesday and the Math Team competed in Scituate on Thursday.

Next Friday, the CHS Concert Band and Chorus will be excused from class for the annual Holiday Music Tour. Every year, we look forward to playing our favorite holiday music for those at the Joseph Osgood School, the Deer Hill School, and Linden Ponds, and it certainly puts us in the holiday spirit!

Whitney Malone is a senior at Cohasset High; her column runs weekly during the school year.

GIMME SHELTER

PAULA J. FATERSIK

This week, we have a special cat for you to meet whose story brings us some sad, yet hopeful, feelings. It is so difficult when a pet owner has to relocate and their companion is not allowed to join them due to different property rules. Molly has just found herself separated from the woman who loved her for her first 3 years. No one wants to lose their best friend, but sometimes we cannot control changing situations in our lives. Coming into a communal space and new territory, with strange cats around her, is somewhat intimidating for Molly but she is doing her best to make friends.

This young girl certainly has become our little friend. Everyone in the shelter can tell you that Molly is a wonderful little feline. COURTESY PHOTO

This young girl certainly has become our little friend. Everyone in the shelter can tell you that she is a wonderful little feline. Just 3 years old, Molly is simply beautiful with the most amazingly, soft fur. She must have enjoyed some loving brushing and TLC. The combination of tortoiseshell and white fur is very pretty and she has the cutest tuft of white fur at the tip of her tail. Those gorgeous green eyes, long, white whiskers and mittens and a silky, white bib make her stand out in the room.

Molly is small to medium in size and very friendly. She loves to play and while chasing toys will pop up through the opening of the cat tree engaging you with whimsical antics. She does want to do all of the fun things that kittens do, but not being in her familiar territory, it is a little hard for her. Young and beautiful, Molly is certainly a wonderful choice for a person or family looking for a new companion and family member.

Molly loves to play and while chasing toys will pop up through the opening of the cat tree engaging you with whimsical antics.

With the holidays approaching, we all know that people are busier than ever. It is such a hectic time for everyone with hours of shopping for gifts and toys and decorations. Maybe there are some families out there who might be interested in giving one special gift. The gift of a home for a very deserving animal. This is the wish of every kitten and cat that we care for here at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue. They watch us, their caregivers, everyday, play and eat, sleep and then dream. It is a dream we hope becomes a reality for each of them. A forever home.

We are hoping that many of our residents here find that special family or person, and we are here, ready to introduce you to them. Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on Molly. Visit us during Open Hours on Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. or Saturday from 2-3 p.m. at 50 L St. in Hull. Our phone number is 781-925-3121 and you can visit: www.hsar.org to view other available pets at our shelter. Just a quick note, the shelter will not hold Open Hours on Monday, 12/24, so that volunteers can spend time with their families.

Last weekend, St. Nicholas United Methodist Church in Hull held their annual gift fair and we were happy to have many people stop at our table and purchase the 2013 Kittendales calendar. Your support is appreciated by everyone who works and volunteers here at HSAR. It is available at www.kittendales.com, at the shelter, and at Toast on Nantasket AveNUE as well. A lot of volunteers worked hard and had fun in the production of this edition and we are hoping that many more are purchased for the pet lovers in your family.

We continue to be very thankful to those of you who come to the shelter with donations and supplies for our kittens and cats. Canned food, senior diet, clay litter, toys, clean linens and office supplies are always needed. It is such a wonderful feeling to see people at our door with these items and shows the generous spirit of our neighbors, friends and supporters. Our mission is to care for our animals and provide them with the best medical care we can, a warm, temporary home and loving attention for the duration of their time here. You make all the difference.

CASP CORNER

All about the giving!

'Tis the season . . And the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project is all about the giving!

First of all, we give thanks for all of those who shared in our Village Fair activities last Saturday. Lots of eager children came through the Secret Room at St. Stephen's Church. One grandfather observed, "it was so cute to see the eagerness and pride on my granddaughter's face when she came out of there with the wrapped presents she had purchased for her mother."

Santa was also busy listening to the lists (some lengthy!) offered by the children coming to see him. Although the weather chased him indoors (2nd Congregational Church), the snow outside added to the seasonal atmosphere created by all the activities around the Common.

CASP continues in the giving spirit as they get together this Sunday evening for a gift-wrapping party. Each of the 13 crews who traveled to Appalachia last summer will gather to wrap presents especially purchased for the families they worked for. Judy Ritts, co-founder of CASP recalls, "it's always such a great time, getting back together with our crews and reminiscing about our time in Appalachia helping our families. And a chance to make their holidays maybe a little brighter, too."

As they take a break for the holidays, their next meeting will be on Sunday, January 27th. For volunteers and their parents, this "Orientation Session" will include detailed information about next summer's trip and answer any questions that may come up.

Holiday Stroll caroling is Dec. 8

Hey there, Songsters! For the 10th straight year, First Parish Church in Cohasset is sponsoring a Holiday treat for young and old — on Saturday, Dec. 8th.

Everyone is welcome! This is a community event for young and old, especially those with school-age children, in conjunction with the Holiday Stroll. Bring some friends! Exceptional singing voices are NOT required; Allegra Martin, backed by the "world-renowned" First Parish Choir, will lead us in a medley of familiar and simple carols — and we'll have songbooks for everyone.

Participants will meet in front of Darilynn's store on Main Street around 4:45 to enjoy hot cocoa, hot cider and cookies (cookie donations will be much appreciated) — look for Jim Hamilton's antique Jeep. We'll then do our singing for about 30 minutes.

Come join your friends for an old-fashioned holiday get-together, and pass the word! The more the merrier! For further information contact Darilynn Evans (383-1002) or Woody Chittick (383-3215).

available at several participating vendors throughout town. Participating merchants in both the Village and on 3A will be marked with balloons.

While time-honored traditions will still be upheld, such as cookie decorating at French Memories and caroling at Darilynn's, there are a few new additions this year.

Many merchants will take part in the new wreath-decorating contest and auction; each store will decorate a wreath, which will be on display for auction throughout the stroll. Proceeds from the auction will benefit the Cohasset Food Pantry. The wreaths, bedecked with starfishes and bows, were purchased from the METCO Program.

Also new this year: a gingerbread house decorating contest at the Red Lion Inn, featuring prizes for various categories. Registration for the contest costs $10; forms are available at Santi Holistic Healing.

Popular coffee stop Starbucks is a new sponsor this year and will be serving up hot cocoa by the Cohasset Food Pantry's table.

Also, Dr. Shelli Manuel, who showcases artwork and more at her Harps, Tea and Me gallery in the James Brook Crossing center, will host a special tea and lunch from noon to 3 p.m., along with an open house to showcase student artwork. The open house will last until 6:30 p.m.

The tree in front of Pilgrim Bank will have a patriotic theme once again this year; Ann Marie Goff is placing laminated cards featuring the names of Cohasset men and women who are serving or have served in Afghanistan and Iraq. The tree will also be decked out with yellow ribbons and miniature flags.

The stroll also features an impressive ice sculpture displayed on Depot Court, hayrides, and much more fun for the whole family.

ACTOR

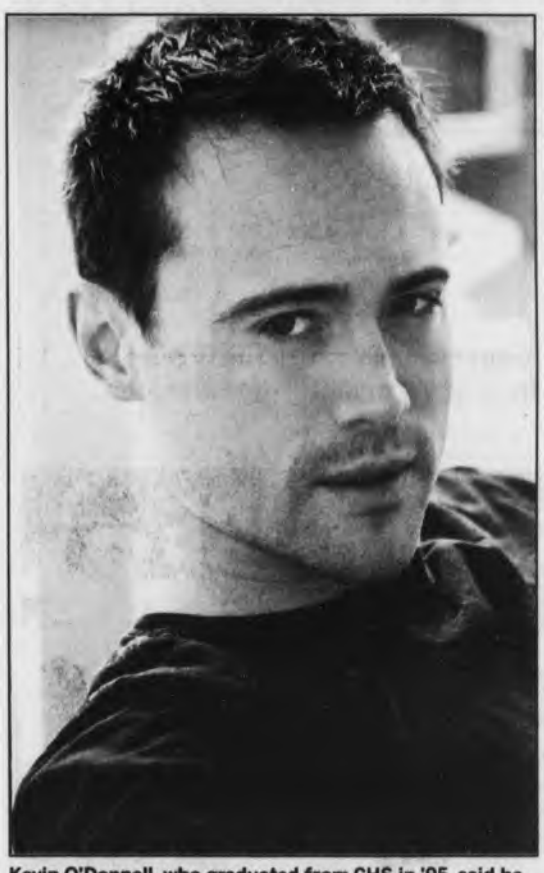
The characters of "Let's Kill Grandma..." do the latter, explained the actor, albeit in a humorous way.

"I think the structure is amazing, and the characters [resemble], if not someone you know, you may recognize yourself."

O'Donnell, 35, has been making a name for himself in the acting community over the past decade. The actor, who was born in Quincy and lived in Randolph before moving to Cohasset at age nine, studied creative writing at Emerson College in Boston but always felt a calling to the stage.

"I was a drama kid in high school," O'Donnell recalled, but in college, he also played in a band and honed his writing skills. "I wanted to be [writer-actor-director] Quentin Tarantino," he joked. "There were a million things I wanted to go into... but I always knew what my main calling would be."



To fulfill a course requirement, O'Donnell enrolled in an "acting for non-majors" class; it wasn't long before his teacher pulled him aside and told him he should pursue acting as a career. After a brief stint as a newspaper reporter in Somerville following graduation, O'Donnell auditioned for Juilliard and got in; he moved to NYC at the age of 22 and hasn't looked back.

Now, in addition to pursuing acting roles onstage and onscreen, O'Donnell puts his writing degree to good use, from playwriting to writing TV pilots. Currently, O'Donnell is working on a pilot for Fox with his long-time writing partner, Justin Swain, whom he met at Emerson. The two moved to New York together as twenty-somethings to pursue their career goals and have worked together ever since.

O'Donnell joked that he and Swain have tried to become the next "Affleck-Damon," after a certain multi-hyphenate (actor-writer-director-producer) duo that came out of Boston and took Hollywood by storm. "That has yet to happen, but we're still plugging away."

The team has created "Gloucester," a TV pilot about the North Shore fishing community that O'Donnell said stays true to the fisherman's side of the story. "It's a very independent look at fishermen... The main character is a fisherman. People think these guys are destroying the environment, but there's more to it than that; it's political. There's a lot more to it than meets the eye."

The town of Gloucester was chosen for its historical significance, O'Donnell explained. "We know the history of it and know the North Shore; it goes back to before this country was independent. Gloucester has always been a fishing community."

Kevin O'Donnell, who graduated from CHS in '95, said he was "a drama kid" while growing up in Cohasset schools.

For O'Donnell, the ascent to leading-man status in the entertainment industry is in his blood; his brother, Liam, lives in L.A and works as a screenwriter. The two often exchange scripts and ideas.

While O'Donnell said that he could talk about his new pilot all day, he's also excited about his new play, which was written by another Massachusetts native, Brian Gianci. "I think he's a brilliant writer and a very funny guy."

The actor also praised the show's director, John Dapolito. "He did a fantastic job of guiding us and utilizing the comic potential in every moment."

O'Donnell plays "Brett," whom O'Donnell described as "an opportunist."

"He wants to be a writer and is working on a novel, and was recently let go from his job," O'Donnell explains. While Brett's wife holds down a full-time job, he settles into slacker mode and rises at 10 a.m. each morning, "smokes weed, drinks instant coffee, starts writing and plays video games." While Brett has occasional bouts of inspiration from his drug use, he's not really getting anywhere: "He's only written three pages in four months," O'Donnell said.

Brett comes up with a plan and tries to convince his brother-in-law, a struggling father, to kill their grandmother for their inheritance money; and, thus, "hi-jinks ensue."

The show's grandmother is everything but a victim, however. "She's not your typical granny, 'over the river and through the woods' type," said O'Donnell. "She is in her eighties but participated in the sexual revolution and hippie generation and has a libertarian political mindset."

Veteran Broadways actress Roxie Lucas, who has performed in "Damn Yankees," among other shows, plays the gun-toting grandma and "jumped into this role," O'Donnell said.

The show also stars Adam Mucci of HBO's "Boardwalk Empire" as Brett's brother; Katie Webber of "Rock of Ages," "Wicked," "Smash" and "American Idol" fame as Brett's sister-in-law; Brandi Nicole Wilson of "Love Me Tinder" as Brett's wife; and up-and-coming actor James Wirt, whom O'Donnell predicts is "going to be a movie star."

O'Donnell, meanwhile, said that he is playing against type with this role.

"I usually play very intense, sad, damaged men. This guy [Brett] is damaged, but he goes on a journey," the actor explained. "He starts off in a fun, cocky place, but he gets his comeuppance."

And while O'Donnell has leading-man looks, he claimed to be more of a character actor. "I usually play the friend of the leading man that doesn't get the girl," he joked.

For O'Donnell, the ascent to leading-man status in the entertainment industry is in his blood; his brother, Liam, lives in L.A and works as a screenwriter. The two often exchange scripts and ideas.

"He's one of the smartest people I know," O'Donnell said of his brother. "We trust each other with notes and support," although Liam is "very much a sci-fi guy, while I'm more into drama and noir."

And, of course, O'Donnell's parents will be in New York over the holiday season to support their oldest son's latest accomplishment. If the play does well, the show could be extended or even run on Broadway.

"The hope is this show will do really well, but my question is, would people want to see a show called 'Let's Kill Grandma This Christmas' in April?" O'Donnell then quipped, "We could always change it to 'Let's Kill Grandma This Easter' or 'Let's Kill Grandma This Fourth of July.'"

OUR VIEW

Ancient history

The title of this editorial was inspired by Tom Killilea's letter this week in which he describes the Town Manager Act, which was "born" in 1997 as now, at 15 years old, a sophomore in high school.

That got us to thinking – that there are likely a lot of "newcomers" to Cohasset — who were not around when the TMA passed the annual Town Meeting that spring.

First of all, we want to correct some misconceptions. Allow us to make a slight digression. Our younger sister was a figure skater who finished sixth in the New England Division when she was a little girl. We were so excited with the news – until our mother (who was laughing) — let us know there were only six girls in her division.

In other words, perspective is everything.

You will likely hear on Monday night that we have had four Town Managers in four years. The truth is we had two town managers (the first two) for about 12 years. One of the recent Town Managers was Steve Lombard who was hired as an interim for a defined length of time. Assistant to the Town Manager Jennifer Oram then took the reins on a temporary basis for a short time until Michael Coughlin started. It should be noted that both long-term town managers (Mark Haddad and Bill Griffin) received high marks from selectmen for years.

At the 1997 Town Meeting, a Citizens Petition set the stage for the change to a professional town manager to operate the day-to-day operations of the town. Cohasset had been run by the selectmen with a "weak" town administrator. "Weak" meaning the TA had little authority or accountability. At the time, many had lost confidence in the then Board of Selectmen whose members were so bogged down in minutiae that it had become increasingly difficult for them to keep it all straight. They simply could not handle the job before them without professional help.

The Town Manager Act passed with a majority vote of 71-65 over the objections of a "super-majority" of the then Board of Selectmen.

While selectmen were not opposed to the concept, four out of the five thought the change of government needed more study and thought the town administrator position could be beefed up to take on more duties.

The petitioners cited a litany of concerns about cost overruns, soaring legal bills and broken promises to bolster their position. Opponents worried that too much power would be vested in one position and the town would not be able "to find a Norman Schwarzkopf or Robert McNamara" at $60,000 a year (the proposed starting salary at the time).

Without a doubt, Monday's Special Town Meeting will be an interesting civics lesson. Our main hope is that everyone who attends will respect one another's opinions.

It was our view in 1997 and that continues today, that the Town Manager Act is good for Cohasset. It is important to remember that the Town Manager – who indeed holds a lot of power — reports to the Board of Selectmen. It is up to them to ensure that he (or she) is up to the job and performs his or her duties. The people need to trust that the Board will insist on complete transparency and stay on top of things no matter how much they like the person occupying that post.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Not ready for prime time

Editor's note: A copy of this letter was provided to the Mariner for publication.

To the Board of Selectmen and the Constables of Cohasset

Only four days ago (Nov. 24), I received the Warrant for the Dec. 10 Special Town Meeting. A brief study indicated that from your Board and from the Advisory committee absolutely no recommendations accompanied 12 of the 15 Articles – and from the other three only limited certification.

This suggests to me that neither group has had the time to wrestle with the 15 Articles sufficiently to express strongly enough their feelings to guide a proper meeting of the town.

Other than the cost of the Warrant, it occurred to me that we should postpone the Special Town Meeting and save its expense to a later date when we could more intelligently handle the disposition of these issues with your then well-studied guidance after the holiday pressures had disappeared.

Also, the mid-December date in a tangled holiday season could hardly be expected to bring out an adequately representative citizenry.

I presume now however, such a course is itself belated. May I suggest though that such Special Meetings in the future would transpire only after the Articles would have received thorough study by the Boards to enable a properly included evaluation and recommendation accompanying the issues.

Thank you for giving this latter suggestion your consideration.

Edward F. Woods, 231 Jerusalem Road

What's the rush?

Cohasset voters are invited to a Special Town Meeting next Monday night, smack in the middle of the post-Thanksgiving/ pre-Christmas/during Hanukkah season — and starting at dinnertime — to vote on a major change to a key phrase in Cohasset's governing document, the Town Manager Act.

The proposed change is to remove language excluding anyone who has held elective or appointive office within the previous one-year period from being considered for the Town Manager position. The existing language is intended to insure that the Board looks outside its inner circle when hiring a professional to run the Town. It is the Board of Selectmen that has proposed the change, because those selectmen are certain that they have found and hired the person they want for the job, despite the fact that this language would exclude him. In other words, they "know best" what's good for us. Better than our own law.

Do they really? Put aside for the moment the fact that the question is one that deserves the full attention and debate of an Annual Town Meeting, and that the Governance Committee charged with considering ways to improve the interaction of the Town Manager Act and the Cohasset by-laws will not complete its work until next Spring.

Did the BOS "know best" when it blew up the Conservation Committee in 2011? When it fired a new Town Manager earlier this year amid much controversy? And reneged on multiple employee contracts, closed a department and imposed a town-wide spending freeze based on poor finances but ended up with a $1 million surplus after all? Got rid of a police chief who had spoken out at Town Meeting?

Selectmen are looking for this isolated change in language for one reason only, which is to hire their already chosen candidate. It is not to open up the possibilities, as they have not shown any inclination to do a search. This is a rash and ill-advised approach to lawmaking.

Let's wait for the Governance Committee's full feedback and recommendations and decide then if any laws need changing.

Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St.

Support your local government!

I am writing to urge citizens to come out next Monday night, Dec. 10 to the Special Town Meeting to voice their opinion on some very important articles. Understanding that it is a busy time of year, the recreation department is offering childcare with the All-Star Team of Kevin Dykas, Kelly Grech, Marie Dunkelberger and Linda Bolster. For $5, your child can attend the dance party and eat pizza while you let your voice be heard!

Of the important articles, I would like to specifically mention the Town Manager Act and Community Preservation Committee Recommendations.

Michael Milanoski has done a great job for this town in a position that has been somewhat volatile in the past. He has taken tremendous strides in getting our financial house in order, elevating our bond rating, and creating an atmosphere of camaraderie among the town departments. It is essential for the town that we maintain consistency when things are going well, which they are thanks to Mr. Milanoski. All it takes is a small change to the last sentence of the Town Manager Act by voting yes on Article 14.

In addition, most of us hold the Cohasset Sailing Club near and dear to our hearts. Voting for the Community Preservation Committee Recommendations will allow the Town to transfer unused funds back into the Community Preservation Fund general balance to be appropriated to projects such as the proposed clubhouse for the CSC.

Please take some time to come and support your local government. Thank you!

Jeanine Perrone, 124 Pleasant St.

Right man for the job

It has been with dismay that I have watched the increasingly vitriolic tenor of much of our town's political discussions. Like many of my neighbors I have declined to participate but rather have quietly tried to support the best interests of the whole town in any matters in which I might be privileged to have a voice.

In the matter of the current discussion about the town manger appointment process I might have an insight that my neighbors might find of use. Prior to becoming temporary town manager, Mike Milanowski served as an associate commissioner on The Conservation Commission. At the time The Commission was in turmoil and caught between powerful warring town factions. In addition the Commission by laws and operating procedures were in need of serious updating. The updating task was assigned to him and he completed the task with the utmost professionalism and dedication to the best interests of the Town and of The Conservation Commission.

However my fellow citizens decide to vote at the Dec. 10th Special Town Meeting, I believe that this testament to Mr. Milanowski's actual performance may be of value to them as this issue is debated at Town Meeting.

Although I am privileged to serve as the current Chair of The Conservation Commission and have served on the Commission since February 2008, this letter reflects my personal, non-official, views.

'Commonsense has gone out the door'

RONNIE MCMORRIS

No matter how conscientious, intelligent or fabulous a candidate is, in the public sector we are entitled to an open, thorough evaluation that involves multiple candidates...

Among your holiday party invitations was one from the Board of Selectmen to join their Holiday Town Meeting this Dec. 10th (second night of Hanukkah). Front and center is Article 14 — their one sentence change to the Town Manager Act intended to go the state legislature and the Governor ASAP – all in a misguided effort to legitimize their town manager appointment.

It seems that from the time this board decided to terminate Mike Coughlin they had a single minded plan to hire someone they all knew well, an insider. That plan was to ask this person to be a volunteer town manager with full-blown authority and then eventually keep him on permanently. Not exactly an advisable course for a whole host of reasons and unfortunately it was one that keeps butting up against the Town Manager Act, that pesky "snag brought up by Town Counsel" that the chair "can't talk about."

As an elected and appointed official for almost 20 years, nine as a Selectman and most recently as a member of the Town Manager search committee, I have been troubled by the course of events that has brought us to this juncture. The selection of an administrator or manager is one of the most important responsibilities of a board of selectmen. It requires careful planning and astute evaluation of candidates and it requires an open, transparent process. The guidelines for recruitment set out by the Mass Municipal Association are clear: "First and foremost the Board of Selectmen must avoid acting impulsively and succumbing to the temptation to hurriedly appoint an administrator as a quick fix to the problems of vacancy, recruitment and selection."

The BOS on the rebound from a failed relationship with their newly hired town manager embarked on a course that would have been fine if, in fact, they simply hired an acting town manager to keep routine things going while the Board searched for a permanent manager. Instead they became so fixated on a single candidate (and still are) that they have consistently violated not only rules of good governmental practice but open meeting laws. Commonsense has gone out the door as well. No matter how conscientious, intelligent or fabulous a candidate is, in the public sector we are entitled to an open, thorough evaluation that involves multiple candidates, review of resumes and references, interviews and comparisons based on criteria.

By acting impulsively, outside of public meetings and without consulting counsel the BOS has gotten themselves, and therefore the rest of us, in quite a mess.

Here's what's happened and why a "Hail Mary Pass" to Beacon Hill can't fix this mess:

1) Before Mike Coughlin is even out the door the Board posts a meeting for 4PM Friday afternoon to "Discuss Cohasset operational management and finances". Appointing a volunteer Town Manager at that meeting doesn't comply with the law. They could only "discuss ", nothing more. As there are no minutes of the meeting (violation of the law) we don't know exactly what occurred but apparently they appointed an acting town manager. How did 5 individual selectmen know that this was the right person, someone with no prior experience as a town manager? We have to assume they reviewed resumes and references and discussed this matter outside an open meeting. Equally problematic, it appears they gave this volunteer the full powersofa Strong Town Manager. If there was a letter of agreement between these parties it was never approved in public and never shared with the public. This person likely had access to confidential town records without any apparent legal authority to be in that role.

2) A few weeks later this relationship is extended for 15 months, still no discussion of qualifications to serve, no public deliberation on the advisability of this course, just the prospect of a "potential" search and a long term contract to be written in executive session. The only information the public is given is that counsel has purportedly told them these "acting" positions can go on for 5 yrs. No one on the BOS questions the wisdom of this.

3) The BOS and Michael Milanoski signed a contract on April 3, 2012 in executive session. The public wasn't privy to the contract until June 26th because it was never discussed or voted on in public as is required. Not only does it appear that they wanted the contract to be kept secret but it also had no legal effect until a newly elected selectman noticed the failure and asked for the vote in open meeting. It was approved, but never ratified retroactively.

4) Now that the contract is public, it is clear that this is not a typical acting town manager agreement, but rather a true town manager contract. The terms are in part that "the Town employs Michael Milanoski and Milanoski hereby accepts employment by the town as its Town Manager... " It is a six page document conferring full strong town manager authority as well as compensation and benefits commensurate with an experienced town manager. Of particular concern is the removal clause. Mike Coughlin's contract provided for removal "without cause". This contract, however, allows removal only by vote of four out of five Selectmen or super majority and exceeds what is called for in the Town Manager Act. Typical acting town manager contracts are short and terminable at will.

This returns us to that legal "snag", the Town Manager Act, which prohibits this particular candidate from being hired as town manager, because of the prohibition in the sentence that needs to be changed ASAP. The BOS chose either to ignore that problem or perhaps skirt it; by using the term "acting" when in reality they'd hired a permanent manager with every intention of keeping him indefinitely. Likely, unless and until the Town Manager Act is changed, we have someone who is for all intents and purposes acting through an illegal town manager contract. We have been kept in the dark about the consequences of this and remain excluded from the process. This is precisely the reason we should keep the provision about insider hiring. The public deserves a professional arms length hiring process that is above reproach.

It is being argued that everything was a mess, that all of our prior town managers were failures, as were the searches that produced them. Now we are on the road to prosperity, stability and a better bond rating. Everything is great. Also, that we should hire someone who's one of us and not be so concerned with professional credentials.

In fact, we should insist on selectmen who take responsibility for what happens on their watch and who don't blame failures on their managers. We should insist that all open meeting laws be understood and obeyed and that town counsel be consulted before not after the fact on legal matters. We should insist on being kept fully informed; it is our right as citizens. And we should understand that the job of town manager is complex and that education and proven experience are necessary foundations for long-term success.

In the public sector the people have a right to know what their government is doing – all of it, the good, the bad and the ugly. And if officials mess up we need them to come clean about what needs fixing. Anything less starts to feel like a cover up.

Ronnie McMorris, 89 Doane St., is former longtime selectman and conservation commissioner. She also served on the Town Manager Search Committee.

Silent majority should be heard

Hey, I am with you, between work, kids and kid-related activities, the schedule is full and there just isn't the time to get involved. Unfortunately, not getting involved can get us in trouble.

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

Hey, whatcha doing this Monday night?

I am sure the answer is something like; helping the kids with their schoolwork, signing Christmas cards or finishing up something business related. Well perhaps you might take an hour or so and help Cohasset's Silent Majority be heard

Who's the Silent Majority? We are the Silent Majority. We are the people who love this town, love our schools, love our neighbors (well, most of them) but beyond sports and youth activities we tend not to get involved too much.

Hey, I am with you, between work, kids and kid-related activities, the schedule is full and there just isn't the time to get involved. Unfortunately, not getting involved can get us in trouble. Take for example the 40-story wind turbines that almost slipped past us? The rules that were put in place that would have allowed these monstrosities were decided upon at an open committee meeting in which almost no one attended. Fortunately, because of some last minute hard work and a discovered technicality a colossal mistake was averted. Instances like this can be commonplace if we do not take a few minutes to partake in the process.

Okay, so if you're not getting involved and I am not getting involved then who is? Well, there are few possible answers to that question. There's the citizen who is directly impacted by a single issue, shows up for that issue and then slips out the back afterwards (I'm guilty of this one!). There's the person truly committed to the process of town government and then, of course, there's the person who's smarter than the rest of us and will most likely blog about whatever action they've disagree with (oh those crazy bloggers but that's another article for another time).

Monday night 6:30 p.m. there will be a meeting to go over 15 articles that may have a significant impact on you, your kids and of course the town. Issues include but are not limited to; the capital improvements budget, a myriad of sewer issues, allocations of one-time cost funds, an article to amend the Town Manager Act and a solar energy project.

Can't find a sitter? No problem. Kudos to the town for trying something creative; I've heard that they've asked gym teacher extraordinaire Mr. Dykas to stick around for the evening to interact and entertain the kids. Seriously, Kevin Dykas, a brilliant move.

Of all the issues on the agenda there are two that are of interest to me; the vote to grant monies to improve the Cohasset Sailing Club and the one involving the Town Manager. I am also curious about the solar energy project as I very much believe in renewable energy as long as it isn't as tall as International Place on the highest point in the town.

To me, improving the sailing club seems like a no brainer, much of the town's charm is the ocean and we'd be foolish not to improve the facility that gives our children the ability to embrace it. I'll be voting in the affirmative to approve these funds.

The issue about the Town Manager also seems like no brainer; a vote against it would open the door to searching for a new Town Manager. Four Town Mangers in roughly four years, on top of three (acting) Police Chiefs in the same time frame? We already have a competent town manager who's an active member of our community and while I don't agree with everything that happens, he's doing a pretty good job. I'll be casting a yes vote on this as well.

We are a community of amazingly wonderful and caring people. We live in a town with a very good school system, breathtaking beauty and great neighbors but more often than not, we let others make the important decisions for us. On Monday night, let's speak for ourselves and perhaps we the Silent Majority will evolve into something like the Whispering Majority. The Whispering Majority, yeah I'd be comfortable with that.

Thanks for reading and hope to see you Monday night.

STEVE GAUMER

Less than a year ago, the town faced a fiscal imbalance clear to many folks who work closely with the budget and balance sheet. The imbalance was on course to grow as the years rolled by — if changes to our budgeting processes and considerations were not made.

Much of the issue was traceable to ineffective or non-existent processes dealing with revenue and cost forecasting, expense recording and reporting, and tasks as fundamental as account reconciliation (think balancing the checkbook).

At that time, the Budget Planning Committee and the newly appointed interim Town Manager identified both a lack of clearly defined financial objectives, and processes to accomplish those objectives. The interim Town Manager took on the task of championing both the need and wisdom for defining objectives and identifying appropriate procedures for their adoption, which became Article I at the 2013 Annual Town Meeting. Both the Board of Selectmen and Annual Town meeting voted to adopt these policies earlier this year.

The above history is worth noting because both our past history and present actions were tested this past summer by Standard and Poor's. The town had the option of refinancing an outstanding bond, and given the low interest rates available, the refinancing could be done at a potential saving in interest at more than $1million.

Critical to the success of the transaction would be our ability to convince S & P that the community should keep our current AA+ rating. Arguing against that were two pieces of our recent history:

Our financial performance over the past several years has been dismal. For the prior two fiscal years, we had closed the books in a deficit. Only transfers from the Stabilization fund allowed us to close with a balanced budget. In fact, over several years, we had regularly raided the Stabilization Fund to the point where the balance was near zero.

Equally concerning to S & P was our management turnover. The interim Town Manger represented the fourth person to occupy the seat in less than four years; the same statistic applied to the town Finance Director. Combined with the lax budgeting and management procedures identified in our auditor's reports, S&P was reluctant to confirm our rating.

Arguing for the maintenance of our rating were the newly adopted processes and procedures, which had borne immediate fruit. Also noted was a clear statement from our finance director that she planned to serve in this capacity for an extended period, and to build a team capable of executing these newly adopted procedures.

S & P did hold the rating, though modified with a "negative" outlook. Among their chief concerns: The lack of clarity in the continuity in the Town Manager's tenure and hence the continued adoption of the new processes and procedures. S & P confirmed they would review the negative outlook in six months' time.

The ratings agency clearly saw the value in the adoption of procedure, though noted that the difference between adoption — and institution — is often found in consistent management.

S & P did return in six months' time, (about six weeks ago). The ratings agency is still concerned about the interim nature of the Town Manager's position, though was sufficiently impressed with the financial discipline they witnessed that they removed the "negative" outlook.

Some in our community would promote the idea that it is time to move on from the interim Town Manager. I am not among those. In the 12 years I have volunteered my time to the town, I have yet to see a period of fiscal progress as I have seen over the past 10 months.

At the time of the Town Manager's appointment, our financial condition was close to peril; it is now stabilized and showing slow, steady improvement. In my estimation, our progress is attributable to the adoption of specific objectives and procedures contained in (Article I) at the 2013 Annual Town Meeting, and instituted by our interim Town Manager.

I share the view with Standard & Poor's that the biggest risk we currently face is the potential turnover again in this key position and with it, the erosion of the progress we've made.

OUR VIEW

Ancient history

The title of this editorial was inspired by Tom Killilea's letter this week in which he describes the Town Manager Act, which was "born" in 1997 as now, at 15 years old, a sophomore in high school.

That got us to thinking - that there are likely a lot of "newcomers" to Cohasset — who were not around when the TMA passed the annual Town Meeting that spring.

First of all, we want to correct some misconceptions. Allow us to make a slight digression. Our younger sister was a figure skater who finished sixth in the New England Division when she was a little girl. We were so excited with the news - until our mother (who was laughing) — let us know there were only six girls in her division.

In other words, perspective is everything.

You will likely hear on Monday night that we have had four Town Managers in four years. The truth is we had two town managers (the first two) for about 12 years. One of the recent Town Managers was Steve Lombard who was hired as an interim for a defined length of time. Assistant to the Town Manager Jennifer Oram then took the reins on a temporary basis for a short time until Michael Coughlin started. It should be noted that both long-term town managers (Mark Haddad and Bill Griffin) received high marks from selectmen for years.

At the 1997 Town Meeting, a Citizens Petition set the stage for the change to a professional town manager to operate the day-to-day operations of the town. Cohasset had been run by the selectmen with a "weak" town administrator. "Weak" meaning the TA had little authority or accountability. At the time, many had lost confidence in the then Board of Selectmen whose members were so bogged down in minutiae that it had become increasingly difficult for them to keep it all straight. They simply could not handle the job before them without professional help.

The Town Manager Act passed with a majority vote of 71-65 over the objections of a "super-majority" of the then Board of Selectmen.

While selectmen were not opposed to the concept, four out of the five thought the change of government needed more study and thought the town administrator position could be beefed up to take on more duties.

The petitioners cited a litany of concerns about cost overruns, soaring legal bills and broken promises to bolster their position. Opponents worried that too much power would be vested in one position and the town would not be able "to find a Norman Schwarzkopf or Robert McNamara" at $60,000 a year (the proposed starting salary at the time).

Without a doubt, Monday's Special Town Meeting will be an interesting civics lesson. Our main hope is that everyone who attends will respect one another's opinions.

It was our view in 1997 and that continues today, that the Town Manager Act is good for Cohasset. It is important to remember that the Town Manager – who indeed holds a lot of power — reports to the Board of Selectmen. It is up to them to ensure that he (or she) is up to the job and performs his or her duties. The people need to trust that the Board will insist on complete transparency and stay on top of things no matter how much they like the person occupying that post.

Article 15 of Special Town Meeting is a bylaw change to eliminate the 200-foot buffer zone of a veterinary practice which, if passed, could impact a residential district on King Street among others

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Not ready for prime time

Editor's note: A copy of this letter was provided to the Mariner for publication.

To the Board of Selectmen and the Constables of Cohasset

Only four days ago (Nov. 24), I received the Warrant for the Dec. 10 Special Town Meeting. A brief study indicated that from your Board and from the Advisory committee absolutely no recommendations accompanied 12 of the 15 Articles – and from the other three only limited certification.

This suggests to me that neither group has had the time to wrestle with the 15 Articles sufficiently to express strongly enough their feelings to guide a proper meeting of the town.

Other than the cost of the Warrant, it occurred to me that we should postpone the Special Town Meeting and save its expense to a later date when we could more intelligently handle the disposition of these issues with your then well-studied guidance after the holiday pressures had disappeared.

Also, the mid-December date in a tangled holiday season could hardly be expected to bring out an adequately representative citizenry.

I presume now however, such a course is itself belated. May I suggest though that such Special Meetings in the future would transpire only after the Articles would have received thorough study by the Boards to enable a properly included evaluation and recommendation accompanying the issues.

Thank you for giving this latter suggestion your consideration.

What's the rush?

Cohasset voters are invited to a Special Town Meeting next Monday night, smack in the middle of the post-Thanksgiving/ pre-Christmas/during Hanukkah season — and starting at dinnertime — to vote on a major change to a key phrase in Cohasset's governing document, the Town Manager Act.

The proposed change is to remove language excluding anyone who has held elective or appointive office within the previous one-year period from being considered for the Town Manager position. The existing language is intended to insure that the Board looks outside its inner circle when hiring a professional to run the Town. It is the Board of Selectmen that has proposed the change, because those selectmen are certain that they have found and hired the person they want for the job, despite the fact that this language would exclude him. In other words, they "know best" what's good for us. Better than our own law.

Do they really? Put aside for the moment the fact that the question is one that deserves the full attention and debate of an Annual Town Meeting, and that the Governance Committee charged with considering ways to improve the interaction of the Town Manager Act and the Cohasset by-laws will not complete its work until next Spring.

Did the BOS "know best" when it blew up the Conservation Committee in 2011? When it fired a new Town Manager earlier this year amid much controversy? And reneged on multiple employee contracts, closed a department and imposed a town-wide spending freeze based on poor finances but ended up with a $1 million surplus after all? Got rid of a police chief who had spoken out at Town Meeting?

Selectmen are looking for this isolated change in language for one reason only, which is to hire their already chosen candidate. It is not to open up the possibilities, as they have not shown any inclination to do a search. This is a rash and ill-advised approach to lawmaking.

Let's wait for the Governance Committee's full feedback and recommendations and decide then if any laws need changing.

Support your local government!

I am writing to urge citizens to come out next Monday night, Dec. 10 to the Special Town Meeting to voice their opinion on some very important articles. Understanding that it is a busy time of year, the recreation department is offering childcare with the All-Star Team of Kevin Dykas, Kelly Grech, Marie Dunkelberger and Linda Bolster. For $5, your child can attend the dance party and eat pizza while you let your voice be heard!

Of the important articles, I would like to specifically mention the Town Manager Act and Community Preservation Committee Recommendations.

Michael Milanoski has done a great job for this town in a position that has been somewhat volatile in the past. He has taken tremendous strides in getting our financial house in order, elevating our bond rating, and creating an atmosphere of camaraderie among the town departments. It is essential for the town that we maintain consistency when things are going well, which they are thanks to Mr. Milanoski. All it takes is a small change to the last sentence of the Town Manager Act by voting yes on Article 14.

In addition, most of us hold the Cohasset Sailing Club near and dear to our hearts. Voting for the Community Preservation Committee Recommendations will allow the Town to transfer unused funds back into the Community Preservation Fund general balance to be appropriated to projects such as the proposed clubhouse for the CSC.

Please take some time to come and support your local government. Thank you!

It has been with dismay that I have watched the increasingly vitriolic tenor of much of our town's political discussions. Like many of my neighbors I have declined to participate but rather have quietly tried to support the best interests of the whole town in any matters in which I might be privileged to have a voice.

In the matter of the current discussion about the town manger appointment process I might have an insight that my neighbors might find of use. Prior to becoming temporary town manager, Mike Milanowski served as an associate commissioner on The Conservation Commission. At the time The Commission was in turmoil and caught between powerful warring town factions. In addition the Commission by laws and operating procedures were in need of serious updating. The updating task was assigned to him and he completed the task with the utmost professionalism and dedication to the best interests of the Town and of The Conservation Commission.

However my fellow citizens decide to vote at the Dec. 10th Special Town Meeting, I believe that this testament to Mr. Milanowski's actual performance may be of value to them as this issue is debated at Town Meeting.

Although I am privileged to serve as the current Chair of The Conservation Commission and have served on the Commission since February 2008, this letter reflects my personal, non-official, views.

'Commonsense has gone out the door'

RONNIE MCMORRIS

No matter how conscientious, intelligent or fabulous a candidate is, in the public sector we are entitled to an open, thorough evaluation that involves multiple candidates...

Among your holiday party invitations was one from the Board of Selectmen to join their Holiday Town Meeting this Dec. 10th (second night of Hanukkah). Front and center is Article 14 — their one sentence change to the Town Manager Act intended to go the state legislature and the Governor ASAP – all in a misguided effort to legitimize their town manager appointment.

It seems that from the time this board decided to terminate Mike Coughlin they had a single minded plan to hire someone they all knew well, an insider. That plan was to ask this person to be a volunteer town manager with full-blown authority and then eventually keep him on permanently. Not exactly an advisable course for a whole host of reasons and unfortunately it was one that keeps butting up against the Town Manager Act, that pesky "snag brought up by Town Counsel" that the chair "can't talk about."

As an elected and appointed official for almost 20 years, nine as a Selectman and most recently as a member of the Town Manager search committee, I have been troubled by the course of events that has brought us to this juncture. The selection of an administrator or manager is one of the most important responsibilities of a board of selectmen. It requires careful planning and astute evaluation of candidates and it requires an open, transparent process. The guidelines for recruitment set out by the Mass Municipal Association are clear: "First and foremost the Board of Selectmen must avoid acting impulsively and succumbing to the temptation to hurriedly appoint an administrator as a quick fix to the problems of vacancy, recruitment and selection."

The BOS on the rebound from a failed relationship with their newly hired town manager embarked on a course that would have been fine if, in fact, they simply hired an acting town manager to keep routine things going while the Board searched for a permanent manager. Instead they became so fixated on a single candidate (and still are) that they have consistently violated not only rules of good governmental practice but open meeting laws. Commonsense has gone out the door as well. No matter how conscientious, intelligent or fabulous a candidate is, in the public sector we are entitled to an open, thorough evaluation that involves multiple candidates, review of resumes and references, interviews and comparisons based on criteria.

By acting impulsively, outside of public meetings and without consulting counsel the BOS has gotten themselves, and therefore the rest of us, in quite a mess.

Here's what's happened and why a "Hail Mary Pass" to Beacon Hill can't fix this mess:

1) Before Mike Coughlin is even out the door the Board posts a meeting for 4PM Friday afternoon to "Discuss Cohasset operational management and finances". Appointing a volunteer Town Manager at that meeting doesn't comply with the law. They could only "discuss ", nothing more. As there are no minutes of the meeting (violation of the law) we don't know exactly what occurred but apparently they appointed an acting town manager. How did 5 individual selectmen know that this was the right person, someone with no prior experience as a town manager? We have to assume they reviewed resumes and references and discussed this matter outside an open meeting. Equally problematic, it appears they gave this volunteer the full powersofa Strong Town Manager. If there was a letter of agreement between these parties it was never approved in public and never shared with the public. This person likely had access to confidential town records without any apparent legal authority to be in that role.

2) A few weeks later this relationship is extended for 15 months, still no discussion of qualifications to serve, no public deliberation on the advisability of this course, just the prospect of a "potential" search and a long term contract to be written in executive session. The only information the public is given is that counsel has purportedly told them these "acting" positions can go on for 5 yrs. No one on the BOS questions the wisdom of this.

3) The BOS and Michael Milanoski signed a contract on April 3, 2012 in executive session. The public wasn't privy to the contract until June 26th because it was never discussed or voted on in public as is required. Not only does it appear that they wanted the contract to be kept secret but it also had no legal effect until a newly elected selectman noticed the failure and asked for the vote in open meeting. It was approved, but never ratified retroactively.

4) Now that the contract is public, it is clear that this is not a typical acting town manager agreement, but rather a true town manager contract. The terms are in part that "the Town employs Michael Milanoski and Milanoski hereby accepts employment by the town as its Town Manager... " It is a six page document conferring full strong town manager authority as well as compensation and benefits commensurate with an experienced town manager. Of particular concern is the removal clause. Mike Coughlin's contract provided for removal "without cause". This contract, however, allows removal only by vote of four out of five Selectmen or super majority and exceeds what is called for in the Town Manager Act. Typical acting town manager contracts are short and terminable at will.

This returns us to that legal "snag", the Town Manager Act, which prohibits this particular candidate from being hired as town manager, because of the prohibition in the sentence that needs to be changed ASAP. The BOS chose either to ignore that problem or perhaps skirt it; by using the term "acting" when in reality they'd hired a permanent manager with every intention of keeping him indefinitely. Likely, unless and until the Town Manager Act is changed, we have someone who is for all intents and purposes acting through an illegal town manager contract. We have been kept in the dark about the consequences of this and remain excluded from the process. This is precisely the reason we should keep the provision about insider hiring. The public deserves a professional arms length hiring process that is above reproach.

It is being argued that everything was a mess, that all of our prior town managers were failures, as were the searches that produced them. Now we are on the road to prosperity, stability and a better bond rating. Everything is great. Also, that we should hire someone who's one of us and not be so concerned with professional credentials.

In fact, we should insist on selectmen who take responsibility for what happens on their watch and who don't blame failures on their managers. We should insist that all open meeting laws be understood and obeyed and that town counsel be consulted before not after the fact on legal matters. We should insist on being kept fully informed; it is our right as citizens. And we should understand that the job of town manager is complex and that education and proven experience are necessary foundations for long-term success.

In the public sector the people have a right to know what their government is doing – all of it, the good, the bad and the ugly. And if officials mess up we need them to come clean about what needs fixing. Anything less starts to feel like a cover up.

Silent majority should be heard

Hey, I am with you, between work, kids and kid-related activities, the schedule is full and there just isn't the time to get involved. Unfortunately, not getting involved can get us in trouble.

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

Hey, whatcha doing this Monday night?

I am sure the answer is something like; helping the kids with their schoolwork, signing Christmas cards or finishing up something business related. Well perhaps you might take an hour or so and help Cohasset's Silent Majority be heard

Who's the Silent Majority? We are the Silent Majority. We are the people who love this town, love our schools, love our neighbors (well, most of them) but beyond sports and youth activities we tend not to get involved too much.

Hey, I am with you, between work, kids and kid-related activities, the schedule is full and there just isn't the time to get involved. Unfortunately, not getting involved can get us in trouble. Take for example the 40-story wind turbines that almost slipped past us? The rules that were put in place that would have allowed these monstrosities were decided upon at an open committee meeting in which almost no one attended. Fortunately, because of some last minute hard work and a discovered technicality a colossal mistake was averted. Instances like this can be commonplace if we do not take a few minutes to partake in the process.

Okay, so if you're not getting involved and I am not getting involved then who is? Well, there are few possible answers to that question. There's the citizen who is directly impacted by a single issue, shows up for that issue and then slips out the back afterwards (I'm guilty of this one!). There's the person truly committed to the process of town government and then, of course, there's the person who's smarter than the rest of us and will most likely blog about whatever action they've disagree with (oh those crazy bloggers but that's another article for another time).

Monday night 6:30 p.m. there will be a meeting to go over 15 articles that may have a significant impact on you, your kids and of course the town. Issues include but are not limited to; the capital improvements budget, a myriad of sewer issues, allocations of one-time cost funds, an article to amend the Town Manager Act and a solar energy project.

Can't find a sitter? No problem. Kudos to the town for trying something creative; I've heard that they've asked gym teacher extraordinaire Mr. Dykas to stick around for the evening to interact and entertain the kids. Seriously, Kevin Dykas, a brilliant move.

Of all the issues on the agenda there are two that are of interest to me; the vote to grant monies to improve the Cohasset Sailing Club and the one involving the Town Manager. I am also curious about the solar energy project as I very much believe in renewable energy as long as it isn't as tall as International Place on the highest point in the town.

To me, improving the sailing club seems like a no brainer, much of the town's charm is the ocean and we'd be foolish not to improve the facility that gives our children the ability to embrace it. I'll be voting in the affirmative to approve these funds.

The issue about the Town Manager also seems like no brainer; a vote against it would open the door to searching for a new Town Manager. Four Town Mangers in roughly four years, on top of three (acting) Police Chiefs in the same time frame? We already have a competent town manager who's an active member of our community and while I don't agree with everything that happens, he's doing a pretty good job. I'll be casting a yes vote on this as well.

We are a community of amazingly wonderful and caring people. We live in a town with a very good school system, breathtaking beauty and great neighbors but more often than not, we let others make the important decisions for us. On Monday night, let's speak for ourselves and perhaps we the Silent Majority will evolve into something like the Whispering Majority. The Whispering Majority, yeah I'd be comfortable with that.

Thanks for reading and hope to see you Monday night.

STEVE GAUMER

Less than a year ago, the town faced a fiscal imbalance clear to many folks who work closely with the budget and balance sheet. The imbalance was on course to grow as the years rolled by — if changes to our budgeting processes and considerations were not made.

Much of the issue was traceable to ineffective or non-existent processes dealing with revenue and cost forecasting, expense recording and reporting, and tasks as fundamental as account reconciliation (think balancing the checkbook).

At that time, the Budget Planning Committee and the newly appointed interim Town Manager identified both a lack of clearly defined financial objectives, and processes to accomplish those objectives. The interim Town Manager took on the task of championing both the need and wisdom for defining objectives and identifying appropriate procedures for their adoption, which became Article I at the 2013 Annual Town Meeting. Both the Board of Selectmen and Annual Town meeting voted to adopt these policies earlier this year.

The above history is worth noting because both our past history and present actions were tested this past summer by Standard and Poor's. The town had the option of refinancing an outstanding bond, and given the low interest rates available, the refinancing could be done at a potential saving in interest at more than $1million.

Critical to the success of the transaction would be our ability to convince S & P that the community should keep our current AA+ rating. Arguing against that were two pieces of our recent history:

Our financial performance over the past several years has been dismal. For the prior two fiscal years, we had closed the books in a deficit. Only transfers from the Stabilization fund allowed us to close with a balanced budget. In fact, over several years, we had regularly raided the Stabilization Fund to the point where the balance was near zero.

Equally concerning to S & P was our management turnover. The interim Town Manger represented the fourth person to occupy the seat in less than four years; the same statistic applied to the town Finance Director. Combined with the lax budgeting and management procedures identified in our auditor's reports, S&P was reluctant to confirm our rating.

Arguing for the maintenance of our rating were the newly adopted processes and procedures, which had borne immediate fruit. Also noted was a clear statement from our finance director that she planned to serve in this capacity for an extended period, and to build a team capable of executing these newly adopted procedures.

S & P did hold the rating, though modified with a "negative" outlook. Among their chief concerns: The lack of clarity in the continuity in the Town Manager's tenure and hence the continued adoption of the new processes and procedures. S & P confirmed they would review the negative outlook in six months' time.

The ratings agency clearly saw the value in the adoption of procedure, though noted that the difference between adoption — and institution — is often found in consistent management.

S & P did return in six months' time, (about six weeks ago). The ratings agency is still concerned about the interim nature of the Town Manager's position, though was sufficiently impressed with the financial discipline they witnessed that they removed the "negative" outlook.

Some in our community would promote the idea that it is time to move on from the interim Town Manager. I am not among those. In the 12 years I have volunteered my time to the town, I have yet to see a period of fiscal progress as I have seen over the past 10 months.

At the time of the Town Manager's appointment, our financial condition was close to peril; it is now stabilized and showing slow, steady improvement. In my estimation, our progress is attributable to the adoption of specific objectives and procedures contained in (Article I) at the 2013 Annual Town Meeting, and instituted by our interim Town Manager.

I share the view with Standard & Poor's that the biggest risk we currently face is the potential turnover again in this key position and with it, the erosion of the progress we've made.

FOOTBALL

No regrets

Football leaves everything on the field every game

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

In football, everything doesn't always go perfectly as planned.

No matter how much planning and work a team puts in, there's always someone on the other side working hard to thwart those plans.

In that sense, the measure of success isn't always in the win-loss column, at least at the high school level, where sports is part of the learning process.

When you get to the NFL, or even big college athletics, where money is the driving force, that's a whole different monster.

At the high school level, winning and losing is important, but if you ask what makes a season a success, answers can vary.

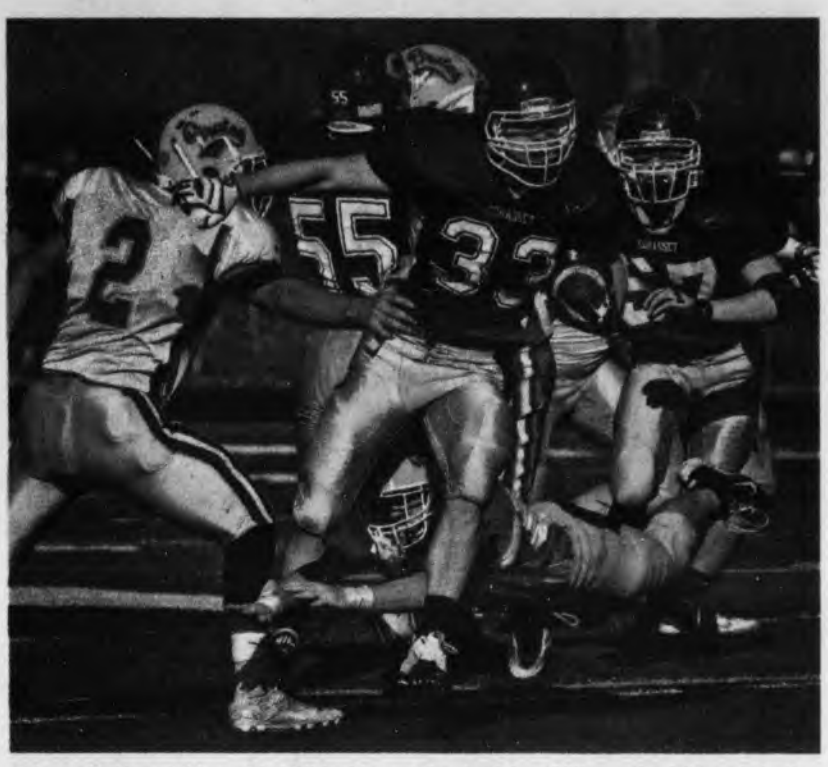
In Cohasset, the Skippers were right on the line when it comes to success – if you're looking at things from an NFL angle where winning isn't everything – it's the only thing.

Cohasset finished 6-5, giving them another winning season under coach Pete Afanasiw.

Looking more closely, the 2012 campaign was well past the middle-point and quite high on the success meter.

This Skippers squad is one that will be remembered for their attitude, hustle, grit and for the way the season ended for the seniors on Thanksgiving.

"It was a nice feeling to be able to take all the seniors off the field at once while the parents and fans all cheered," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said.



Heading into the annual Thanksgiving showdown against Hull, the Skippers were in a groove.

They had won three of their last four games, and gave Mashpee a battle.

Among the wins were domnating performances against Sandwich (a 31-0 win) and Norwell (33-0 win). Against Mashpee, the Skippers scored 41 points.

Still, Afanasiw wasn't sure what to expect on Turkey Day.

"The biggest concern I have with Thansgiving is not so much winning or losing, it's more will they show up and play, or is it the deer in the headlights. It can happen. Teams can be shellshocked. Kids know it's their last game in high school. For some it might be their last game. How do you balance the finality of a career and a big game. There's a fine line to walk."

Afanasiw's staff seems to have figured it out, winning five of the last six games.

Strangely enough, the year the Skippers lost at Hull was the same season that the Skippers won the South Shore League and had at least one more game to play in the playoffs.

"The last few years we've executed, except for a few occasions," Afanasiw said. "The kids are channeling the excitement in the right way."

Getting back to the big picture, Afanasiw said the whole of the season was a big success.

"Overall we would have liked to win a few more games," he said. "We could have used another four minutes against Hingham, maybe two more minutes against Mashpee and a dry field in Abington. We were close. I take great solace in the fact that it didn't matter if we were up 20 or down 20, there was never a moment that the kids every showed any sign of giving up.

"They played as hard as they could. They were always positive. Nobody pointed fingers. This was the most team oriented football team I have been associated with in 16 or 17 years of athletics."

Afanasiw said that was a

New women's league in the works

GateHouse News Service

Will the third time be the charm for a women's professional soccer league in the United States? U.S. Soccer President Sunil Gulati announced last Wednesday during a conference call in Chicago that an eight-team league will begin play in the spring of 2013.

The league is slated to kick-off in March/April 2013. Wednesday, Gulati was joined by representatives of the Canadian Soccer Association, the Federation of Mexican Football, and Boston Breakers Managing Partner Michael Stoller, speaking on behalf of the owners.

Two previous professional women's leagues in the United States ultimately folded, beginning with the Women's United Soccer Association (WUSA), which ran from 2000-2003, and the most recent Women's Professional Soccer (WPS), which lasted from 2009 through 2011. Local star Niki Cross of Pembroke played in the previous professional league – WPS.

The new professional league will include the Boston Breakers, Western New York Flash, Sky Blue FC of New Jersey, the Chicago Red Stars, and one team each in

Playoff hunt is on in SCHL

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

Welcome to the South Coastal Hockey League's parity run.

The league has 11 of its 12 teams that are in the hunt for a playoff spot in the final two weeks of the season. The only teams that are guaranteed of a postseason berth are the Stingers as they clinched first place in the Legends Division

The Rangers are in last place in the Classics Division, and they got a goal from Bob Sideropoulos with 1:35 left to tie the Canadiens. He then scored the game-winning goal in the shoot to give them a 5-4 come from behind win. Sideropoulos finished the game with three goals.

Bob Donahoe and Mike Crisp also scored and Jim O'Toole of Rockland had two assists for the Rangers.

Pembroke's Mike Fay and Kirk Souza both had a goal and two assists to lead the Canadiens. Tim Curran of Cohasset and Mike Fahie added a goal each for the Canadiens, who are tied with the Bruins for the fourth and final playoff spot in the Classics Division.

Steve Anzuoni and Peter Fallon of Hanover scored first period goals for the Bruins as they played to a 2-2 with the Red Wings. Steve Figioli and Ted Duggan scored the Red Wings goals.

Jeff Gauthier scored a goal and assisted on another one as the Maple Leafs took over first in the Classics Division with a 4-1 win over the Black Hawks. Rockland's Marty DeCourcey, Don Studley of Norwell, and Shawn Malloy also scored for the Maple Leafs who scored twice on the power play in the game. Norwell's Mike Murray scored for Black Hawks in the first period.

Scott Kelly of Pembroke scored two goals, Paul Smyth had two assists, and Pembroke's Mark Frano recorded his fourth shutout of the fall season in the Stingers 2-0 Legends Division win over the Whalers.

Mike Hankes, Jim Donovan, and Jack Parsons, both of Marshfield, and Alan Costa scored a goal apiece and Art Caron had two assists as Crusaders kept their playoff hopes alive with a 4-2 Legends Division win over the Toros. Ray DeGaust and Patrick Reynolds of Norwell scored the Toros goals.

Marshfield's Richard Petrosino and Tim Cruz, and Art Riccio scored a goal each as the Sharks also kept their playoff hopes alive in the Legends Division with a 3-1 win over the Saints. The Sharks are one point and the Crusaders are three points out of the fourth and final playoff spot with two games left. Paul Murphy scored the Saints goal in the second period.

Washington, D.C., Portland, Ore., Seattle, and Kansas City. Gulati said that 24 U.S. Women's National Team players, 16 players from Canada's National Team and 12 from the Mexican National Team will be a part of the league.

"Over the last several months, we've been doing a number of things, talking with some important constituents and stakeholders in the sport, not just in the United States but internationally," Gulati said. "I'm really very pleased to talk a little bit about the model that we've put together. That model is that U.S. Soccer will essentially run the front office of this league, that U.S. Soccer will fund the participation of approximately 24 players in the league.

"In discussions over the last several months with our neighbors to the south and north, I'm very pleased to confirm that the Canadian Soccer Association is joining us in that effort and the Mexican Federation is doing the same," he said. "So between those three federations and three governing bodies for the sport with long-term player development goals on the women's side, as well as on the men's side, we'll be funding a substantial number of national team players to participate in this league, along with the front office from U.S. Soccer. The real story today from our perspective is we're starting a league in eight important markets in the U.S. with the participation of the governing bodies and trying to create an economic model that is sustainable. From our perspective, the most important thing is that we've got a commitment from the eight groups we've talked about, a sustainable model."

Stoller believes the current setup, with all three federations in the mix, will help sustain a successful and sustainable league.

"We, as the owners of the teams, are all very excited about this league and the return of professional women's soccer to the sports landscape in North America," Stoller said. "There has been a tremendous amount of work done over past several months. We are also very appreciative to the Canadian and the Mexican Federations

Brazilian international and five-time FIFA World Player of the Year, Marta, had great success in the last incarnation of professional soccer in the U.S. Seen here playing for Tyreso in Sweden, it is yet to be seen if Marta will return to star in the U.S., where she had tremendous success.

"When I played at Marshfield we went 0-10," he said. "I think that as a group we went through it together and that made us stronger and better down the road."

Afanasiw said he expects next season will be a good one.

He should have a number of key players back, bigger and stronger.

Quarterback Chris Haggerty is a junior.

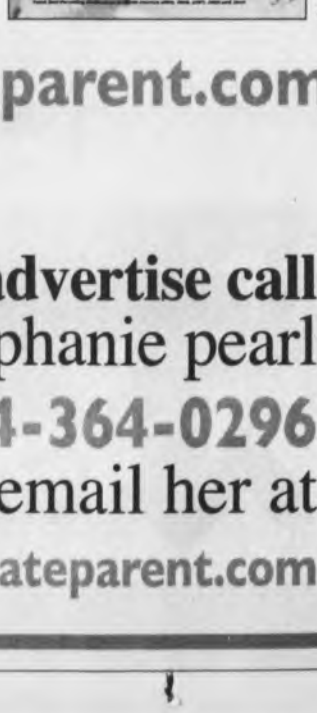
Running back Tim Gillis, who ran for more than 1,000 yards, and scored three touchdowns on Thanksgiving, is a sophomore. Rocco Laugelle, one of the most explosive players on the team, is a junior.

"Rocco played in Shane Haggerty's shadow a bit," Afanasiw said. "He's got explosive speed and great vision. We saw him mature and getting better as the season wore on. We moved him to kickoffs, defense, returning punts. He'll have a big year."

Laugelle, along with a number of players will be back in action together on the basketball court.

Afanasiw, who is also the baseball coach, encourages his players to play other sports.

As far as Shane Haggerty and Laugelle are concerned, the duo were part of one of the best plays of the season when Haggerty tipped a pass to Laugelle to avoid an interception and give the Skippers a 30-yard gain on Thanksgiving.



"Chris threw the ball where he was supposed to, but the sun blinded Shane for a second," Afanasiw said. "He said he saw Rocco and tipped it to him. It was like going for a rebound. Shane was covered well, so he batted it."

If there was any surprise on Thanksgiving, it was the play of junior Ryan Gillis, who had a breakout day with 138 yards, including a 72-yard touchdown run to open the second half.

Performers wait for their chance to go onstage for the first ever Deer Hill circus last Friday.

Connor McGovern spins a plate.

The circus comes to town!

On Friday, Nov. 30, more than 120 fifth-grade students at the Deer Hill School performed in their own Deer Hill circus. The "Circus in Residence Program" co-funded through a grant by the Cohasset PSO and the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF), consisted of professional circus performers teaching students how to perform classic circus acts such as acrobatics, juggling, plate spinning and tightrope walking. All third to fifth graders participated in this program as part of their regular Physical Education classes, the program cumulated with a performance on Friday night by the fifth grade students who received extra training during the week. "I liked working with all my classmates and trying some new things. I never thought being a clown would be so much fun", said Ben Smith, a Deer Hill fifth grader.

Parents, community members and school faculty all came out to support the students as they amazed the crowd with their newly acquired circus art skills. "This is the first year Deer Hill students will participate in this outstanding program, and it is my hope that it will become a beloved tradition that will strengthen friendships among students as they support one another in risk taking and overcoming challenges for years to come", said principal Jennifer deChiara.

Dear homeowner,

When gas prices increase, it's more expensive for me to produce, ship and install our replacement windows. And while most window companies will pass their increased costs onto their customers, I'm doing the exact opposite. For the first 40 customers, I'll protect you from any price increases for two years.

In this economy, some people aren't comfortable replacing all their windows at once. Replace the windows in just two or three rooms now, and I'll lock in your window discount for two years. With our 2 Year Price Lock, when you are ready to purchase more windows later, you'll be protected from any price increases due to the rising gas costs, or any annual price increase.

Don't miss out on our 2 Year Price Lock!

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF DEC. 17, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Make a start on that new workplace challenge. But get more information before you find yourself too deeply involved without knowing in which direction you should go.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You might find things becoming tedious as your schedule slows down for the holidays. Use this time to get information about a possible post-New Year job change.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The creative Twin finds outlets for her or his ideas in the early part of the week. The practical Twin takes it a step further and rallies support to turn the ideas into reality.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It's time to stop being intimidated by someone's negative behavior. Start taking positive steps on your own to help strengthen your position down the line.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Look closely at that so-called golden opportunity. Best to be a cautious Cat who approaches things slowly, than one who pounces without knowing where you'll land.

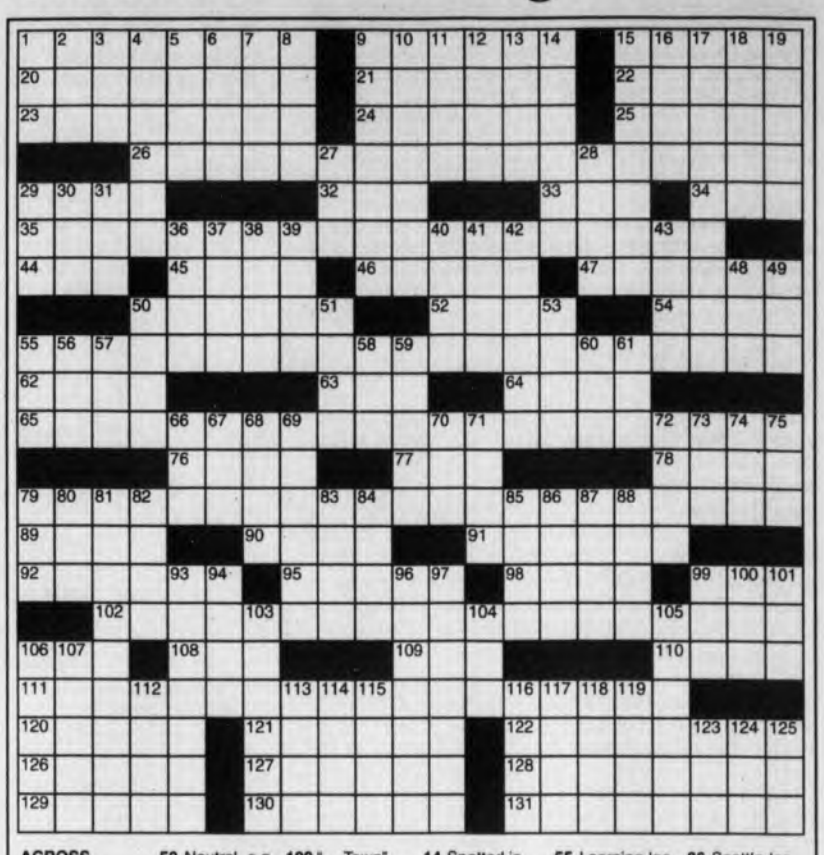
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your apology can resolve that personal situation before it overshadows the holidays. You'll feel better, even if you're only partly to blame for what happened.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Avoid overtaxing yourself, even if your energy levels are high and you feel that you can do it all. Best to pace yourself so you won't run yourself down before the holidays.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your sense of humor helps get you through a stressful period. Some of your quick quips can take the edge off any remaining negativity being aimed at you.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your artistic talents not only help you express yourself these days, but they also set up a line of communication between you and someone very special.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) It's fine to appreciate the importance of "proper form" for doing things. But relax a bit in order to allow newcomers on the project to feel less intimidated by you.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Use your boundless reserve of optimism to persuade others to work with you to resolve a difficult workplace problem before it can ruin your holiday fun.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You brim over with self-confidence as you begin to tackle a new challenge. And, before you know it, you're not alone: Others have taken the plunge with you.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a highly defined sense of commitment to others. You would make a fine social worker.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

J. Blake Thaxter Jr.

J. Blake Thaxter Jr.

COHASSET – J. Blake Thaxter Jr., age 94, a longtime resident of Cohasset, and a resident of Stratton, Vt., and North Palm Beach, Fla., died peacefully Nov. 19, 2012, at the home of his daughter, Deborah, with his family at his side.

Born in Malden, he was the son of the late Joseph Blake Thaxter and Marian (Traiser) Thaxter, and the younger brother of the late Jeanette Traiser Bowes.

Mr. Thaxter grew up in Brookline and graduated from Brookline High School. He spent many summers with his family on Cape Cod, where he was the lifeguard at Craigville Beach and won many diving and swimming awards.

In high school Mr. Thaxter met and fell in love with Jayne Crowell, whom he married in 1940 and to whom he remained devoted until her death in 1992. After their wedding, Mr. Thaxter and his wife spent his senior year at the University of Michigan, where he received his B. A., Class of 1941.

During college, Mr. Thaxter continued his stellar swimming career. He held a number of collegiate and national freestyle records while he was a member of the Michigan varsity swim teams that were the Big Ten and National Collegiate Champions for all four years of his tenure. After college, Mr. Thaxter joined the U.S. Navy and proudly served his country during World War II as an officer on the USS Crescent City, which saw action in the South Pacific. He never forgot the enemy torpedo that headed directly for his ship but at the last minute skipped over the hull.

He remained close to his fellow shipmates for the rest of his life. After the war, Mr. Thaxter graduated from Boston University Law school and embarked upon a distinguished legal career that included serving as the first assistant District Attorney for Norfolk County, acting as a special prosecutor for the city of Quincy in a criminal investigation into cemetery fraud, and opening his own law firm in Cohasset, where he practiced for over 30 years until his retirement.

For over 20 years, Mr. Thaxter served as Town Counsel for Cohasset, regularly advising town boards and serving as town moderator. He found great satisfaction in participating in town affairs, and was a founder and president of the Weymouth Junior Chamber of Commerce, the founder and president of the Cohasset Village Association, and a president of the Cohasset Rotary Club.

Mr. Thaxter was always a lover of sports, and after his swimming career, he became an accomplished badminton and tennis player. For many years he was the tennis chairman at the Cohasset Golf Club, and in 1960 he was a founder and president of the Cohasset Tennis and Squash Club, one of the earliest indoor tennis clubs in Massachusetts.

A few years later he founded and operated the Cohasset Paddle Tennis Club, the first paddle tennis club on the South Shore. He also loved skiing and spent many winters enjoying his home at Stratton, Vt.

In retirement, he enjoyed traveling with friends, playing tennis well and golf badly, weeding his vegetable garden and taking rides with his son Jody in his motor boat, the famous "Blue Ice".

Mr. Thaxter spent his life dedicated to taking care of his wife, his family, his friends, his community and anyone else who needed his help. He will be remembered as a mentor to young attorneys, a trusted advisor to his clients and friends, a tough but fair advocate, a role model to his children and at all times a consummate gentleman. He lived life to the fullest and will be sorely missed.

He was the beloved husband, partner and best friend of Jayne (Crowell) Thaxter; and the devoted and much loved father of Deborah Lincoln Thaxter and Joseph "Jody" Blake Thaxter III, both of Cohasset. He was a special grandfather to his grandson, Daniel Thaxter Steele; his stepgrandsons, Chauncey "Chad" Depew Steele IV and Samuel "Bart" Bartley Steele; and his step great-granddaughter, Corinthia Steele. He is also survived by his nieces, Terry Bergeson, Diane Bowes and Karen Beaton; and nephews, John J. Bowes Jr. and James N. Bowes.

A memorial service will be held Dec. 8, at 11 a.m. at the First Parish Church, North Main Street, Cohasset, with a luncheon to follow. Relatives and friends are kindly invited. Private burial in the family plot at the Hingham Cemetery will precede the service.

Contributions in Mr. Thaxter's memory may be made to the Scituate Animal Shelter, 780 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Scituate, MA 02066.

TOWN MEETING

Voters cast their "secret" ballots on whether to approve an amendment to the Town Manager Act that would eliminate a restriction on who could serve in the position. This means that no person, who is an elected or appointed town official, can become a permanent town manager unless they have vacated their position for a year. PHOTO/ALYSSA STONE

Town Manager Act stays as is

Vet clinic bylaw also addressed

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

When it came time to change legal language in a town zoning bylaw and a state law on the town manager, Cohasset voters said "nay."

Special Town Meeting defeated an article to amend the Town Manager Act, which determines who is eligible to be hired as a town manager in Cohasset. Voters also narrowly voted down a zoning bylaw amendment that sought to clarify the types of veterinary practices allowed in certain parts of town.

Cohasset citizens braved the rain and the possibility of missing the Patriots game to attend the Monday, Dec. 10 Special Town Meeting (STM), which was held in the high school auditorium starting at 6:30 p.m.

As several controversial issues were on the table – including the article to amend the Town Manager's Act and the article asking for a zoning bylaw change to allow for veterinary clinics to be built in a business/residential zone – the meeting had a larger-than-usual turnout for a fall Town Meeting, which typically has lower attendance than the annual spring Town Meeting.

It was standing room only as 423 registered voters packed the auditorium. Many were unable to find seats and lined up along the wall to listen to the explanations on

FISH volunteers

Cohasset F.I.S.H. is currently in need of a few more volunteer drivers. This organization provides rides to medical appointments for those in Cohasset without other options. Each volunteer is scheduled to drive (if needed) one weekday per month using their own vehicle. Our corps of drivers has declined over the summer months as a result of relocations, disabilities, or simple aging issues — thus the need for more volunteers.

If you are available and might be interested in serving Cohasset residents in this easy manner, please contact Dick Avery at 383-6043 or leave a message with the F.I.S.H. answering service (781) 545-7073.

POLICE BEAT

Marijuana paraphenalia found inside potato chip bag

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A resident of Rust Way notified police at 2:40 p.m. on Monday (Dec. 3) after discovering some discarded drug paraphernalia on the side of the road. The responding officer discovered an empty potato chip bag containing a plastic Baggie, a hollowed out pen stick used for smoking marijuana, and a lighter. Residue of marijuana was visible inside the baggie. Items were taken and disposed of, police said.

Injured bird

At 1:56 p.m. on Monday (Dec. 3), a caller in front of St. Anthony's Rectory reported an injured bird in the travel lane. The officer at the scene reported a cormorant on the front lawn of the Rectory. The Animal Control Officer responded to help but the bird was gone when he arrived, police said.

Seeking money

On Wednesday (Dec. 5) at 2:18 p.m., a cell phone caller reported a mother and two young children were asking for money outside Stop & Shop. Prior to officer's arrival, they left in a grey colored car with a Maine registration. No other description of vehicle or clothing available.

A similar incident outside a Hingham supermarket was reported to police in Hingham this week.

Suspicious man

An Avalon Drive caller reported to police at 3:16 p.m. on Wednesday (Dec. 5) seeing a man with a dark-colored shirt smoking behind the 3A Pizza building off Route 3A. The caller thought the man looked suspicious. While on the line with dispatch, the man left walking toward 3A. Officers were unable to locate him.

Welfare check

A caller reported an elderly woman, wearing a pink coat with a dog walking northbound on Route 3A toward Hingham at 8:17 p.m. on Wednesday (Dec. 5). Hingham police were notified; Cohasset units were unable to locate her.

Dispute

A resident of Pleasant Street notified police that on Friday (Dec. 7), he had received a bill for shingle work done on his residence from Hurricane Sandy damage. The work was never agreed upon and no estimate was given. When the contractor was contacted, he became verbally abusive toward the homeowner, police said. Officers spoke to the contractor, who apologized for his abusive behavior and came to an agreement on a price for the work with the homeowner.

Sideswiped

On Friday (Dec. 7) at 4:30 p.m., a 51-year-old-resident of Abington reported that his 2010 Toyota Tacoma had been sideswiped in the Post Office parking lot off Ripley Road. The other operator left the lot in a 2011 Chevy pickup truck. Officers ran the license plate provided and located the vehicle at Stop & Shop. The operator, a 68-year-old Cohasset man, was unaware he hit the other vehicle. No citations were issued and there no injuries, police said.

Keys missing

At 2:56 p.m. on Saturday (Dec. 8), a 49-year-old Cohasset man went into the station to report a possible past larceny. He had given his key ring to a clerk at Stop & Shop to swipe his card, and proceeded to his vehicle in the parking lot. He thought he had left his keys in the store, but when he looked around the store with the manager, they were nowhere to be found.

His house keys, vehicle and other store cards were on the ring. Loss prevention at the store was notified should they turn up, police said.

Abuse concern

A concerned resident reported last week that a resident on their street had been allegedly abusing an elder in the same house. She got the information from a juvenile that also lives at this same residence. Officers interviewed the neighbor and the elder, who denied any abuse at this time. Child services were contacted due to a prior incident at this address, police said.

Harassing calls

At 8:53 p.m. on Saturday (Dec. 8), a 51-year-old Cohasset woman called to report that she was receiving numerous harassing calls from a drunken neighbor that she was familiar with. Officers spoke with the 47-year-old neighbor, who agreed to stop calling her, police said.

Checks out

An officer on patrol was flagged down by a motorist on King Street, in the area of Dunkin Donuts at 9:53 a.m. on Sunday (Dec. 9) to report a man was walking on Route 3A and looked "out of it." The officer checked on the man, who was sober and not disoriented.

Kept the peace

A 32-year-old man, who is a former resident of Avalon Drive, requested that an officer accompany him to his former residence to retrieve some personal belongings on Sunday (Dec. 9). There was an active restraining order against him from his estranged wife, police said. An officer escorted the man to keep the peace. He was able to pick up his belongings, police said.

Vacant house

On Sunday (Dec. 9), a resident of Rust Way called to report kids in the neighborhood were using a vacant house with broken windows near her house. An officer checked the residence and found no sign of entry. Extra patrols were requested. A few windows out of a detached greenhouse were broken, police said. The house has been foreclosed and in the bank's possession, police said.

UPDATE

Grand Jury does not indict in brother-in-law fight

John T. McDonough, 45, of Cohasset will no longer face any criminal charges in connecting with the altercation that preceded the death of his brother in law, David M. Hoelzer, at a party at McDonough's home on May 8.

"This was an extensive and thorough process, and we thank the grand jurors for their diligence here."
District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey

In a document filed in Quincy District Court last week withdrawing the district court charges from prosecution, District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey's Office wrote that the case was being dropped after a Grand Jury had the opportunity to review all of the evidence – including the autopsy report and other information developed subsequent to McDonough's arrest on the manslaughter charge in May – and declined to issue an indictment.

"This was an extensive and thorough process, and we thank the grand jurors for their diligence here," District Attorney Morrissey said. "They had much more information available to them as they weighed these charges than was at the disposal of authorities proximate to the incident. Having reviewed the evidence personally, I understand and accept their refusal to indict."

"I spoke with Cohasset Deputy Police Chief Bill Quigley earlier today and I thanked him for the professional investigation and cooperation we received from his department," Morrissey said.

Quigley said: "The department respects the Grand Jury's decision with regard to this case and I'm proud of how our detectives and members of District Attorney Morrissey's office conducted this investigation."

McDonough and his wife were hosting a small party at their home at 344 King St. to celebrate the 45th birthday of Mrs. McDonough's brother, Hoelzer of East Dennis. Witnesses told police Hoelzer drank alcohol at the gathering and, as the night went on, became more violent and disruptive.

Witnesses say the violence culminated with a fatal fight between McDonough and Hoelzer.

Cohasset Police responded to the King Street address and encountered an unresponsive Hoelzer, who was transported to South Shore Hospital where he was pronounced dead.

McDonough was arrested charges of manslaughter and assault and battery in the death of Hoelzer. He was released on $50,000 bail.

At the time, McDonough's attorney Robert Harnais described his client as trying to protect his family in an incident that came to a tragic end.

TOWN MEETING

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

'No' to solar power on water plant

Alternative energy article defeated

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Solar panels will not be constructed on the water department land at 339 King Street anytime soon.

While last year's Special Town Meeting (STM) gave the town's Alternative Energy Committee (AEC) the go-ahead to pursue leasing the town-owned landfill and on the Middle-High school roof to a solar power vendor to install panels and help the town save money on energy, this year's STM voted against adding the water plant to the list of potential sites for a solar array in the project's Request for Proposals (RFP).

During the Monday, Dec. 10 STM, voters defeated article 13 concerning including the water plant on the RFP. The consensus on the Town Meeting floor was that citizens did not have enough information on where, exactly, an array would be built, and the potential effects it could have on abutters.

Wayne Sawchuk, Beechwood Street, said that he was concerned over where the array would be built on the water dept. property, wondering if the project was eyeing the open field next to 339 King St.

"I don't think town meeting should vote without knowing exactly what the deal is," said Sawchuk.

Tom Gruber, Pond Street, agreed, and asked if the article could be amended to make it so that the final outcome of the RFP process could be vetted by Town Meeting before any panels could be built. Town Moderator Dan Evans said that was the same as defeating the article.

Gruber explained that his view was, if Town Meeting approved the article, "we're kind of approving ahead of time a beacon of hope from the standpoint that we've heard a lot of people who abut that property and are concerned what will happen to that property... The only way you know how effective [the project] is, is by bringing it back [to town meeting] when it's completed and you have something to look at and say 'thumbs up' or 'thumbs down.'"

Gruber suggested giving the AEC and water commission preliminary approval to "get a proposal that can't be acted on," because "I don't like the idea of giving 'carte blanche' approval for a project town meeting doesn't really know the final elements of."

Glenn Pratt, King Street, said that according to the town assessor, the parcel in question was the five-acre parcel of land that is immediately around the water plant building, and that folks were confusing that parcel with the 400-acre parcel of land that is jointly owned by the town and water department, which is about to be given a conservation restriction.

"Once that happens, there's no way the array can even be considered by this town meeting to go anywhere other than the little five-acre parcel they're talking about right now," said Pratt. "It's a small parcel; you can see it from the street."

Sawchuk responded, "I'm more worried about the five acres.... Do we want a five-acre, about the size of Shaw's supermarket and all the parking lot, clear-cut and put down there? Because that's what they have the right to do when it says 'any or all of the property,' and I don't think that's right by King Street and Cohasset."

The town boards that reviewed the project, including the Board of Selectmen, Water Commission and Advisory Committee, all voted unanimously to recommend article 13. However, Town Meeting voted it down following a presentation by AEC co-chair Tanya Bodell and comments from abutters and other concerned citizens.

Bodell said Wednesday that despite the article's defeat, she was not disappointed by Town Meeting's decision.

"I don't see it as stopping our momentum," she said. "We still have a mandate from the town to proceed" with the solar panel project.

"The job of the alternative energy committee is to find alternative energy opportunities and bring them to the town, and then pursue those which the town believes have merit," Bodell continued.

Town Meeting's vote, she added, "indicates to us that, for now, the town would like us to pursue the two sites they voted for last year and put the water plant aside until we know more information."

What's next for the AEC in terms of bringing solar power to Cohasset?

The AEC, in conjunction with the School Committee's alt. energy subcommittee, will soon publish its RFP and go out to bid for a solar power vendor.

Then, "we'll proceed with the results of those bids to then come before the town with the school committee and the capital budget and advisory committees, all the parties involved, to make recommendations on how to proceed once we have the economics on the two existing sites for which we have permission to lease the land."

WHEREAS, such dedication and service to the Town cannot come without great sacrifice to personal matters and family life; and

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, that we, the Board of Selectmen of the Town of Cohasset, on the occasion of his retirement from public office, acknowledge, on behalf of all those he has productively served, his diligence to the duties of his elected office, and his constant and energetic pursuit of all of its requirements.

GIVEN under our hands and the seal of the TOWN OF COHASSET on this tenth day of December in the year Two Thousand and Twelve.

HOUSE PROJECT UPDATE

DEP rules in Fords' favor

The state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) has issued a superseding order of conditions for a house building project at 559 Jerusalem Road. The applicants for this project, Cohasset resident Chris Ford and his brother Ted, who lives in California, saw their order of conditions and application for a stormwater permit rejected by the Conservation Commission In October after several hearings held since the spring.

The Con Com voted down the project after airing concerns about the buffer zone between the construction and Straits Pond. The town's wetlands bylaw calls for a 50-foot setback and the construction would have been within the 100-foot buffer; however, the Con Com felt there could be detrimental impact to the surrounding wetlands, which are considered an Area of Critical Environmental Concern (ACEC).

The Fords appealed the matter to the Norfolk County Superior Court and to the DEP. The DEP ruling, issued on Dec. 4, 2012, approves the project as proposed and opined that the project meets the standards of the state's Wetlands Protection Act.

The matter will still go before the superior court.

Ford said of the DEP ruling, "We realize that there are other actions pending but we consider this a major victory in this on-going effort."

TOWN MEETING

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

Free cash article found 'missing'

Postponed to Annual Town Meeting

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Special Town Meeting is not always a night of surprises, but at least one turnout during the meeting seemed to come as a shocker to voters and officials alike.

Article 6 on the Town Meeting warrant, concerning the allocation of the town's nearly $1 million in Department of Revenue-certified Free Cash, was indefinitely postponed after a citizen discovered a problem with the warrant.

Ronnie McMorris, Doane Street, asked Town Moderator Dan Evans for a point of order when Article 6 came up for discussion. Holding her copy of the warrant, which was mailed out to Cohasset residents, McMorris explained that the warrant did not actually contain an article 6; the article was, however, explained in detail in a copy of the Town Manager's motions, which contained the numbers explaining how the free cash would be spent, if approved by Town Meeting.

McMorris explained that the warrant contained only an informational summary of how the funds would be allocated without any amounts detailed. The informational summary could not serve as the article, which McMorris showed was missing.

The blank space in the warrant where the article should be comes after the colon in the following sentence:

To see if the Town will vote to raise and appropriate, transfer from available fund pursuant to any applicable statute a sum of money as follows:

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski explains one of the articles before the voters at the Special Town Meeting on Monday. PHOTO/ALYSSA STONE

"While I understand the need for flexibility, there actually isn't an article six in the warrant," said McMorris. "It appears it should be indefinitely postponed. Where it indicates the article should be is a blank space and [then] says, 'board of selectmen for the town manager.' There's nothing in the warrant but an informational summary, but that doesn't mean that there's actually an article."

Evans asked for a moment to check the matter with Town Counsel. After a few moments, he thanked McMorris for pointing out the oversight and asked for a motion to have the article indefinitely postponed, which required a majority voice vote for adoption.

The "ayes" had it, as only a few "nays" could be heard voting against postponing the article. This means that the town cannot vote on how to use the free cash until Annual Town Meeting in the spring. This postponement will delay a number of initiatives.

Article 6 in the warrant did not mention the use of Free Cash for the allocation of funds for one time cost, but the town manager's motion explained how much money there was to be allocated, and how officials were recommending the funds be used.

Since the DOR certified Cohasset's free cash as close to $1 million, officials proposed having the funds divvied up in various areas.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski recommended how the free cash should be spent, and the Board of Selectmen, Advisory and Capital Budget committees voted unanimously to support most of these uses.

Of the $958,508 in free cash, which is a one-time surplus not to be added to the town's annual operating budget, Milanoski proposed funneling $498,508 into the town's stabilization fund; $100,000 to help pay for the town's estimated $32 million liability for Other Post-Employment Benefits (OPEB) for retired employees; $250,000 to put toward the Chief Technology Officer's town-wide IT plan, which included several technology and security upgrades; $90,000 to pay for consultants and other professional services, to be put into an account that would be safeguarded by the Advisory Committee; and $20,000 to connect the Lightkeepers House to the town's sewer system.

"There's nothing in the warrant but an informational summary, but that doesn't mean that there's actually an article."
Ronnie McMorris, Doane Street

During a phone call on Wednesday, Milanoski described the problem with article 6 as a "clerical error" that could have been caught sooner.

"All of the information [in article 6] was there; it was just out of order," Milanoski explained. "Unfortunately clerical errors do occur in life, but if someone identifies those, we appreciate it if they give us due notice so changes could be made prior to the town meeting floor... If someone had brought it to our attention prior to town meeting, it may have been able to be resolved. The ruling was that it was incomplete, so we have to push it off until annual town meeting."

Until then, "the money stays in the free cash account, and all those items [in article 6] will be looked at to approve at a later date."

Milanoski said that there was going to be a presentation on town finances as part of the discussion of article 6, but since the article was postponed, the discussion obviously could not take place.

"We had a very extensive presentation [planned] to talk about the financial health of the community that we weren't able to give because the article was pulled," he explained. "It was a good article and put money into stabilization and OPEB, and put new technology into the schools and town that's desperately needed."

As some of the issues were time-sensitive, including the $250,000 to fund the town tech plan, Milanoski said that he is trying to find other ways to fund these initiatives.

"We are looking at another plan and we will be talking about that on Tuesday," the town manager said, referring to the Dec. 18 Board of Selectmen meeting.

Durkin earns all-league honors at Milton Academy

Making memories

Hey there Cohasset...how are you? I am hoping that you are enjoying this Holiday time with family and friends taking in all that you can and want to, with a bit of a relaxed mode if possible. Too many of us seem to be on this frenzied pace of needing "25 hours" in a "24-hour" day and forget to enjoy all that is around us to celebrate this holiday season.

My favorite has been finding all the houses and locations locally of holiday displays, with very simple views as well as the homes with more light bulbs than I would care to count. It became a once-a-year adventure for my own children and myself and I now take children from the families I work with and it is a blast. Great times that create the memories....

Milton Academy

Proud parents, Jim and Jen Durkin wanted to share this news and I am happy they did. The Independent School League (ISL) Council awarded Milton Academy freshman Michael Durkin with All-League Honors for the 2012 cross country season. Michael finished the season ranked 13th among all varsity runners within the 16 high school teams of the ISL. Way to go Michael, awesome job!

Opinions

I am going to end the column this week with something that has been bothering me for a while and due something that I witnessed at a local store yesterday that made me want to share my "personal opinion" with all of you. As most of us know, our community is going through some ups and downs in regards to a number of town-wide issues and so many have strong opinions, (as we all should) on what we feel. My concern is that we are allowing those opinions to be the "only one that is right" in ways that cause a huge divide among family and friends.

While in line at the store, I overheard two gentlemen with differing opinions on a topic that is huge in town right now. They raised their voices, as the discussion grew heated. I looked around to see everyone staring at them and the looks on children's faces as they were hearing all of this. Everyone is welcome to an opinion but should be aware of the timing of these conversations, location and who is listening. When the loud discussion ended, the cutest little boy behind me then said, "Mommy, why is that man so mad at _____'s Daddy, he just said he is a "freaking a__h__le!" Great way to share huh?

Have opinions, share them in the right venues and let our views be heard, maybe even offer some thoughts and ideas you have! Just remember to do so at the proper time and place. We are a community first and foremost. Constructive feedback is valued but never at the expense of friends, children or neighbors, regardless of your opinion.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

Cohasset knitters

Helping those at Rosie's Place

When a group of Rosie's Place volunteers from Cohasset learned that 500 coats had been distributed to Rosie's guests in Boston last winter, they got out their needles and began knitting. Seeing a need for scarves, hats and mittens to complete cold weather outfits for the women, they also sent out a call to friends for leftover yarn. Bag upon bag of colorful yarns have been donated for this project: Wools, synthetics and novelties. The knitters have been working for months to craft cheerful multi-striped items – more than 50 hats, pairs of mittens and scarves reminiscent of "Joseph's Technicolor Dreamcoat."

Weekly "knitting bees" have provided an opportunity for the group to socialize in each others' homes, while admiring the creative ways in which the yarns were combined. The knitting was easy, even for beginners. (Scarves are 20 stitches wide, made on size 13 or 15 needles, knitted or purled, plain or in a variety of colors and stripes – depending on the creative design of the knitter – until 5 feet long.)

It is hoped that other knitters in the Rosie's Place community of friends will be inspired to grab their needles, gather a number of balls and skeins of yarn, and get to work making warm winter accessories for the women served by Rosie's Place.

LOCAL BUSINESS SPOTLIGHT

Wolfe goes green at work and home

By Erin Dale

Jimmy Wolfe with his baby daughter, Charlotte. COURTESY PHOTOS

Cohasseters who are mindful of an eco-conscious lifestyle are lucky to have a like-minded business owners in their midst. James Wolfe, owner of Wolfe Painting Company in Cohasset, brings that consciousness to work every day.

Committed to offering non-toxic paint options to his customers since opening up shop last year, Wolfe has also contributed to the Mariner's "On the Green Beat" column over the past several months.

For Wolfe, the decision to "go green" at work carries over from his daily life at home with his wife, Catherine, a Cohasset native (Wolfe hails from Scituate), and their two daughters: nine-year-old Kaylee, and newborn Charlotte, who was born last month.

"Obviously, we're thorough in the recycling department," said Wolfe. "My wife doesn't skip a beat. We have special labeled bins we use for recyclables."

Wolfe said that he is a fan of recycling at the town facility.

"Cohasset's public works department has done an outstanding job with the town's recycling and transfer facility. It is organized, easy to use, and a great support to eco-conscious residents. For those who have not ventured into recycling, I'd suggest you take notice the next time you visit the transfer facility to see for yourself how the town facilitates our efforts to recycle."

When they found out that they were expecting another little one in the family, Wolfe and his wife started " looking into green cleaning products as well, because you have to."

The Wolfes' commitment to living the "eco" way is also a family affair. Catherine's brother-in-law, Tim Lopes, is the owner of Go Green of Scituate, a landscape supply company that recycles yard waste and sells organic mulch. According to a press release issued this past spring, the Wolfe family is also participating in a program involving their Cohasset house, where a portion of their electricity will be supplied by a third-party green energy supplier.

Nowadays, the Wolfe family strives to keep toxins out of their lives, home and workplace. But the business owner explained that it was a well-known paint company that helped open his eyes to the well-established green movement.

"Benjamin Moore played a big part in my decision process with going toward the green route," Wolfe explained. "They have such wonderful products that are highly recommended and requested a lot throughout my client base around town, everything from 'Natura' to 'Aura,' all the green products that have come out the past few years."

These eco-friendly paint products contain non-volatile organic compounds, also called "low-VOC" paints. This means they are free of noxious chemicals and are considered safer than conventional brands. Wolfe said that these environmentally friendly paints are popular with families who have young children. The products are also especially popular with Wolfe's Cohasset clientele.

"I think it is more common around Cohasset," Wolfe said of the paint preference. "There are a lot of young families around and they're definitely going to go with the low-VOC paint. I imagine in the next few years we've got to be really conscious of that."

Wolfe Painting also recycles any remaining paint containers that the client may not want to keep.

Wolfe is so dedicated to providing safe paint products that he is offering free upgrades to the Aura low-VOC paint for this month and next. He is also offering 10 percent off to anyone who mentions that they read about Wolfe in the Mariner.

Wolfe's small business has grown substantially over the past year, a fact he is proud of considering the current economic times. "We've been really busy, which is fortunate in the down economy for sure."

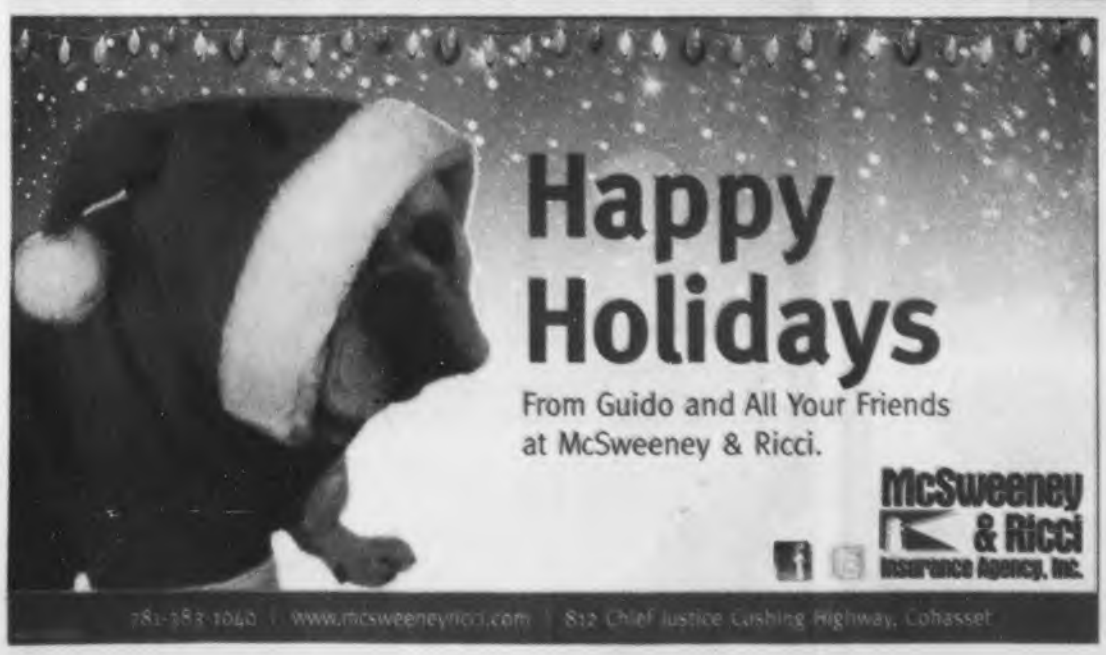
He is also proud of his crew, whom he called a great group of guys, and explained that he went through a "rigorous hiring process" to find them.

"There are five of us right now, and all the guys are really great to have on the crew," said Wolfe. One of his valued team members is his own dad. "I worked for my father when I was younger—now, he works for me, which is kind of funny."

Wolfe's crew has proven popular with clients as well. One of his customers, Christine Woodward, recently offered some praise.

"My experience with Jimmy was amazing and unlike any other painting experience I've had," said Woodward. "Jimmy and his team are professional, courteous, committed and most important, very detailed. When Jimmy first came over to look at the project, he told me that he has very high expectations of himself and his team. This became abundantly clear when I saw how beautifully my living room turned out. Jimmy and his team are true craftsmen."

Wolfe recalled another recent rave review, not from a customer, but from the customer's child.



"We were doing a job in Cohasset a few weeks back, and the homeowner had two children, a four-year-old girl and six-year-old boy," said Wolfe. "The son asked if one of my employees could come to his birthday party. It's nice to have such trustworthy guys on my crew."

OUR VIEW

Lots of drama

Whoever finds town meetings boring – has not attended one in Cohasset.

Recently at the Mariner office, we have been talking about the theatrical history of Cohasset – ranging from the Hanlon Brothers (English acrobats who set up shop here) in the late 19th century to Humphrey Bogart and Broderick Crawford gracing the Town Hall stage during the summer of 1934 to the filming of Witches of Eastwick in the summer of 1986.

The conversation then turns to the ongoing "drama" in Cohasset government. That, too, is nothing new but certainly adds to what makes Cohasset unique!

Monday's Special Town Meeting was no exception in terms of suspenseful drama. It featured a stage, a "secret" ballot, "missing" warrant article, standing-room only crowd, and pizza and games for the kids!

We understand there were "winners" and "losers" on Monday. There always are. But the key is moving forward in a positive direction. Those with heated opinions on "losing" sides of the issues taken up — need to dust themselves off, regroup and most of all, stay involved.

Cohasset is blessed with a lot of smart people who care about the town. Their determination and strong opinions provide great theater but also, in the end, should result in better government.

Bill Moyers puts it best: "Although our interests as citizens vary, each one is an artery to the heart that pumps life through the body politic, and each is important to the health of democracy."

Thanks, Steve

Former long-time Board of Health member Steve Bobo was honored with a resolution and standing ovation Monday night. Steve was also the long-time Mariner "Health Notes" columnist. Our readers have noticed that Health Notes has been absent from our op-ed page since Steve stepped down from the BOH. The BOH has assured us that they plan to reinstate Health Notes at some point because of the important service it provides to Cohasset. It is a testament to Steve that it has not been easy to continue the columns in his absence!

If there could be an honorary title awarded – we would like to award it to Steve – perhaps Board of Health Member Emeritus. Our thanks to Steve for all the years of Health Notes and his deep concern for the well being of Cohasset residents of all ages.

Vet clinic location opposed

Monday night at the Special Town Meeting, my neighbors and I opposed Article 15 in the town warrant regarding a zoning change. The last thing I wanted to do is oppose someone who is trying to make a living and who obviously is very well respected in the community.

Unfortunately, Dr. Stevenson purchased this property with the intent of moving her veterinary practice to 240 King St. without ever talking with any of the surrounding neighbors. Her plans were to have her business on King Street, not on 3A. When a person is coming into a neighborhood with intentions to substantially change the character of the area, I believe communication with the neighbors is key. Perhaps we could have persuaded her to look elsewhere before she made an investment in the property.

Looking at this particular property without any emotional aspect to it, it is quite obvious that putting a veterinary practice within 17 feet of an existing residence would have quite a negative impact on that existing residence. I appreciate the feeling in town of all the people who love the doctor and want her to remain in town. I just wish she had been able to find a more suitable location. If Dr. Stevenson should decide to move into our King Street neighborhood and reside at 240 King St., please be assured that we will welcome her in true Cohasset fashion.

Support for CPC proposals praised

(Editor's note: Russ Bonetti is chairman of the Community Preservation Committee).

I'd like to thank all the people who supported the four Community Preservation Committee proposals at Monday night's Special Town Meeting. I especially appreciate the virtual unanimity that these proposals received.

The CPC is looking forward to funding more projects in the year ahead, and encourages anyone who feels their group might benefit from CPC involvement, to come forward.

We are doing our best to use the money that you contribute through your taxes in a responsible, appropriate manner and appreciate the show of support demonstrated on Monday night.

LIFE AT CHS

Busy time before winter break

WHITNEY MALONE

Since every junior at CHS is required to take US History, the entire junior class traveled to the Hingham Shipyard on Thursday to see the new historical film Lincoln.

Can you believe there's only one more week until Winter Break? These couple of weeks before the holidays are busy, among the stress of tests and projects, yet also enjoyable and exciting!

Tuesday night, Mrs. Humphrey and Dr. Thomae held an informational meeting for a voluntary ecology program in Costa Rica for CHS students this coming April. In this program, students will explore the tropical ecosystems of Costa Rica and collect data on nesting sea turtles during nightly patrols on the beach (is there anything cooler than that?). The trip is limited to juniors and seniors, but the underclassmen will certainly have opportunities like this one in the next couple of years!

Since every junior at CHS is required to take US History, the entire junior class traveled to the Hingham Shipyard on Thursday to see the new historical film Lincoln. Taking advantage of another educational opportunity outside of school, we seniors will be seeing The Hobbit this coming Monday as part of the Anglo-Saxon Literary Unit in our English classes. (Okay, maybe Bilbo Baggins isn't as educationally important as Abraham Lincoln, but we're seniors.)

Thursday night, the Cohasset Sports Network, a student-run news network for Cohasset athletics, aired their first episode on 143tv, Cohasset's own cable television channel. CSPN's news anchors, senior Anthony Nahill and junior Matt McCormick, reported a "Fall Flashback" with interviews from coaches and players and highlights of the Fall sports' seasons and the Girls' Powder Puff game. Their episodes will air biweekly, so stay tuned for their next reports on Winter sports!

With the Middle and High School Chorus' Winter Concert last night, the Holiday Tour today, and the Middle and High School Bands' Winter Concert next Tuesday, I hope you are all getting into the holiday spirit, like everyone is at CHS!

GROWING ON THE FARM

Holly on the Hill

As hard as the farmers work to cultivate their crops, so too do these artisans spend a season or more to piece together, sew, knit, concoct, affix, stir, throw, brew and design.

JON BELBER

With the colder temperatures, snow flurries and warm clothes more consistently dictating the days and nights, the activities on the farm tend to turn away from the growing fields and harvesting. Soon, though, the seed catalogs will arrive and we will set our thoughts to reading short paragraphs about flowers, herbs, fruits, vegetables and checking to see when the garlic will poke through the warm blanket of straw.

While never far from the fields with still plenty of compost and seaweed to amend, the farmers and teachers at Holly Hill just recently welcomed large crowds to the farm for some cheer, good food and an opportunity to support local artists.

The fourth annual Holly Day Fair was great fun for children, adults and sort of a late harvest, last hurrah of the growing season. The farmers had plenty of energy and know-how to supply the farm stand in the main barn with broccoli, carrots, tatsoi, bulky parsnips and other late fall crops, along with honey, syrup and bread from fields, trees and ovens near and afar. The eggs in cartons from our hens, who produce fewer eggs with the waning light and colder temperatures, were coveted as usual and sold out within five minutes of opening. Though this was the last weekend of the farm stand, one can contact the farm to inquire about when eggs and other hearty greens or roots may be available in the coming winter months.

In an effort to coincide with the joy of still being able to find organic produce in early December, the Holly Day Fair encouraged folks to go for a hay ride, make a green wreath, try some homemade lunch options and tuck into the heated greenhouse to spy some jewelry, chocolate, soap, note cards, creative clothes, up cycled bags, rustic furniture, wood toys, pottery, jams and jellies. As hard as the farmers work to cultivate their crops, so too do these artisans spend a season or more to piece together, sew, knit, concoct, affix, stir, throw, brew and design.

It is neither a black Friday event or an online cyber spree, rather a chance to see the fruits of hard work, appreciate the variety of skills and hopefully select something that is appealing, useful and even thoughtful. Portions of the proceeds from the vendors are generously donated to the Friends of Holly Hill Farm and its mission to provide education about organic farming, sustainable agriculture and responsible environmental stewardship for the community.

For nourishment, if not snacking on the salad mix, volunteers and staff put on pots of vegetarian soup, cooked Stromboli in the mud oven, heated cider, coffee and cocoa and grilled some hot dogs and sausages, the latter from not-too-far away, pasture raised pigs in Wells, Vermont, courtesy of Brown Boar Farm.

Everybody eats and there were plenty of options for a warm lunch on a cold day. Several of the soups made an effort to feature Holly Hill Farm produce. Working, shopping and being a part of the farm is one way to increase our ability to become better chefs. Whether eating dessert first is your desire, or waiting until after the meal, there were plenty of desserts, also baked by friends, but less likely to feature sugar, flour or sweetness from any nearby farm. Just organic and perhaps all natural, everything in moderation.

The annual wreath making workshop saw people wrangle the grapevine into a circular shape, contemplate the locally gathered pine, cedar and, of course, holly (which on this furthest northeast coast land, grows wild on the hill and down low), and figure out how to intertwine these greens for a signature, seasonal wreath. Some repeat wreath makers from years past brought their starting grapevine base from last year to make it new again. With boughs, bows and ribbons available, it is pretty terrific to see it all come together, hang it in a special spot and know that you are an artist too.

This annual event may certainly look similar to one of the many, homespun church fairs and VFW holiday treats one finds the moment the Thanksgiving meal is trimmed and the leftovers dispersed. But at Holly Hill Farm this Saturday past, there was no Santa Claus to be found or carols to be sung, as the focus was on bringing people to the farm to see what was growing and experience first hand the work of local crafters, growers and artisans.

And this whole summary may well indeed be an open invitation to come next year. But in the meanwhile, there is always something to do, see and explore at Holly Hill. One need not have an excuse to come walk the field edges, discover the woods or say hello to the animals. There are many winter programs and workshops planned starting in January and thus every and any day can be a holly day at the farm.

PUSHING THE EDGE

Are you obsessed with 'being right'?

GLENN MANGURIAN

If you're like most of us, you like being right. Being right makes us feel good. My guess is that being right triggers a set of reactions that activate the pleasure center of our brains. Given the choice between being right or being wrong, we would all choose being right.

What is right and wrong?

The dictionary states the following definition for the word right: conforming to facts or truth. Can someone's opinion or idea be right just because it is considered as conforming to the truth or a fact? By the way, whose truth are we talking about? Two viewpoints can each conform to the truth so which one is more right? Or better yet, what might have been right yesterday may be wrong today.

Why the intense need to be right?

Being right is different than making decisions that turn out to be right. We hold being right more personally. Some consider it part of their identity or an indication of their goodness. To be right implies a need for others to recognize you as right. Some say that the need is rooted in self-esteem issues and low self-confidence. Chances are our need to be right is mostly an ego thing. People fight, stress themselves out and make those around them miserable with their ego's need to be right.

Breaking the "addiction": a three-step program

To start breaking your "addiction" to being right, consider the following: the next time you KNOW you are right in a disagreement, consciously back off the need to BE right and engage in this three step program.

Step 1: recognize your ego's need to be right.

Try backing off your ego's desire to prove you are right at all. Notice how overly invested you are in being right. This time, let it go. Let the other person believe they are right. Watch your reactions to letting them believe they are right.

Step 2: imagine being in the other person's shoes and seeing through their eyes.

Pay attention to how attached you feel to your position. What do you look like from the other person's viewpoint?

Step 3: Listen to the other viewpoint and imagine that it could be true.

Now this may be really hard. Try suspending disbelief just for a moment. Trust me, your world won't collapse. You might realize that there is much to gain from listening and not speaking. People will start to react differently to you. You will start feeling more connected. You might learn new things that had remained closed off to you before.

I'm not claiming to be right in this three-step program. Rather, I suggest you become a bit more aware of your natural preference to be right. While it is nice to be right, it better being happy.

A pocket full of cheer

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

I could feel it, sure as day I could feel it; as I strode through the mall in my shorts and flip-flops a few days after Labor Day, I could feel it – Christmas was coming. Funny things those retail locales, they have a unique way of helping us look into the future.

The holiday season, I couldn't ask for a more perfect time to be writing my first columns for the Mariner, but before I go all Clark Griswold on you, a quick word about this week's town meeting and the recent election. (Did I just hear a groan?)

The fine citizens of our cozy hamlet-by-the-sea did themselves proud by participating so strongly during this political cycle. From the yard signs across town to the dedicated group that stood out on Route 3A on an almost daily basis to the wonderful people who volunteered their time at the polls to the 85 percent of the people who turned out to vote – Cohasset stepped up and participated and that enthusiasm carried over to Monday's meeting as the saying "every vote counts" was never more evident. I hope that those approaching voting age were able to take notice.

Today there's crispness to the air and the yard signs have been replaced with wreaths and lights or in the case of my house, wreaths and an excessive amount of lights. How can one not love the spirit of the season, I feel invigorated this time of the year. Although, I surmise some may be too wrapped up in their own "things to do list" to fully revel in the festivities. Is that you? It is? Don't do it, don't allow yourself to get bogged down – embrace the spirit, the traditions, the carols, the cards, the parties and yes even the commercialism – embrace it all.

Bah humbug you say? Nonsense Ebenezer, don't wait for the joy to come to you, gather up a few random acts of kindness and have some fun.

Here's what to do: Pick a dollar amount you can afford and go purchase a few $5 dollar gift cards to a local establishment (or a few establishments) and stash them in your wallet or purse. Then as you go about your daily schedule take a moment to surprise someone with a gift card. No, don't go surprising your mailman, kid's teacher, house keeper, babysitter or anyone else that should be on your standard holiday appreciation list – this is different. Surprise the person who waves to you each day while walking the dog, the train conductor, the nice guy who pumps your gas, the guys at the recycling center, the kind person behind the counter at your favorite store or anyone else who you think would benefit from a smile. Simply hand them a card with little to no fanfare, smile, wish them a warm holiday season and be on your way. The bestowed holiday cheer will undoubtedly make someone's day; although you might be amazed to find out that the real recipient of this kindness is more often than not the person giving the gift.

If just seven people reading this think, "you know I'm going take $15 and go for it," not only would they be putting a few dollars into the local economy but combined there'd be over 20 people receiving an unexpected holiday smile. Do you have any idea how contagious a holiday smile can be? Wicked contagious, and that's a good thing. Who knows, perhaps, just maybe this could be the beginning of a wonderful tradition.

Thanks for reading and happy holidays.

John McSheffrey was born and raised on the South Shore and he and his family have been part of the Cohasset community since 2007. After numerous letters to the editor, John's joined the Mariner team and can be reached at jjmcs@aol.com; he welcomes any and all input.

FOR THE RECORD

Obituaries are in families' hands

GREGORY MATHIS

One of my first duties as a rookie reporter was to take information provided by funeral homes and apply AP Style and some sentence structure and turn them into obituaries for the various newspapers in our group.

While my passion was most certainly sports reporting and covering the local high school and youth scene, I quickly learned how important the obituary page was, not only to the family members of the deceased but also to our readers.

My first publisher, the late Phyllis Hughes, used to tell us that our mission as the hometown newspaper was to do our best to chronicle the life of each person in the community – from birth to death and everything in between.

On our pages you'll find birth announcements, school accomplishments from kindergarten through high school, college and beyond, engagement announcements, wedding announcements and obituaries. Of course there will be other milestones and noteworthy events chronicled throughout a lifetime as well.

The obituary is in many regards the final story and Phyllis was a big believer in having that story told, not only for the family but the community as well.

Several years ago, our company fell in line with what most other media organizations were already doing and began charging to place obituaries. So now family members work with funeral home directors to write that final remembrance. We're no longer concerned about printing flowery language and whether the write-ups follow AP style as families pay to have the obituary placed in newspapers and online. Since they're basically paying for an advertisement, they can pretty much say what they want.

Obituaries have long been a staple of the newspaper and continue to be, even with the shift to paid and online. It provides a keepsake for the family and informs the community about those who pass away. The online version of what you see in the newspaper, which is powered by Legacy.com on Wicked Local, offers a guest book and allows for family, friends and acquaintances to post their condolences and remembrances.

My father recently passed away after a long illness so my family and I were faced with the task of writing his obituary. It's been awhile since I've written an obituary and it was difficult sitting at the computer trying to tell my father's story in a limited number of words.

My sister got the process rolling by compiling the obligatory list of survivors and the members of our family who passed away prior to my father. That was the only piece we had for several days as we focused on getting many of the other details surrounding his death in order.

Finally we got to the point where we could begin to pull together the parts of his life we wanted him to be remembered for. It was difficult trying to pinpoint exact dates of when this happened or when he did a certain job, but like other families we worked our way through it to come up with a small snapshot of an extraordinary man who lived a full life, although we would have liked to have had him around for many more years.

STATEMENT FROM PAUL CARLSON

Response to rumormongering

On Wednesday, Dec. 12, I heard that a totally discredited ugly rumor about a dedicated town volunteer, who is also a highly respected town resident, has been resurrected from ignominy in the continuing battle by some to bring down Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski. We have heard these ugly rumors peddled in the past to dishonor upstanding members of our community. It is a despicable practice and I know that the adult thinking citizens of Cohasset abhor those who peddle this trash. I have made it clear after working with Michael for the past 10 months that I think we have found a highly talented municipal manager, but I also respect those who have different opinions. I am confident that the overwhelming majority of them also condemn this practice.

I cannot respect those who dishonor themselves with their vicious hate. Fortuitously for the rest of us, those who throw mud usually end up with more mud on themselves than on their targets.

Regardless of your views on current controversies, those who would like to enjoy living in our fair town must stand up to the hate mongers who gleefully drag the town and its hard working volunteers and employees down to their own level.

Paul Carlson, Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, resides at 18 Old Coach Road. These are his opinions and do not represent the position of the Board or the other individual members.

each article and cast their votes. A quorum of 100 voters was needed to start the meeting, and the quorum was met within minutes of the meeting's start time.

Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre said that this was a large turnout. According to town reports dating back to 1999, this was the second most-attended Special Town Meeting since then. The '99 STM had 422 registered voters, while the 2003 STM had 435 (see sidebar).

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski agreed, saying, "It was a great turnout for the community."

There were 15 articles on the warrant, and Town Meeting dealt with each one, wrapping up the meeting around 11 p.m. The two most contentious articles on the town manager act (article 14) and zoning bylaw (article 15) were the last two to be discussed and voted.

Due to its controversy, Town Moderator Daniel Evans decided that the town manager act amendment should be voted on by secret ballot. After citizens flocked to the front of the auditorium to slip their "yes" or "no" papers in the ballot box, the discussion on the zoning bylaw was held while the ballot votes on the town manager act article were counted.

Amendment defeated

The town manager act article was defeated 188 to 158, so the current town manager act as it was written 15 years ago by a group of Cohasset citizens, and enacted into state law, remains the same. This means that no person who is an elected or appointed town official can become a permanent town manager unless they have vacated their position for a year. The amendment asked voters to change the word "person" to "selectmen" and increase the period of separation time from 12 months to 15, to allow for one election cycle to pass.

Some speakers on the subject opined on the qualifications of current Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, whom the selectmen appointed as a volunteer interim town manager in late February (following the suspension and eventual firing of former town manager Michael Coughlin) before giving him a contract as Acting Town Manager in March, and voting to keep him onboard until June 2013. However, Evans pointed out throughout the discussion that the article in question was not a "referendum" on the current town manager but merely concerned a language change in the law that would affect the hiring of future town managers.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said Tuesday morning that the sentence that was being addressed in article 14 – paragraph 3, section "i" of the Town Manager Act – has nothing to do with an acting town manager. This means that it is legal for Milanoski to continue serving as acting town manager.

Merle Brown, a member of the Governance Committee (the group of citizens who were charged by the selectmen to review the town manager act, town bylaws and other town government matters), said during the article 14 discussion that the amendment to the act would not affect Milanoski who, as of March 2013, will have been away from his town official duties for a full calendar year and will technically be eligible to become a permanent town manager.

Town Counsel, however, has said otherwise. DeRensis said in March, when Milanoski was appointed, that anyone who serves as an interim or acting town manager is exempt from taking the position permanently.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson verified this in a phone call Wednesday. "Town counsel has said numerous times he cannot be considered," Carlson said of Milanoski. However, "in March it will be the anniversary of when he left his last appointed position."

Carlson said that this subject would be addressed during the Tuesday, Dec. 18 selectmen meeting.

Vet clinic

The results of the town manager act vote came right after the discussion on the proposed changes to the zoning bylaw concerning veterinary clinics; that discussion lasted for an hour. Opponents to the bylaw change, which was supported by the Planning Board and Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA), were focused on the project that lead to article 15 getting on the STM warrant.

There was a standing-room-only crowd at the Special Town Meeting as evidenced by those standing along the far wall.

In October, the ZBA received an application to build a walk-in dog clinic at 240 King St., but voted to withdraw the application without prejudice because the current town bylaw did not allow for such a property for exist. The zoning bylaw on veterinary clinics, which is a 60-year-old law, only deals with large-scale veterinary hospitals or stables that treat livestock and wild animals, and requires a 200-foot setback from any residential property. The proposed changes to the bylaw would have made distinctions between a vet hospital for livestock and wild animals, vet clinic for household pets, and pet grooming facility.

Abutters to the property on King Street, which was purchased by town veterinarian Dr. Fawn Stevenson, argued that the bylaw change would pave the way for her project to go through as well as other future vet practices, and would leave only a 17-foot buffer between the new vet practice and the nearest neighbor. Stevenson argued that the bylaw was not about King Street but about the definition of what a vet clinic is, and added that she might not even construct her clinic there after all. She also said that the current bylaw made her nervous as a business owner, because it means that her current clinic, Crazy Paws, located in the James Brook Crossing shopping center on Pleasant Street, is technically illegal.

When it came time to take a voice vote, the "ayes" and "nays" were equally loud. Evans called for a second voice vote, but said that he could not make a call either way and asked for a hand count. Article 14 needed a two-thirds majority vote to pass, so while 79 were for the proposed change while 76 voted against, it was not enough of a majority to pass the article.

Other articles

• Special Town Meeting also voted to approve four projects brought forth by the Community Preservation Committee (CPC) that will be funded with Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds: $260,000 for the Sailing Club's new clubhouse; $75,000 for a computer survey to study ways to renovate the "Old" Town Hall; $25,000 to repair dilapidated fencing at Milliken Field; and $37,113 to restore woodwork and flooring and preserve historic artifacts at the Historical Society's Paul Pratt Building.

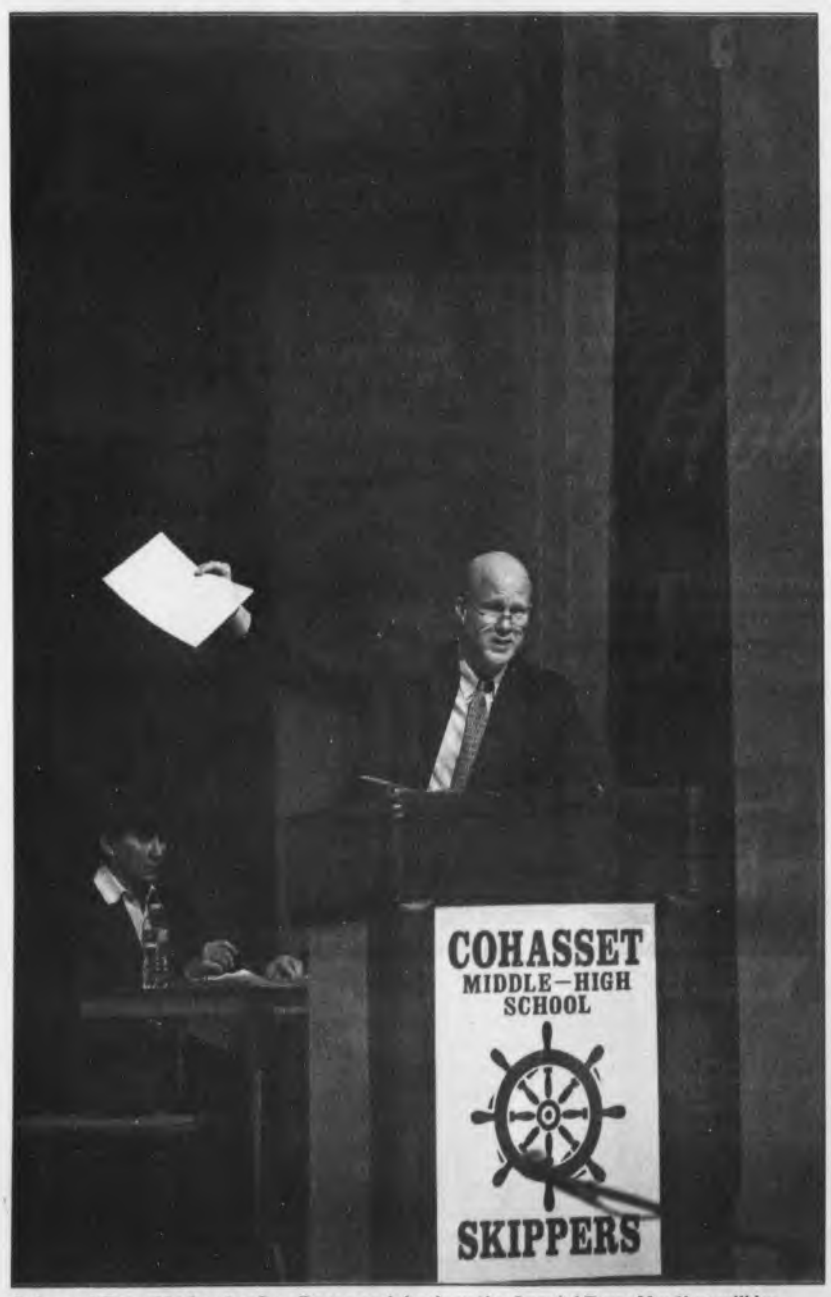
• Town Meeting approved paying unpaid bills from previous years as well as supplemental appropriations to the fiscal year 2013 budget, including funding $92,000 to cover overtime in the police department and $60,000 for the same issue in the fire department. Voters also approved $50,000 in legal services, which is coming out of the police department's personnel line item since Police Chief Mark DeLuca's employment contract will not be renewed when it expires next month.

• A few sewer articles were also on the table, and Town Meeting voted in favor of each one. This included transferring $900,000 from the department's retained earnings to the Betterment Debt Stabilization fund to pay for debt service on borrowings for a sewer project. Town Meeting authorized $50,000 to pay for professional services to assess a sewer expansion "to address environmental and public health concerns, protection of water supplies, analyze and evaluate the outflow into the harbor, [and] protection of water resources including but not limited to Cohasset Cove and Harbor."

Town Meeting further approved an amendment to the sewer department's FY '13 budget, which sewer commission John Beck called a "mid-course correction" as the department "gets the books straight." Beck said that the department is expected to "have more revenue than the amended budget calls for" by the end of the fiscal year.

• Voters also approved amendments to the Water Department's FY '13 budget, including a decrease in water rates. The water commission had voted 2-1 to reduce the rates, with commissioner Leonora Jenkins as the dissenting vote. Jenkins passed out an amendment to voters as they entered the meeting Monday night, proposing a 10 percent decrease in the fixed quarterly charge rather than the variable rates, the latter of which the other two commissioners were proposing.

After discussion, however, Town Meeting defeated Jenkins' amendment and approved the water department's FY '13 budget, thereby reducing the variable rates. As approved by Town Meeting, the rates for Step one users, who use zero to 2,000 cubic feet per quarter, will be reduced from $5.68 per quarter to $5.11. For Step two users (2,001 cubic feet or more), the amount is going from $11.35 per quarter to $10.22.



Solar array

• Town Meeting voted "no," however, to adding the water plant as a potential site on a Request for Proposals (RFP) to install solar arrays on town property; last year's Special Town Meeting already approved leasing the town-owned landfill at 81-91 Cedar St. and the Middle-High School roof to solar power vendors, with the potential for the town to realize cost savings on energy. While four groups of town officials – the Board of Selectmen, Water Commission, Capital Budget and Advisory committees – all voted unanimously to recommend the article, opponents said they felt the matter was rushed and that they did not want the town to enter into a long-term lease of the water plant without knowing where, exactly, a solar array would be placed, how big it would be, and if any clear-cutting of trees would be required.

• Perhaps the biggest surprise of the night was the last-minute indefinite postponement of article 6, which happened as the article was about to be discussed. Ronnie McMorris, Doane Street, pointed out that there was no article 6 in the warrant that was mailed out to voters a few weeks prior to the meeting, only a blank space followed by the words "Board of Selectmen for the Town Manager" and an informational summary. McMorris said that the article could not be voted on legally; after conferring with Town Counsel, Evans said McMorris was correct, and Town Meeting voted to indefinitely postpone article 6. The article concerned the spending of the town's Free Cash, which was certified by the state's Dept. of Revenue (DOR) as nearly $1 million, and was to be used for one-time expenditures.

The acting town manager recommended that nearly $500,000 of the free cash should be placed into the town's stabilization fund; another $100,000 was to go into the trust fund to deal with the town's $32 liability for Other Post-Employment Benefits (OPEB) for retired town employees; and $250,000 would have paid for "phase one" of the town-wide IT plan proposed by Chief Technology Officer Rob Bonnell, which involved replacing old computer workstations, safety and security upgrades, and more.

The allocation of free cash will have to wait until the spring's Annual Town Meeting.

Rec. event entertained kids while parents voted

While mom and dad were voting on town issues in the high school auditorium Monday night, kids had something to do.

The Recreation Department hosted a pizza party and activities night in the gym for kids whose parents attended the meeting. Families paid $5 per child to enjoy the pizza and a dance party.

Recreation Director Ted Carroll said that the event had a fairly good turnout, and parents appreciated the service; 48 children attended the program, allowing around 25 parents to cast their votes.

Carroll said that this type of program has been attempted at town meetings in the past, "but not with the all-star team of staff that we had [Monday] night."

This all-star staff included Carroll, Kevin Dykas, Linda Bolster, Marie Dunkelberger and Kelly Grech.

If the success of Monday's program is any indication, it sounds like the Rec. Dept. could host something similar at the next town meeting.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that he and Carroll discussed having this type of event available at the May Annual Town Meeting, but were unable to implement it at the time.

"This was something Ted and I talked about in March," said Milanoski. "We were unable to get it for annual town meeting, but talked about it for special town meeting, and it was a great success."

"Parents were very thankful and receptive," said Carroll. "We had comments from older parents wishing it was done in the past when their children were younger."

TOWN MEETING

They said it:

Special Town Meeting on the Town Manager Act

Selectman Martha Gjesteby explains why she opposed Article 14 to change the Town Manager Act. PHOTOS/ALYSSA STONE

Monday night's Special Town Meeting voted down a proposed change to the Town Manager Act.

The act, which was approved by the 1997 Annual Town Meeting and enacted by state legislature, says that no "person" who has served in a volunteer capacity or worked for the town is eligible for the position unless he/she has vacated the position for a year.

A secret ballot vote defeated the article by 30 votes, 188 to 158.

The proposed language change, brought forth by the town's Governance Committee and recommended by the Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee, was in section 3, paragraph "i," and would have changed the word "person" to "selectmen" and the time of absence from 12 months to 15.

Many citizens, including several officials, spoke out on why they felt the change was crucial; why others felt that the change was being rushed through; and whether the matter was a "referendum" on current Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, who was appointed by the selectmen in March and who previously served as chair the Governance Committee (formerly the Town Manager Search Committee) and as an associate member of the Conservation Commission. Milanoski resigned from his volunteer positions in March shortly after his appointment as acting town manager, replacing former town manager Michael Coughlin, who was fired after six months on the job. Coughlin has filed a lawsuit against the town and selectmen and is seeking reinstatement.

The Board of Selectmen signed a contract with Milanoski through June 2013. His approximate annual salary is $130,000.

According to Town Counsel, anyone who has served as an interim or acting town manager is exempt from becoming a permanent town manager. However, the selectmen are trying to negotiate a contract to keep Milanoski onboard through June 2015.

If the change to the Town Manager Act had been approved, it would have required a Home Rule Petition and approval by the state legislature. Some were concerned about submitting only one small change to the legislature while the Governance Committee is still working on their review of the TMA. Governance Committee chair Christine Cunning admitted that during a recent meeting with representatives from the state's Department of Revenue, the DOR advised that submitting changes piecemeal was "not the best way to do it."

Town Meeting was quite outspoken on this topic, with some saying the town needs stable leadership, while others seemed to feel that the selectmen handpicked Milanoski for the job and questioned his qualifications. Below, a few highlights from Monday's meeting.

• Fred Koed, selectman: "The majority of the selectmen feel this [change] will correct the flaw in the town manager act. My understanding is that this language was added 15 years ago because citizens were upset at the previous hiring of a former selectman as town administrator. The selectmen are fine with this provision because the power to select a new town manager resides with the board of selectmen. But, somehow, 15 years ago blocking the selectmen turned into blocking anybody inside town government. The majority of the selectmen believe it is in the interest of the selectmen and town that they have the least restriction possible in who may be eligible candidates for town manager. The governance committee has researched 18 other peer town manager acts and has yet to turn up another town in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts with such a restrictive prohibition on who may be considered for the TM position."

• Martha Gjesteby, selectman: "It is very simple; the town should not change legislation quickly, especially for one person at a special town meeting. The governance committee has been studying boards and the town manager act. They were not ready to endorse any changes as they are planning on making many recommendations... Of course they will have a comprehension hearing so that the citizens will know fully when their work is completed. You don't rush such a change to suit one person... This is not good governance... Town managers are most successful from out of the community as they do not have political pressure on their decisions."

• Paul Carlson, selectmen chair: "The proposed change simply widens the pool of possible candidates and will allow promotion from within our existing group of dedicated town officials... People talk about external searches; external searches are risky. No matter how well you've checked out that candidate, you'll never know that person as well as somebody you've worked with. That is why most organizations, whether corporate, non-profit, or government, prefer to promote from within. People tend to go from without when they don't have appropriate candidates on the inside or they want to make a change in the direction of the operation. Our past three town managers were all hired from the outside... and all have not worked out well. I think we need to try a new strategy."

• Tom Gruber, Pond Street: "I was the lead proponent on the original town manager article and assisted in its formation... Simply stated, its fundamental concept was to bring professional, experienced town management into the position as CEO of our town. The CEO is responsible to the board of selectmen, similar to a board of directors at a corporation. The CEO is responsible for managing all day-to-day operations and the board of selectmen provides strategic leadership... [The town manager act] is not a town bylaw; this is a state law. The town manager act was written in such a way... that insiders cannot be slid into the town manager position after serving in elected or appointed town positions. This was designed to prevent insiders from grabbing control of the town from within...

"We felt that as in all things, politics and operations must be open, public and transparent... We've written a contract to employ a town manager that does not comply with Commonwealth laws in two ways. As you've heard tonight, that person does not meet the criteria associated with severance from town activities for a period of one year, and the law requires also a majority vote by the board of selectmen needed to fire a town manager, but the contract that has been written [for Milanoski] requires a super-majority to fire the town manager... Clearly, the state laws have not been followed. Now we're trying to dig our way out from this embarrassing position by an attempt to change the state law retroactively. Whether or not the town manager act needs to be updated is a separate matter. This needs to be discussed and deliberated over a period of time, and not as an emergency, eleventh-hour end run because something was done illegally. The laws are there to be followed by all; the board of selectmen needs to reset and legally hire a town manager."

• George Charmillard, Atlantic Avenue: "One thing that's not changing [in the TMA] is the accountability of who does the hiring, who does the performance evaluations, who sets the goals... and it's not any of us, the 400 people in this room; it's the five people of the board of selectmen. They have an incredibly tough job. They're required to make very difficult decisions, very often, that are emotionally charged... We've been very fortunate over the years to have a highly talented group of people on the board of selectmen, and they've been able to steer us over the last several years... through many challenging and contentious problems. In my opinion, the sum of all these decisions appear to be moving the town forward...

"We have a much stronger team in town hall than we've ever had, including the new finance director, treasurer collector and IT professional... To hold those gains and build momentum... they [the selectmen] say the restrictions on them by the town manager act should be removed, now. Not six months from now, not a year from now — now. Based on what I've seen, the judgments made by the board have served the town very well. If they say it's an important change, then it's important that we make the change. Let's take the shackles off the selectmen, get behind the wheel, and move forward."

• Agnes McCann, Doane Street: "In my opinion, a few things I've heard tonight are not correct. The first is that this change opens up the pool of applications. By instituting the town manager act, we were trying to get a way to have a professional town manager, and there are many good reasons for having one. The selectmen's job is difficult, and they need someone who's qualified. If you open it up to anyone who's actively involved in town committees and boards, it basically creates an inside track... This restriction is one of the few controls that exists in the law as it is today, and by removing it... there won't be a pool, because everybody will know that the board of selectmen is going to choose their preferred candidate... You'll have people who will be drawn to volunteer to get in on that inside track, and to try to win favor and win the job. We shouldn't be letting one person audition for town manager; we should be having a professional search with professional help to find a professional town manager. If anything, we should be putting more restrictions in the town manager act, not fewer... There is no reason to do this now."

• Tom Killilea, Little Harbor Road: "When you go out to do a global search, you end up hiring a search consultant – that's a misnomer for a headhunter. The headhunter brings to you whomever he can find, and for the most part in the town manager business, he brings to you people who have been town managers somewhere else two or three different times, in two or three different communities, unsuccessfully, because that's what's presented to him. The other alternative is to find people you don't know who have never done the job. The best possible course of action, and corporate life has learned this the hard way, is to develop your own from within.

"In a small town, that's hard to do, but in this town, the resources and personnel talent pool is much deeper than we all believe. We happened to find a person who's brought stability to the process who's doing a good job. We are lucky. The next town over, Abington, has just voted 3-2 to suspend or to fire their town manager; they've hired the same search consultants we hired last time. They're going to look around and find that we have a town manager who is interim town manager, acting town manager, and basically, they're going to call him. And I'm going to tell you this town cannot afford to go through the changes in personnel we've been through. If you make someone interim or acting anything, he has no authority; he can't negotiate with anybody or any subject because they'll just wait him out. So the right reason for doing this now is just exactly those kinds of issues. We need timely decision-making. We don't believe a global search brings you anything but the worn out, beat up, no longer useful personnel."

Selectman Fred Koed explains why he supports Article 14 that would amend the Town Manager Act.

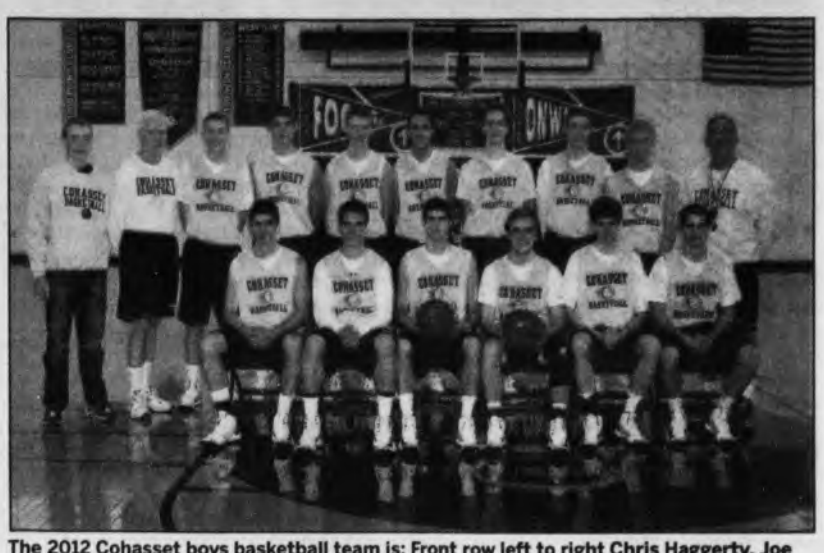
BOYS BASKETBALL

Ready to rock n' roll

Skippers open tonight at Carver

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com



There are many people who are excited to see the Cohasset boys basketball team get back on the floor tonight at Carver.

One of those is coach Bo Ruggiero, who returns to the sideline after missing the late part of last season and the MIAA tournament after he was injured in a head-on collision with an alleged drunk driver on his way home from a practice last February.

Now, Ruggiero has recovered more than enough to get back to his team and is excited about what his team brings to the floor this year.

Originally, the season was

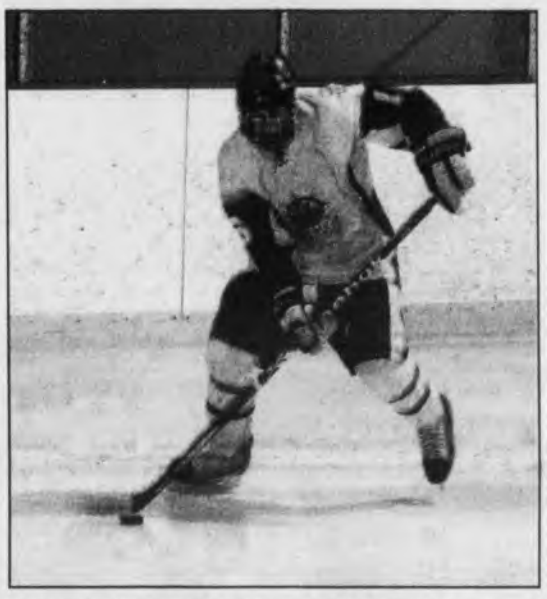
The Cohasset Mariner

The Skippers opened their season on Wednesday night against a new rival, The Silver Lake Lakers.



With veteran goal tender Brandon Winn in the net, Coach Bob Walsh was confident that his new young team could hold their own against a fast Laker squad.

"I'd seen some of the Silver Lake boys over the summer and then again at conditioning camp prior to the start of the season and I new they could skate," remarked coach.

This year, Cohasset has dramatically increased their difficulty of schedule. At the end of last season, Carver/Sacred Heart, Harwich/Upper Cape Tech and Old Rochester Regional were dropped from this year's schedule for various reasons.

Coach Walsh immediately went on the hunt to fill the game slots with an array of powerful teams beginning with Silver Lake, Hanover and Scituate with an added game against Tri-Valley powerhouse, Medway.

"We definitely have our work cut out for us this season. We had seven graduate last year and lost another three to various moves; all starters for the Skippers," said Walsh. "This year's team had to go back to school to learn how to play hockey all over again. My hope is that they can hold it together and be capable of skating with these really good teams while they're still learning a different game. After last season, these boys have a big reputation to live up to."

Last year the Skippers scored more goals (124) than any other team in all three divisions in Mass hockey.

"You know that teams are going to be out gunning for you after that kind of season," said Walsh. "This year we are more likely to win or lose 1-0 or 3-2 until we can find our scoring niche."

The Skippers lost their first game to the Lakers on Wednesday night 2-1. The Skippers drew first blood with a goal by sophomore Jeff Powers assisted by junior captain Chris Lund and junior defenseman Derek Benson.

Brandon Winn played outstanding, facing 28 shots and turning away more than half of them before Silver Lake could put one in at seven minutes of the second period to tie the game at one a piece.

"We didn't get one shot in the second period which really got me going," explained the coach. "You can't score if you don't shoot."

Third period action had the Skippers outshooting the Lakers 8-5 but at 4:22 of the period the Lakers were able to sneak one by Winn, giving them the lead and eventual game winner.

12/12/12 turned out to be a special day for the Cohasset Skippers as they upset Division 2 Hanover 4-1 on Wednesday night at the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke.

Tonight it was freshman Liam McHugh between the pipes for his high school debut.

"I was nervous all day," said McHugh. "Once I made the first save though I really got into it."

When asked about the change in goaltenders coach Walsh answered.

"We have three really good goalies this year," he said. "They know they're good and they know that I know they're good, so when I met with them during tryouts I explained that they all were going to get games and when the season starts to close out, we'll decide, based on where we are and what we need to do, which way we'll go. All three work hard and compete

Ready to roll

WILL WASSERSUG

Well, the weather may not be all stormy and snowbound, but it's beginning to feel like winter.

It might be the little thermometer in my car that read 28 degrees when I took my daughter to the bust stop this morning, or the fact that I bundle up for everything and complain that my electric blanket isn't working in the middle of the night.

It also might be that I look at the sports schedules and see that everything is about to get started very soon.

In some places it has.

Friday night I was at Rockland to check out the girls basketball game against Hanover.

It was a little weird. I don't have any evidence or proof, but generally I don't remember getting to games so early in December.

It felt a bit strange, especially because it was kind of warm supposed to start Tuesday with a visit from Abington, but the game was rescheduled to accommodate Abington players who were in the MIAA Super Bowl.

They'll play that one Sunday at 6:30 p.m. at home.

Heading into the season, Cohasset has a few questions, and hopefully, many answers when it comes to what kind of team the Skippers will be.

Like it usually does, graduation hit the Skippers, who lost Robbie Mahoney, Chris Murphy and Kyrel Jaundoo.

Mahoney was a four-year varsity player, three-year starter and a monster on the boards who led the Skippers in rebounding while adding 9 points per game.

"Robbie played 94 games in his career," Ruggiero said. "He was 62-31 in his four years. He leaves a big hole to fill."

Jaundoo was a dynamic presence with great speed and intensity. He was a three-year starter and a two-time South Shore League All-Star.

Last year, Jaundoo averaged 11 ppg and was the team's leading rebounder. He could also be counted on to make highlight-reel plays.

Murphy was a spark off the bench who averaged 4 ppg.

"Between them we lose 25 ppg and our top two rebounders," Ruggiero said. "We'll have our work cut out for us."

Ruggiero feels his team is more than up for the challenge, and has history behind him for proof.

When he started at Cohasset, Ruggiero had star big-man Dan Martin, who is now playing college ball and is a captain at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute..

After Martin graduated, his next team made it all the way to the Div. 4 State Championship game at the Boston Garden with Robert Jones and Sam Richardson leading the way.

When they were gone, the keys were handed to Mahoney and Jaundoo, who led the way to the 15-6 season and a playoff win.

"We've lost some valuable pieces and it can affect what we can and can't do," Ruggiero said. "But we'll reload. The kids who have been practicing with the varsity have been waiting for their opportunity."

The reloading starts with senior co-captains Shane Haggerty and Christian Davis.

Both are veterans with plenty of experience.

Haggerty is a four-year starter, a two-time SSL All-Star and was last year's leading scorer with 17 ppg.

He also led the team in steals, assists, and three-pointers.

"He's Mr. Consistency," Ruggiero said of the six-foot guard. "He was in double figures 20 of 22 games and scored more than 20 points six times."

During the fall, Haggerty was a receiver on the football team, and used his basketball savvy on more than one occasion, including Thanksgiving Day when he had a highlight-reel play, tipping a well-covered pass from younger brother/quarterback/fellow hoopster Chris Haggerty to Rocco Laugelle (also a returning basketball player), who was looking for the tip and made a diving catch for a 30-plus yard gain that led to a touchdown.

Getting back to the captains, Davis is a 5'8" point guard who has been on the varsity three years, averaging 5 ppg last season. He was also the second-leading player in assists for Cohasset.

"He's stronger and more experienced," Ruggiero said. "He'll lead our running attack."

If there's a question in his game, it will be how Davis improves on his assist to turnover ratio.

Ruggiero thinks he will.

"He's ready for a great senior year," he said.

Laugelle is a six-foot senior guard with dynamic athletic skills and a strong work ethic that keeps coaches happy.

"Rocco has earned his stripes," Ruggiero said. "This season he needs to increase his scoring (3 ppg) and his assist to turnover ratio. He works at his trade."

Junior center Joe Buckley at 6'2", 175 was often the biggest player on the soccer field in the fall, but that won't be the case on the basketball court, although he will be in the mix many nights, and he will be mixing with the big-men as Cohasset's center and their biggest player.

"Joe has been with us since he was a freshman," Ruggiero said. "He played some minutes as a sophomore. He's an excellent defender, the deep man in our press defense in the middle of the zone. We hope for a breakout year. Last year he averaged 3 ppg in a substitute role."

Henry Brown is a 6'3" 150 pound junior who will see time up front.

"He's wiry and has a lot of wing," Ruggiero said. "He doesn't have a lot of bulk. He was on the team as a sophomore and had limited action. He's worked his way into the system and learned how to play. He has tremendous jumping ability. He can dunk and he can run. He's a long, lean player who knows what we like to do."

Ruggiero will use his bench regularly.

One of the first to see action will be Chris Haggerty, a six-foot junior who will hit the court when the Skippers need a boost. Haggerty was also the quarterback of the football team, a fact that may give him an extra bit of confidence when it comes to being a leader on the court.

"We call him Micro," Ruggiero said. "When he gets into the game he's like a microwave. He's instant offense. He's ready to step up. He's an outstanding outside shooter who just needs to learn to be a little more aggressive. He's a charm to work with. We're expecting big things."

Pat Federle, Cohasset's standout sophomore soccer goalie looks to come off the bench and possibly gain a starting position.

At 6'3", Federle has the height, with long arms and quick reflexes.

"As a freshman, he worked out with the varsity and practice squad," Ruggiero said. "He played JV. We're looking for big numbers as a fifth starter or off the bench. At 6'3", 145 he's got wings and he's strong on his own right. He's going to be a scorer and a rebounder."

Also checking in at 6'3" is sophomore Jack Chamberlain.

"As a freshman he played on the varsity practice squad," Ruggiero said. "He works diligently to be a more agile athlete. He'll be called on for rebounding and defense."

Sophomores Teddy Craven and Harrison Martin and Jack Hoffman, along with freshmen Jack Donohue and Alex Norton are also members of the team.

Martin is the younger brother of Dan Martin.

"He's an outstanding outside shooter and an aggressive offensive player," Ruggiero said of Martin. "He's working hard to play both ends of the court. Jack Hoffman is a 6'3" sophomore. I'm looking for him to work hard in practice. Jack Donohue has a lot of upside. He's an intense young man. He works hard every day in practice. I expect big things from him as he gains experience."

Ruggiero feels his team has the ability to do big things.

"We'll try to maintain the level of excellence we've had the past five years," he said. "I'm cautiously optimistic. We don't have a lot of experience. We do have athletes who are long and lean and have bought into the system. We're going to play Fastball, use our pressure defense. Every day is a work in progress. We should have a quality team as the season progresses."

If there's one worry Ruggiero has, it is the things he can't control.

Refreshingly, Ruggiero, who has already been inducted into the Mass. Coaches Hall of Fame, understands that on any night, any team can beat another.

"We could be a good team, but a lot is predicated on the competition," he said. "Rockland has (Tyler) Gibson. He's 6'6" and is going to UMass. Lowell. Mashpee has a 6'6" transfer student. Norwell is always Norwell and Abington has five starters back. They'll all be tough. Harwich and Chatham are now Monomoy, and when we played Chatham last year, they had a kid who had 45 points against us. Even Avon is a long-time power in Division 4. Southeast Regional is tough. We also play a Division 2 school at the end of the year (Nauset). We have a very competitive schedule. We'll see what we can do with it."

with each other in practice to keep up their edge and push each other. In high school hockey, it's a rarity to have this kind of goalie problem but these guys are genuine in their feelings about each other so I think this is a good dynamic fit."

After McHugh's first three saves, the Skippers kicked into gear putting the pressure on Hanover in several shifts.

"We've got a really good core group of guys this season and the team chemistry is as good as it gets at this level," said Walsh.

Tonight the Skippers saw the return of some of last year's scoring from different players. Adam Benson scored the first hat trick of the season. "Adam has such speed when he needs it. Three times during the game he was able to split the defense and get scoring opportunities"

Benson's first goal came in the second period at 8:19 when he scored on a break away that started with a breakout pass from junior captain Chris Lund to junior assistant captain Terence Doonan.

Doonan set Benson away who beat the Hanover's goalie senior Elijah Marciello clean with a low 5 hole shot. The Skippers started the third period knowing that a one goal lead against Hanover wasn't going to hold so only 1:35 into the period, junior Colin Whelan scored assisted by junior defenseman Derek Benson and Doonan again. At 5:44, Adam Benson struck again this time assisted by junior assistant captain Chris Cohen and Chris Lund.

Hanover finally notched their first and only goal at 10:06 of the third period and then at 14:59 of the third, Adam Benson scored his hat trick goal in the empty net assisted by brother Derek.

"All levels of the team played well tonight," said the coach. "There was no period that my guys gave up or coasted or just didn't focus on the job and when it was done, you could hear the difference in the locker room and the bus ride home...I love those bus rides home."

The Skippers season "Home Opener" is against league rivals, Mashpee; on Saturday, Dec.15 at 8 p.m. at the Connell Rink in Weymouth.

out and I wasn't all bundled up.

With that in mind, I'm calling out with my seasonal plea for your help.

As sports editor of the Cohasset Mariner, and with three more sports sections under my guard, there are a lot of sports to try to cover.

It can be very difficult to get to everything, considering there are somewhere near 26 teams on my radar, so I always welcome help from parents, coaches, players and friends to send me whatever you've got.

Scores, highlights, photos – all good.

If you have been reading this paper for a while, you'll notice a lot of help from the community in all aspects of sports. Cohasset has been really good at getting out the message since I started here, four years ago.

I don't discriminate either. If you are involved with a youth basketball, hockey, wrestling, indoor soccer team, winter wiffle ball, send it in.

I love highlighting the kids.

Junior varsity high school teams, don't feel left out. Same goes to freshman sports or even adult leagues.

I'm listening.

If you happened to notice the mention of wiffle ball, that is something I remember from my junior high school days in Randolph, when there was an indoor wiffle ball league in the gym before school a couple of days a week.

It was totally awesome, and one of very few things that could get me out of bed in the morning.

There was a teacher pitching to both sides, and big mats for bases.

If you hit the back wall of the gym in the air, it was an out. If you hit the basketball backboard it was a homerun.

Lots of fun, and a nice memory of a winter sport.

About the only other time I would get up early was for water ski practice when I was on the ski team at Miami, but that seems irrelevant at the moment.

Here in Cohasset, it looks like we're going to be in for a lot of fun.

The hockey team already has a big win over Hanover, and the basketball team is looking primed for a great season. There's even a great deal available for Superfans.

If you have things to send in, send it to wwassersug@wickedlocal.com.

Please send photos as .jpg attachments at least 1mb.

Also, this might be a tough request, but try to stay away from photos on phones. They don't usually translate well into print.

You can also call me at 781-837-4577.

Here's to a great winter season.

Ongoing battle for final playoff spots

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The playoff picture in the South Coastal Hockey League is becoming clearer with one week left. The Saints, powered by two goals from Jim Callahan, the second being the only one of the shootout, knocked off the Stingers, 3-2, in their Legends Division matchup. That clinched a playoff position.

Ed Norton scored the other goal for the Saints, while Pembroke's Ken Wingate and Dave Christensen both had a goal and an assist for the Stingers.

Dennis Yates and James Ward of Norwell scored first period goals as the Toros snapped a five-game losing streak and qualified for the playoffs with a 2-1 win over the Whalers. Norwell's Bob Ferzoco scored for the Whalers, who have lost three in a row and still are holding on to the fourth and final playoff spot.

The Crusaders got the only goal of the shootout from Marshfield's Jack Parsons as they pulled out a 2-1 Legends Division win over the Sharks. Art Caron scored for the Crusaders, and Norwell's Dana Dolabany scored for the Sharks in regulation. Both teams are still in the playoff hunt for the fourth and final playoff spot.

Tony Rota scored two goals, John Dunn had a goal and an assist, and Pembroke's Paul Lyons scored a goal as the Black Hawks clinched a Classics Division playoff spot with a 4-1 win over the Red Wings. John Guilderson scored for the Red Wings, who are battling the Bruins and the Canadiens for the final two playoff positions.

Hanover's Sean Cleaves and Dave Denton of Marshfield scored a goal each, and Mike Bartlett had two assists as the Maple Leafs hung on for a 2-2 tie with the Rangers and clinched a playoff spot.

Bob Donahoe and Pembroke's Bill Sawtelle scored for the Rangers, who were down 2-0 in the game.

Hanover's Peter Fallon scored two goals, and Dan Sloan of Abington had a goal and an assist, as the Bruins held off the Canadiens, 5-3, in a Classics Division matchup. John Dougenik and Hanover's Jim Martin also scored goal, while John Zimmer of Marshfield and Mike Martin had two assists each for the Bruins.

The Marshfield trio Glen Harnisch, Jim Donnelly, and Tom Lema scored a goal each, and Tim Curran of Cohasset had two assists for the Canadiens.

Coastal Stars get in the win column

A2s notch first victory of the season

The Coastal Stars Mite A2 team has battled hard all year. However, the effort had not manifested itself into victory until Saturday against the Taunton Brewins.

After giving up a goal 14 seconds into the game, it didn't look good for the Stars. And it looked worse after they were down two goals a minute later. However, the Stars scored late in the first period on a goal by Jack Croft (Marshfield), with great passes from Ryan McKinnon (Marshfield) and Charlie Mosca (Marshfield). Early in the second, the Stars pulled even on a great goal by Nate O'Brien (Marshfield), assisted by Lucas Brown (Marshfield) on a great pass and shot.

Continuing to work hard in front of standout goalie Zephyr Jones (Marshfield), who had 37 saves on the day, the Stars scored again to gain a 3-2 lead. The go-ahead goal was scored by Liam Healey (Marshfield) on a blast from the point, set up by a beautiful pass from Alex Norgeot (Cohasset). A victory appeared in sight. However, the Brewins had different ideas, scoring quickly to tie the game at 3-3 at the end of two periods.

Alex Norgeot (Cohasset) gave the Stars the lead once again on a breakaway goal that saw Norgeot fake forehand before scoring on an incredible backhand shot. The goal was setup by Wade Puzella (Cohasset) and Hannah Cochran (Marshfield). The 4-3 lead only lasted a minute; the Brewins answered to tie the game at four with six minutes left in the game.

The Stars were finally able to gain the lead for good when Ryan McKinnon (Marshfield) scored on a rebound opportunity set up by Charlie Mosca and Jack Croft, making it 5-4. In the final five minutes, the Stars sustained countless scoring chances with timely plays made Brady Erikson (Marshfield), Mike Tierney (Marshfield), Charlie Simpson (Marshfield), Heather Degust (Marshfield), Mike Jones (Marshfield), and Carter Wimbley (Cohasset). The incredible team play, backboned by goalie Zephyr Jones, was the key to the Stars A2's first victory of the season.

Cohasset football players selected for Team Massachusetts for FBU National Championship

Fresh off of an undefeated season for their local 7th Grade football team, the SCICOH Sharks, Cohasset football players Will Bowen, Charlie Pyne and Will Thomas have been selected to compete on Team Massachusetts (Team MA) at this year's FBU National Championship.

The FBU National Championship kicked off on December 1st at locations across America. The 7th Grade Team MA defeated Team New Hampshire 14-12 under cold and snowy conditions this past Saturday.

On Sunday, Team MA came back to the field at Westwood High School for a decisive victory over Team Northern Connecticut with a final score of 40-8.

Bowen, Pyne and Thomas will join their teammates for a 16-hour bus ride this Thursday to Columbus, Ohio for the semi-final round. Their first game will be against Team New Jersey and a victory would find them facing off against the winner of the contest between Team Chicago and Team Maryland.

This is their fifth year playing football together, starting as SCICOH Sharks in the third grade, but their first time facing regional and national competition. Victories this weekend would lead to the championship round January 5th and 6th at the Alamodome in San Antonio, Texas as part of the U.S. Army All-American Bowl week celebration.

This year's FBU tournament will be the biggest youth football tournament ever put together, with 64 teams and more than 250 games nationwide.

A flash mob breaks out to the numbers song that the students made to celebrate Numbers Day on 12/12/12 at the Middle School on Wednesday.

Seventh-grader Deven Varney shows that his dance skills include being able to rub his head and stomach at the same time while trying to beat Jack Mahoney in a dance-off for a t-shirt.

Sixth-grader Tommy Olson sports a t-shirt with the symbol for pi while celebrating numbers on Numbers Day.

Students mark 12/12/12

Cohasset Middle School students celebrated Numbers Day on 12/12/12, because this was "such a cool date." The sixth, seventh and eighth graders participated in many math-centric activities leading up to an assembly celebration in the school auditorium.

Seventh-grader Brianna Smith, right, dances with Jelea Moise to the numbers song that they made up to celebrate Numbers Day on 12/12/12.

Seventh-grader Derek Bennett, center, tries to get the attention of math teacher Jennifer Drinkwater, who was calling students up on stage for a chance to win a t-shirt.

Sixth-grader Sofia Whetstone waves to the camera while sporting playing cards that she taped to her shirt. Fifty-two is Sofia's lucky number, and there are fifty-two cards in a deck.

Math teacher Jennifer Drinkwater strikes a pose for the camera while acting as the master of ceremonies for Numbers Day.

CHMR SHELTER

It is hard to imagine our Patrick, also known as Wilfork, finding himself in a shelter, but he is here with us and what an affectionate, dependable, laid back and loving spirit! About a month ago, we had a call from owners who were unable to keep Patrick, his brother and mom. Well, this little family of three came in to Hull Seaside Animal Rescue and in no time Mom was adopted. Patrick and his brother are waiting patiently, but given his gentle and outgoing personality, Patrick should be in a home now. Both sons inherited wonderful traits and this is Patrick's feature week. Actually, you may have seen him on Pet Parade on CBS channel 4 a few weeks ago! Yes, he has been on TV too!

Patrick came to us a little bit overweight, and has lost 3 pounds already. From 20 to 17 and on his way to a svelte 15, this precious boy is just a charmer and he is just waiting anxiously for more exercise, play and attention. Though he will continue to trim down, his size actually becomes him. Patrick sports a large frame, or do we sometimes say big boned? Either way, he is so special and right now there is just more of him to love! And love is what he needs more than anything. In a home where he could play and have a chance to get up and run around looking for you, he will flourish and bring you joy.

When you sit with Patrick, he cozies up to you and stares at you with hopeful and adoring eyes. Don't be surprised. He is a lap cat too! The purring begins, the feet begin the natural kneading happy cats show when they are comfortable with you, and Patrick just shows one hundred percent appreciation for his caregiver. A true giver, he will shower you with his own style of love. A full body rub against your leg, a big old nuzzle, and lots of happy purrs that come from deep within so you know he means it! A gentle guy with a big heart, that's Patrick.

It doesn't end there. This 6-year-old is just as playful as ever. Recently, there have been kittens sharing his room and well, people spend a lot of time on them so he's feeling a little left out some days. The kittens are leaving and he has his place in the sun again very soon. More exploring and activity for him is exactly what he is waiting for. Yes, a loving family who can give him constant affection, play and love is what Patrick needs so much now. He is a people cat for sure, and enjoying all of us here for shift hours and socializing is not enough for this great guy, who was used to having a family full time. Patrick was raised a gentleman and that he is!! One who will certainly fill a family's world with good cheer, lots of laughs and fun.

The greatest gift of all, a family, is what Patrick has on his wish list.

We understand that the hectic days of December are rushing on, but if you have the space in your home and heart for this wonderful guy, please come and spend some time with him. It will be worth it! He may be your best gift of all this season.

As are all of our cats and kittens, Patrick is neutered and up to date on all of his shots and received a good report at his check up. There would be nothing more exciting for him than having a place in a loving home where he can be "Patrick" and let the love grow. To relax, enjoy the warmth, and know that he is safe and sound, surrounded by love is what he deserves.

We are hoping that more of our fabulous felines here find a special person or family for the holidays and we are here, ready to introduce you to them. Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on Patrick. Visit us during Open Hours on Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. or Saturday from 2-3 p.m. at 50 L St. in Hull. Our phone number is 781-925-3121 and you can visit www.hsar.org to view other available pets at our shelter. Just a quick note, the shelter will not hold Open Hours on Monday 12/24 so that volunteers can spend time with their families.

There is a lot to be thankful for this year and we hope that all of our supporters, volunteers and donators know just how much you mean to the cats and kittens in our care. Supplies that are always needed include dye free dry adult food, canned adult food, canned kitten and dry food, clay litter, laundry detergent, paper towels, fresh linens and fleece, corrugated scratch pads, toys and office supplies. It is a fabulous gift and a nice way to share with animals who find themselves suddenly displaced. Everyone here is working to make their lives better and any help we receive is greatly appreciated.

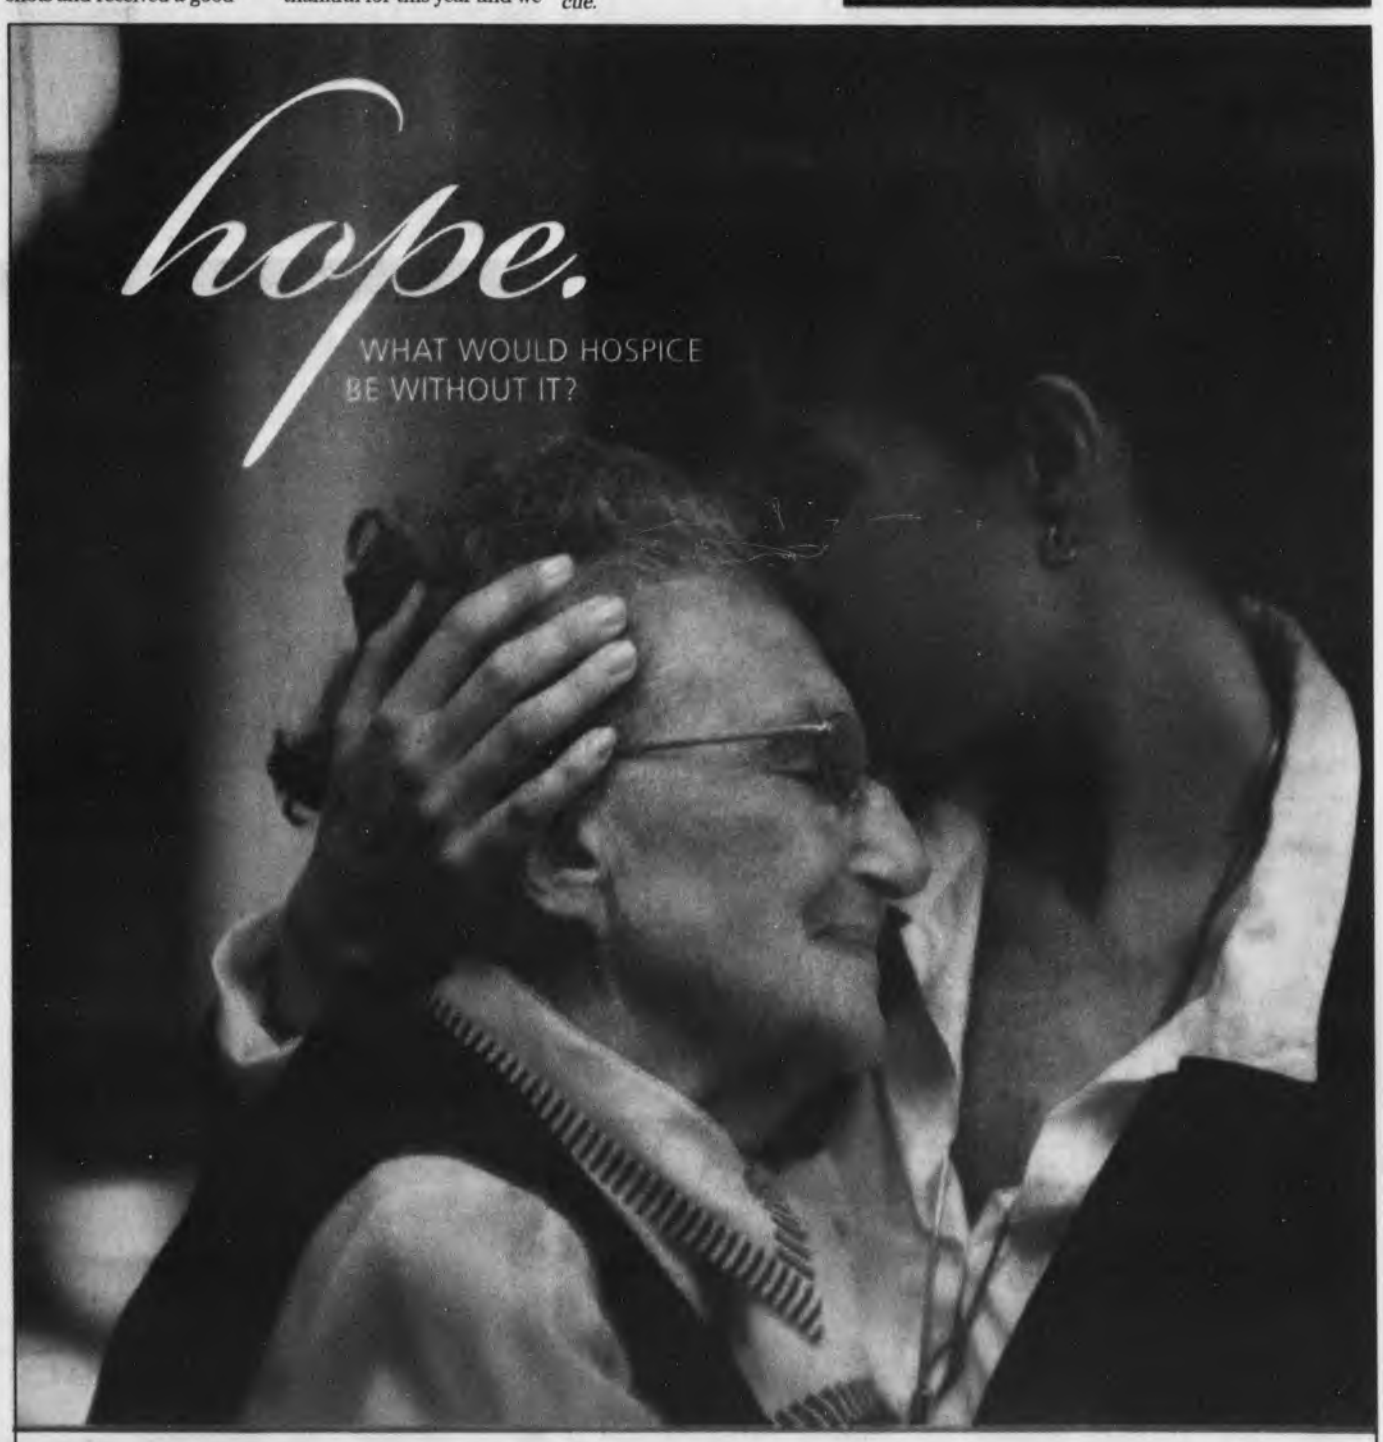
Having our fabulous felines showcased on Channel 4 on the Sunday morning Pet Parade is another gift for Hull Seaside. To the newscasters and crew, we love being included and thank you! Of course, to our neighbors, friends and quiet supporters who continue to fill our bottle and can bins every week our gratitude goes out to all. We wish you every happiness this holiday season. The cooperative effort and caring keeps us running.

And just a reminder to everyone looking for a fun gift, our 2013 Kittendales calendar is available at the shelter, online at www.kittendales.com and at Toast restaurant in Hull. All proceeds from the sale of our calendars go to the direct care of our kittens and cats.

Paula J. Fatersik is a board member and volunteer at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

Lessons and Carols!

Saturday, December 14th at 7:30pm there is a Festival of Lessons and Carols presented by St. Paul's Church in downtown Hingham featuring seasonal carols and scripture readings. It's a wonderful way to get into the spirit of Christmas! All are welcome.



Sanderson at B&N Saturday

Barnes & Noble, Derby Street Shoppes, 96 Derby St., Hingham, will welcome Derek Sanderson for a signing of his book "Crossing the Line" from 3 to 5 p.m., on Saturday, Dec. 15.

The autobiography of one of hockey's first rebels and a member of the "Big Bad Bruins," this book shares how Sanderson's ferocious style helped lead the team to two Stanley Cup victories in the early 1970s. Living life in the fast lane, Sanderson grew his hair long, developed a serious drinking problem and eventually found himself out of the league and prowling the streets for his next drink. In this autobiography, Sanderson comes clean on his life in hockey, the demons that threatened to consume him, and the strength and courage it took to fight his way back.

Today a successful entrepreneur and speaker, Sanderson's story is a must read for any fan of hockey. All Barnes & Noble events are free of charge and open to the public. For more information, call 781-749-3319.

In this economy, some people aren't comfortable replacing all their windows at once. Replace the windows in just two or three rooms now, and I'll lock in your window discount for two years. With our 2 Year Price Lock, when you are ready to purchase more windows later, you'll be protected from any price increases due to the rising gas costs, or any annual price increase.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF DEC. 24, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) An old adversary wants to make amends over the holidays. The decision is yours. But wouldn't it be nice to share the upcoming new year with another friend?

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) As news of your work gets around, expect to receive a special holiday "gift" from influential contacts who could help you launch your new projects in the new year.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Instead of fussing over what you didn't do to prepare for the holidays, relax and enjoy the kudos for a job truly well done. A happy surprise awaits you early next year.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The best way to shake off lingering holiday blues is to join loved ones in the fun and festivities of this special time. A confusing situation starts to make sense in upcoming weeks.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Special emotional rewards mark this holiday time for Leos and Leonas who are able to open up to new relationships and the possibilities they offer in the upcoming year.

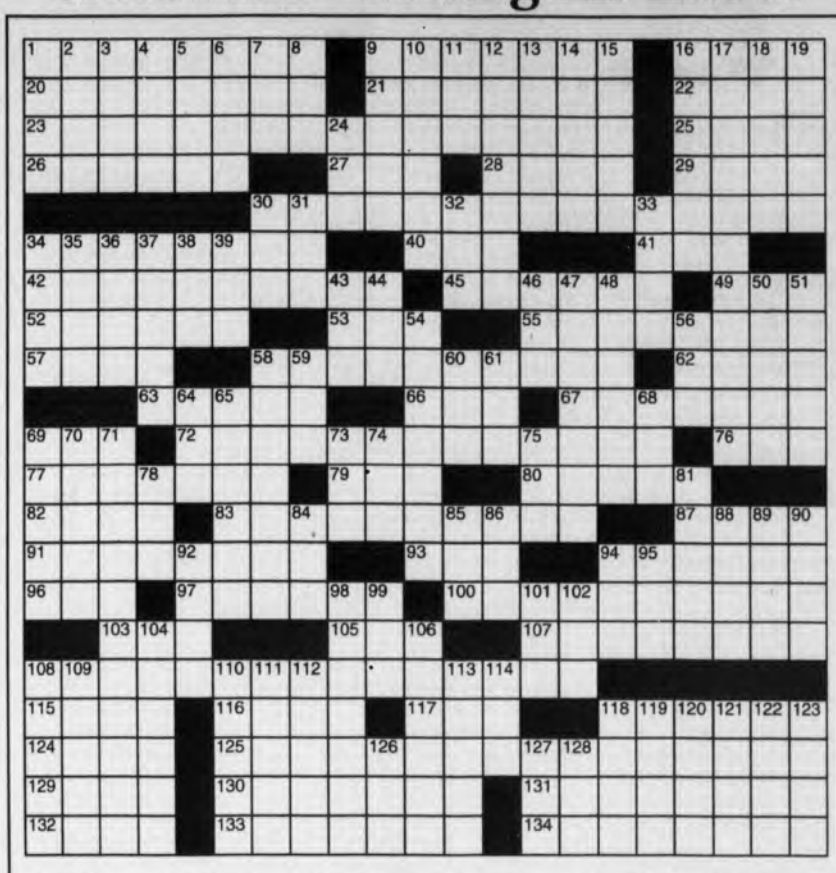
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your efforts to make the holidays especially memorable for some people will be rewarded in some unexpected (but very welcome) ways in the upcoming year.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Be assured that your efforts to make this holiday special for everyone won't go unnoticed by those who could make some important changes in your life.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Lots of folks want you to light up their holiday parties. But try to take some quiet time 'twixt those glittering galas to spend with some very special people.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) While the current round of holiday revels has your social life on the fast track, someone special might want to keep pace with you next year, as well.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Enjoy all the fun you deserve at this holiday time. However, don't lose sight of the need to check out some of the changes the new year is expected to bring.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) What happens during this holiday time can help clear up some of the confusion jeopardizing a once-stable relationship. Follow your instincts on what to do next.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your holidays are brightened by new friends eager to become part of your life. But don't forget to spend time with that one special person. (You know who!)

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Lessons and Carols service at St. Stephen's

St. Stephen's Church will present its annual Lessons and Carols service at 4 p.m., on Sunday, Dec. 16. The program will feature St. Stephen's Adult Choir directed by Dr. John Whiteside.

Lessons and Carols has a long history. The early church was always looking for ways to make the Advent and Christmas seasons more accessible, and the service of Lessons and Carols, which has Scripture readings interlaced with musical anthems and hymns, is a perfect vehicle for telling the Christmas Story. "As the Industrial Revolution took hold in the late 18th century in England, families began to live in the cities where the factories were," said Whiteside. "The children in these families needed something to do, and the church became a natural gathering place. In the days before television and radio, singing was an activity everyone could engage in, and the English choral tradition, already well established, really took off."

In our own time, the service remains an exciting one. At St. Stephen's, the program remains solidly grounded in Advent, telling the Christmas story in a beautiful way. "Our choir sings beautifully, and the music we'll sing includes pieces by Vaughan Williams, Rachmaninoff and John Tavener, to name a few," said Whiteside. "People tell us that their Christmas season would not be complete without the Lessons and Carols service."

The service, which lasts about one hour, is free. All are welcome to share this event. St. Stephen's Church, which is handicapped accessible, is located just off the green in Cohasset, and there is plenty of parking in the parking lot next to Town Hall.

Holly jolly Cohasset

It might not be Christmas just yet, but the village got into the spirit early with the annual Holiday Stroll. Downtown Cohasset came to life with holiday decorations, lights, caroling, hayrides and a parade around the village.

The stroll, sponsored by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, took place in the village and along Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) on Saturday, Dec. 8, from noon to 7 p.m.

Participating businesses were marked by balloons and holiday wreaths purchased from the Metco program. Each merchant decorated a wreath to be donated to an auction, the proceeds of which benefited the Cohasset Food Pantry.

Schools step up security

By Erin Dale

"We as a community need to be more vigilant on protecting our quality of life that makes Cohasset special to live, raise and protect our families, and be respectful and productive neighbors."
Michael Milanoski, Acting Town Manager

The violent events that took place in an elementary school only a state away last Friday, Dec. 14 have affected the nation, and local town and school officials are reevaluating security and emergency plans in the wake of the tragedy.

Cohasset's Acting Town Manager, Michael Milanoski wrote in a memo on Sunday that the town's thoughts and prayers are with the victims of the Sandy Hook Elementary school shooting in Newtown, Conn.

"This senseless act gives us pause as we think of our children and loved ones," Milanoski wrote. "Our world changed on 9/11, and again on 12/14. We as a community need to be more vigilant on protecting our quality of life that makes Cohasset special to live, raise and protect our families, and be respectful and productive neighbors."

This week saw an increased police presence at Cohasset's schools in light of the tragic shooting. Deputy Police Chief

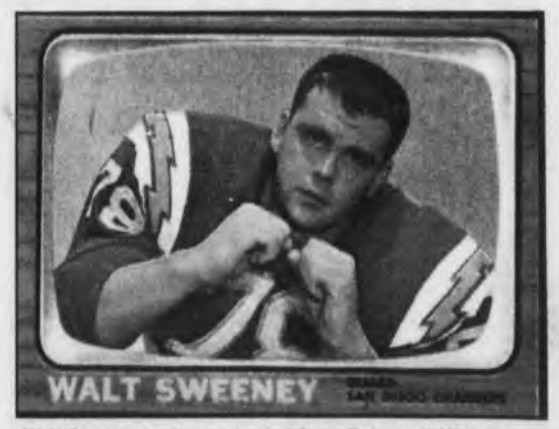
Football player's book shows NFL's dark side

Walt Sweeney said he was forced to take steroids in '60s

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

He calls it "the book the NFL doesn't want you to see."

Former NFL all-star Walt Sweeney, who was born and raised in Cohasset, rose to football fame as a lineman on the San Diego Chargers. Sweeney recently released his autobiography, "Off Guard," which recounts what he calls the earliest drug scandal in professional football.



Sweeney has filed lawsuits against the NFL claiming to be forced to take performance-enhancing drugs during his early days in football.

Although the subject is no laughing matter, Sweeney retains a sense of humor about what he's been through. "You have to," he said about learning to laugh in the midst of hardship. "I don't want to come across as tragic; it's not in my nature."

Sweeney, who played football at Cohasset High School and graduated in 1959, received a football scholarship to Syracuse University and was a first round draft pick for the Chargers in '63. He spent 13 years playing for the Chargers and the Washington Redskins and never missed a regular season game, playing in 181 straight games and nine Pro Bowls during his career. While the lineman reveled in the glory days of football, it wasn't long before darkness settled in.

Sweeney and his fellow Chargers were given a host of performance-enhancing

POLICE BEAT

OUI arrest

Police charged a 28-year-old man with drunken driving following an accident last week at Brown's Auto at the intersection of Pond Street and Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A). The crash was reported at 11:47 p.m. on Friday (Dec. 14).

Police said a 2009 Audi was headed south on Route 3A when it attempted a left onto Pond Street. The operator then apparently lost control and hit an unoccupied 1999 Mercedes that was for sale in the Brown's lot, pushing the Mercedes into the building. The Audi left the scene but police found the Audi's license plate among the debris at the scene and traced it to a Pleasant Street address. They went to the address where they found the operator, who was exhibiting the signs and symptoms of intoxication, making repairs to the car with duct tape, police said. He was placed under arrest and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol and leaving the scene of an accident after causing property damage.

The Brown's Auto building sustained minor damage but the Mercedes was heavily damaged, police said.

Squirrel

A squirrel somehow got into the electrical system from the outside taking out two of the three electrical phases at the Osgood School on Sunday afternoon (Dec. 16) around 4:30 p.m., police said. The superintendent of schools reported a burning smell and the fact the lights at Osgood were dimming. Police and fire were called and National Grid was contacted. Emergency repairs were made and school opened as usual on Monday.

Found money

A 42-year-old Cohasset man brought an envelope full of cash to the police station on Monday morning (Dec. 10) that he had found on the grass in front of the Red Lion Inn along South Main Street. Police said no one has claimed the money yet.

Wellbeing check

Police said an elderly woman walking along the road near Shaw's at 6:45 p.m. on Monday (Dec. 10) was fine. A concerned caller, who spotted the woman, was concerned for her welfare, police said.

Cohasset police bring Christmas cheer to child in need

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A few of Cohasset's police officers went on a goodwill mission to make one boy's Christmas wish come true.

On Wednesday, officers Jay St. Ives and Dennis Cunniff traveled in a caravan of over 90 police cruisers with over 200 officers from Massachusetts to visit with five-year-old Nathan Norman in Rustburg, Virginia.

Nathan has been battling a rare form of brain and spine cancer since 2009. Surgeries over the last few years have only been able to remove some of the tumors in Nathan's brain and his spine. The young boy has been on a host of medication to try and stabilize the tumors. Unfortunately, these medications have not been able to fight this type of aggressive cancer.

However, Nathan has maintained a cheerful disposition and had one big wish this Christmas — to receive cards from his heroes, police and firefighters. The response, from law enforcement officers all over the world, has been overwhelming. Nathan reportedly receives 20 to 30 cards per day.

But a fleet of officers from this state decided they wanted to do something more, and decided to form a caravan and drive down to see Nathan in person.

At approximately 6 a.m. on Wednesday morning, Cunniff and three St. Ives – brothers Jay from Cohasset police, Kevin, a Boston University officer and special officer in Cohasset, and Chris, state policeman – met up with the rest of the caravan in Burlington to begin their trek south.

The trip was coordinated by Sgt. Jerry McDonough of the Burlington police.

Jay said that he gives McDonough "props" for organizing such an effort. "He said, 'We can do better than cards; we should take a trip down there.' He put together an unbelievable itinerary with different gas stops and food places to stop; he's done an unbelievable job."

The Cohasset officer said that the decision to join in the effort was a no-brainer for him and his fellow officers. Jay said that they were recipients of an email chain that told Nathan's story and asked for officers to join the caravan to visit the ailing child.

"We were tearing up right when we saw it," said Jay. "We had to get involved."

Kevin said that as a parent, he was especially moved by Nathan's story. "I've got a six and a four-year-old, and when I read [the email] it was going happen, we were definitely going down... It's going to be one of those things we remember together."

The Cohasset Police Association donated gifts for Nathan, including a Cohasset police shoulder patch and t-shirt. Jay said that Cohasset police officer Jimmy McLean was also planning to take the trip, but was unable to tag along. He was a major proponent of the endeavor, however.

Jay said that he and the rest of the guys were happy to make the long trip, which took them several hours.

"It's one of those things, you lose sight of the real world sometimes. We had to do our part to make a boy's dream come true, especially during the holiday season."

Dennis agreed: "It's a long ride, but it's well worth it."

He added that seeing the massive caravan of police vehicles headed down the highway was "unreal."

"People are on the side of the highway taking videos... It's really impressive for all the departments to come together like this," said Dennis. "Words can't describe it."

Chris said that he wished the Mariner "could see the sea of cars going up the highway, a mile long, all with blue lights on. It's absolutely incredible."

Deputy Chief William Quigley, who was also onboard with the idea but stayed behind to work in Cohasset, said that he was proud of the officers for making the trek to Virginia. "It's a great gesture and it goes to show that these types of things don't have boundaries."

Said Kevin, "I think Nathan's going to have an awesome Christmas this year."

Cohasset, library lose a true friend

Sheila Evans ßpasses away at 83

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

"She had what seemed to be limitless energy and goodwill. She was steadfast. I will miss her dearly, and will always hold her in my heart as an icon of excellence."
Agnes McCann, library trustee

The name Sheila Evans will forever be tied to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Evans served as a library trustee for some 45 years before "retiring" in 2011. Although, she had stepped down from her elected position – she never stopped being involved in the library.

The library lost a great friend last week when Evans passed away from cancer at the age of 83.

Agnes McCann said she had the pleasure and privilege of serving with Evans on the library board from 1985 until Evans retirement two years ago.

"What I learned from her about being a good person cannot be quantified," McCann said. "Sheila was lovely, kind and smart. She had the clearest, most uncluttered thought process of anyone I've ever known. She had a directness and confidence that I was caused to admire on regular basis, since we met monthly as a board over all those years and more often than not to deal with questions of some importance. She had what seemed to be limitless energy and goodwill. She was steadfast. I will miss her dearly, and will always hold her in my heart as an icon of excellence," McCann said.

It will be hard for all library lovers – not to see Evans at the library or around town. She could be counted on to advocate for the library whether it was the move from the Pratt building to the former Osgood School – to budget issues.

Patience Towle said Evans recruited her for the library trustee board in 1992 when Towle was president of the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library, a private non-profit group.

"I was flattered but did not think I was up to the challenge," Towle recalled. "Sheila being Sheila she persuaded me. We spent the next 20 years working together on behalf of the library and our community. In addition to wonderful qualities of which others can speak she was utterly reliable and I will continue to try to emulate her."

Throughout Evans' life, she gave freely of herself to both institutions and friends. She was a trustee of Smith College and Dana Hall School, and an Overseer of WGBH. She played tennis regularly into her late 70s, including after having dual knee replacement surgery, and was an avid sailor and golfer until her death.

In her obituary, Evans' family wrote: "She combined an enthusiasm for accomplishing things, a warm appreciation of people, and high standards. If she saw something that needed doing, she would jump in and do it, and do it well. Her willingness to step forward, even in areas many shy from, led to fundraising and leadership roles with many of the institutions and other groups with which she was involved. She also took great joy in spending time with her nine grandchildren, sailing and boating and sharing in all the activities and details of their lives."

In recent years, Evans had become active with the Boys and Girls Clubs of Boston, including her usual fundraising role, and loved both helping to meet the needs of the underserved youth of Boston, and the opportunity to meet new people and challenges. She also began teaching adult sailing at Cohasset Yacht Club, where she had been a member since 1960.

Evans also she served Smith College, her alma mater in a variety of positions, culminating in serving as a Trustee from 1983-1990. She also served as a Trustee of Dana Hall School in Wellesley, where she had graduated in 1946, with strong academic and athletic achievements.

Evans chaired the library building committee in the 1970s that renovated the Pratt building, and in the 1990s again served on a building committee that spearheaded the $4.4 million renovation of the former Osgood School into the new 15,000 square foot home of the library. She also chaired a committee that raised $1.7 million from local residents for this renovation project. She subsequently spearheaded the establishment of Cohasset Library Trust, Inc., a charitable organization to support the Paul Pratt Library.

Library director Jackie Rafferty said Evans' dedication to the library was instrumental to its success.

"Sheila demonstrated her love of the library through outstanding advocacy and leadership as a library trustee and as the founder of Cohasset Library Trust," Rafferty said. "I am extremely grateful to Sheila for all that she accomplished for the library and feel privileged to have known and worked with her for the past 10 years."

Also in Cohasset, Evans was a member of the School Facilities Committee for 10 years, and served on search committees for a high school principal and for a town manager.

Evans leaves her husband of 58 years, Donald J. Evans; a brother, George C. Sweeney Jr. of Spencer, Massachusetts; a son, Daniel S. Evans of Cohasset; two daughters, Elizabeth E. Bodner of Cohasset and Martha E. Morris of Ridgefield, Connecticut; and nine grandchildren.

A memorial mass was said at Saint Anthony Church, Cohasset. In lieu of flowers, the family has asked that donations be made to The Cohasset Library Trust, Inc., or Boys and Girls Clubs of Boston – Yawkey Club of Roxbury.

For Evans' obituary, see page 26.

"The Origins of Cohasset" is the latest book about the history of Cohasset. COURTESY PHOTO

'The Origins of Cohasset' here in time for Christmas!

The Town of Cohasset his published seven town histories all in print and available at Buttonwoods Books, the Cohasset Historical Society, and the Town Clerk's office. The seventh history titled The Origins of Cohasset: The Land and Its People is an illustrated history of Cohasset's geology and early inhabitants.

It is a fitting complement to the complete history series published by the town. In 1900, E. Victor Bigelow wrote the first narrative history of Cohasset, followed by Burtram Pratt's narrative history from 1900-1950, and Jackie Dormitzer's narrative history from 1950 to 2000. At the 2002 publication date of the Dormitzer history, the Committee on Town History had pre-sold enough of the Dormitzer book and raised enough money from town underwriting and private donations to re-publish the previous two histories.

Following the printing of the three histories, Jackie compiled two anthologies of Cohasset stories titled Treasury of Cohasset History and Savor of Salt. In 2008, Jackie wrote Exploring Cohasset: 10 Tours and Concise History.

All proceeds from book sales go into a revolving town book account, which will fund any future reprints. Cohasset can be proud of her unique colonial history and that it has been documented in a complete set of books all published under the imprint of the town available to present and future residents.

'It takes a village...'

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hello Cohasset. How is everyone? A rough week to say the least has just finished and for so many, we still cannot wrap our heads around the senseless killing of 26 amazing people (20 of whom were young children). I think that we need to work on supporting those in the schools and public safety positions as they implement changes in our routines, especially when conversations are happening in areas where the children are listening. For a child to even try and understand is so not realistic and their imaginations run wild. Remember the saying, "It Takes a Village to Raise A Child." As a community or "village," we need to show everyone that we care...RIP to the 26 brave and amazing souls who are no longer with us and thoughts and prayers for all the families and friends, police and staff as they deal with so much.

LIFE AT CHS

Principal offered us reassurance

WHITNEY MALONE

The Cohasset Police Department's presence outside the school every day this week has been an assurance to us all that we can feel safe at CHS.

Monday morning, each class was read by their teachers an earnest letter from Principal Mrs. Connolly regarding the tragedy in Newtown, Conn. last Friday. She reassured each of us that Cohasset High School is taking extra cautionary measures in safety to comfort students, teachers, and parents. The Cohasset Police Department's presence outside the school every day this week has been an assurance to us all that we can feel safe at CHS.

On a lighter note, the Instrumental Concert Tuesday night was enjoyable for all. The High School Jazz Ensemble opened the concert, followed by the Middle School Concert Band, then the High School Concert Band. The night closed with the combined performance of a Ukrainian holiday folk tune from the Middle and High School Bands, adding a fun touch to the winter concert.

Thursday was as advisory day, due to the Fall Sports meeting, where fall athletes were recognized for their achievements this prior season and next year's Team Captains were announced. Congratulations to all the Fall Sports' teams on another amazing season.

As you've probably heard, today is, supposedly, the end of the world (perhaps if you've had a progress report mailed home this quarter), but it is also the circulation of the Holiday edition of The Spinnaker! This issue includes many interesting features from students, such as a synopsis of the school musical by a cast member and articles on different holiday recipes and traditions around the world.

That's it for this week at CHS. I hope that everyone enjoys the holidays, takes the time to appreciate family and friends, and wishes the best for those who lost their loved ones this past week.

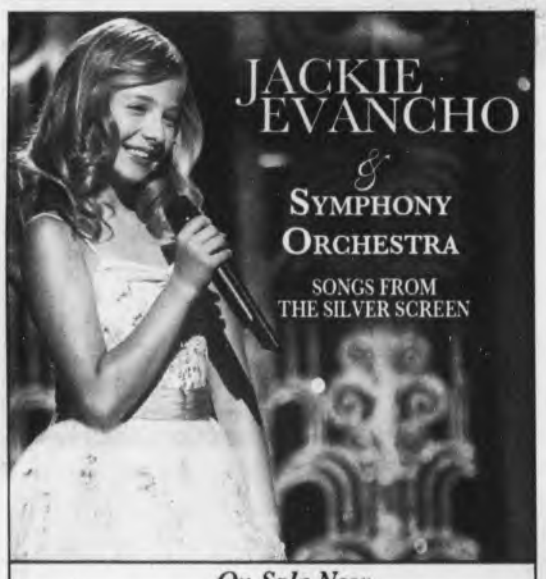
SANTA SIGHTINGS: Send us your pics of St. Nick



Christmas is coming and there have been Santa sightings everywhere.

Whether your child has sat on his lap and whispered his or her Christmas wishes in his ear, you've snapped a photo of your pet with Santa, or met up with him at a Santa's breakfast, a town tree-lighting, parade or fair, we want your pics of Old St. Nick.

Please include a caption identifying any people in the photos with Santa and the location where the picture was taken and what town you're from. We'll publish your photos on the Your News page of your weekly newspaper and post them in online galleries on your Wicked Local website.

We'll take your Santa shots up until Dec. 31!

How to submit: Log on to your Wicked Local website, click on the headline: "SANTA SIGHTINGS: Send us your pics of St. Nick" and click the link that reads: Send us your Santa pictures.

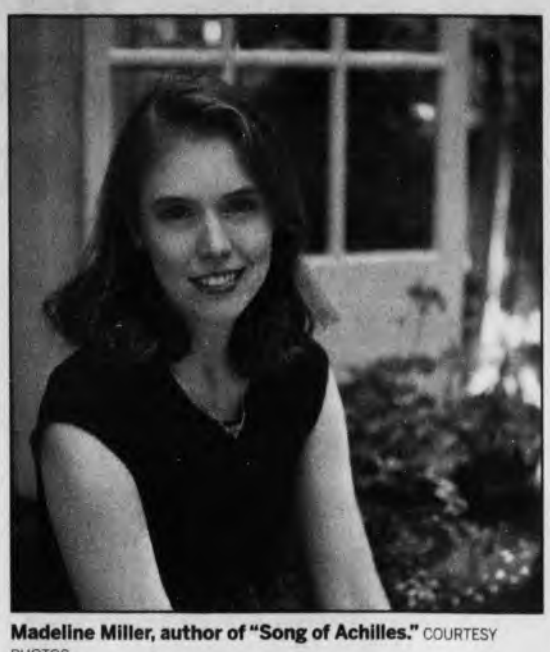
SUNDAY AUTHORTALKS

Fiction Panel featured in January

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

The next "Sunday AuthorTalks" happens on Jan. 6, at the Cohasset Library, at 4 p.m. A panel format will feature three celebrated fiction writers — Margot Livesey, Madeline Miller, and Edith Pearlman. Globe columnist Susan Trausch will moderate the forum.

Margot Livesey's latest novel, "The Flight of Gemma Hardy," is set in Scotland in the 1950s and 60s. Both a memoir and modern variation of Jane Eyre, Livesey's seventh novel will resonate with Bronte fans while providing provocative new terrain, especially in the final third of the narrative. New York Times reviewer Sarah Towers praises Liveley's "lovely fluid writing" and takes pleasure in her "abiding affinity for the natural world."



One of the goals of "Sunday AuthorTalks" is to introduce a debut novelist each season. This year's selection, Madeline Miller, has received abundant praise from critics. Her novel, Song of Achilles, is a romantic retelling of the Iliad, but her focus is love rather than war—love between the heroic warrior Achilles and the renounced prince, Patroclus. Here, too, are the sea nymphs, centaurs, and all the colorful characters of Homer's epic. Washington Post reviewer Mary Russell says Miller writes "in prose as clean and spare as the driving poetry of Homer." Miller received the 2012 Orange Prize for fiction.

A finely wrought short story is like a lyric poem — concise and rich in layers of meaning. And there's no one better at this art than Edith Pearlman. Binocular Vision, Pearlman's most recent anthology, tells 34 stories of human predicament that span four decades. New York Times reviewer Roxana Robinson says of Pearlman's writing, "intelligent, perceptive, funny, and quite beautiful...these quiet, elegant stories add something significant to the literary landscape." For this latest anthology, which is her fourth collection, Pearlman has won the National Book Critics Circle Award, PEN/Malamud Award, National Book finalist and several other literary honors.

The three writers will speak in a panel discussion about their fiction, their muses, their own reading lists, and their favorite authors. The format of January's "AuthorTalks" makes the content especially appealing to book groups. Following the talk, a wine and cheese reception will provide opportunity for further discussion and book signing. All the works are in paperback and will be available for purchase and signing.

The three writers will speak in a panel discussion about their fiction, their muses, their own reading lists, and their favorite authors.

Admission is free, but seating is on a first-come, first-served basis. Tickets are available at the Cohasset Library or reserve a seat online at cohassetlibrary.org or phone the library at 383-1348 ext 1.

"Sunday AuthorTalks" is sponsored by Dean and Hamilton Realtors and The Cook Estate. Bruce Sinclaire, owner of A Taste for Wine and Spirits, donates wines for the post-talk receptions.

drugs in an era when little was known or understood about the drugs and their effects. Years later, Sweeney would struggle with drug and alcohol addiction, going in and out of rehab.

"My drug addiction is directly related to the game," Sweeney said in his book, which was published in September. "It was the San Diego Chargers trainers and doctors who gave pregame amphetamines to rev me up, post-game sedatives to bring me down, pain killers as 'needed' and steroids, said to be vitamins, for better health. I considered taking drugs as normal for game day preparation as putting on my game face."

Sweeney noted that his decision to eventually sue his former employers, "the league that gave me the opportunity to play for a living was difficult." However, "the NFL helped turn me into an addict and addiction left me unable to earn a living after football."

Sweeney is considered by many to be one of the best linemen to play in professional football. He noted that football legends Sid Gillman and Al Davis said he should be inducted into the Football Hall of Fame; given his legal battles with the league, that is not likely to happen anytime soon, said Sweeney. "It's tough to get invited to the party when you've pissed in the host's punch bowl."

Life wasn't always this troubled for Sweeney, who recalls happy days playing football as a Cohasset youth. "It was the most fun I ever had playing football," he said during a phone call from his home in San Diego.

Of Cohasset, he said, "Every kid should grow up there."

Walt Sweeney's 13-year career in the NFL had him playing for the San Diego Chargers and the Washington Redskins. He never missed a regular season game and was an All-Star nine times.

However, Sweeney endured a number of trials growing up on Jerusalem Road, including losing his father, Jack, at age 2, after Jack was struck by a drunk driver on South Main Street while walking home from work. Sweeney, the youngest of five siblings, has four older brothers who all became alcoholics while they were still young. Sweeney was not exempt from this behavior; when reporters would later ask him why he chose to play football at Syracuse after he was offered 25 scholarships from colleges across the country, Sweeney replied that he picked Syracuse because the legal drinking age in New York was 18 at the time.

"I was an alcoholic from the get-go," said Sweeney.

While alcohol was his substance of choice from a young age, it was the steroids he was forced to take that opened the gateway to other drugs, said Sweeney. From there, he started taking speed before games, although he claims he "never got hooked on it." Later he would take more recreational drugs, such as marijuana.

His addiction to substances led Sweeney in and out of various rehab programs over the years and caused him "a lot of problems" until the 71-year-old said that he got to the point where he simply had to stop using.

"You get to a certain age, you're too old to be crazy anymore," he said.

Sweeney first filed suit against the NFL after seeking treatment for a knee problem.

"A couple of years out of football, I had a leg I could barely walk on," he explained. "I went to the NFL and they basically laughed at me, which is clearly a horror story people wouldn't believe...[then] I went to a lawyer, who said, 'You've got more problems than a [bad] knee.'"

Sweeney was living in Lake Tahoe when he filed the suit, where he moved after living in Massachusetts again for a few years in the '80s. While back in his home state, he visited many schools with then-governor Michael Dukakis to support a state anti-drug program.

After filing his lawsuit, Sweeney made the national talk show circuit, appearing on shows like Good Morning America ("You name it, we were on it"). He was seeking around $16,000 a month in damages from the NFL, a multi-million dollar suit. Sweeney said that he thought for sure he would win. While his case won a few court judgments, he did not win the lawsuit.

"We were looking at mansions on the lake," he joked. After the loss, "we were looking for a room to rent in Reno."

Sweeney took the loss in stride and took to capturing his memoir. Co-written with Bill Swank, Sweeney tried to "put a funny twist" on the dark events that led to his drug addiction, the crumbling of his first marriage, and more. Sweeney eventually remarried a woman named Nanci, who passed away six months ago. He said that she is the one "who really pushed me to do this book. I wish she was here to see it."

The retired footballer said that many who have read through his book have told him that they are astonished he is still alive. Despite that, he said that he has received "nothing but positive feedback."

Those who pick up "Off Guard" will "get an insight to the way football was back in those days, the 60s and 70s. It's been cleaned up a bit since then," Sweeney explained.

Sweeney was recently inducted into Cohasset High School's athletic hall of fame, having played on the 1957 undefeated football team; he also played basketball and ran track. He is also a member of Syracuse's all-century team and part of the San Diego Chargers Hall of Fame.

"Off Guard" is available for purchase at Cohasset's Buttonwood Bookstore and online at Amazon.com.

Veteran football player Walt Sweeney's book, "Off Guard," describes the dark side of the NFL, including a steroids scandal and Sweeney's drug addiction and recovery. Sweeney grew up on Jerusalem Rd. in Cohasset and is in the high school's athletic Hall of Fame.

MY VIEW

National outrage

Outrage. That describes the overwhelming reaction to the tragic, senseless shooting rampage in an elementary school in Newtown, Connecticut last week that took the lives of 20 first-graders and six faculty and staff.

The incident is simply too much to fathom. As a community, state and nation – we are at a loss for words and wonder why and how this could have happened.

We now have real hope that our leaders at the state and national level will address the ever growing problem of horrific violence in our culture whether that be through stricter gun control, tighter controls on graphically violent video games, movies and television shows — to safer schools and better diagnosis and treatment of mental illness.

On a personal note, I started out as a teacher at Samuel Gompers Junior High in Watts, Los Angeles. The year was 1971.

We had three armed security guards at the school and locked doors. Despite the security, just a rumor that a violent street gang, dubbed the Crips, was coming would empty Gompers JH within minutes.

The heavily armed Crips, which started in LA in 1969, has today spread to other cities and has tens of thousands of members.

I recall supervising a group of students on a playground area when we spotted a man with a sawed-off shotgun standing a few yards away just outside the school's chain-link fence. Somehow, another teacher and I were able to get the students inside without incident. LAPD officers chased the man down and arrested him. It did not make the news and no one was surprised because that type of incident happened routinely.

My year at Gompers was filled with incidents that shook me to my core. I grew up in Scituate and had never been exposed to a culture of violence. During that year, I experienced fear for my life on several occasions. To this day, I often think about the Gompers students. By the time they had reached junior high – they were accustomed to being afraid. Living with fear at school, at home or on the streets of their neighborhoods was normal.

Over these past 41 years, children have been killed across America in horrific incidents of gang violence or other violent acts in our inner cities nearly every day. Yet, we hear nothing about it.

Connecticut Senator Joseph Lieberman has called for a "national conversation" on gun violence. That discussion is long overdue.

If any good can come out of the shooting rampage at Sandy Hook Elementary School – it would be real steps to look at senseless violence involving our children in every neighborhood.

Warrant discipline sorely needed

SAM WAKEMAN

It was basically a worthless publication, which contained no substantive information. It gave the appearance of last minute backroom politics.

I received the Town Warrant approximately two weeks before the STM on Dec 10, 2012. I was extremely disappointed that the warrant told me little about the substance of the articles that were to be voted on. Thirteen of the 15 Articles had not been studied and voted on by the various boards and committees responsible for review. The two Articles, which had recommendations, had only partial votes. Article 6 had to be withdrawn, correctly so, because no dollar amounts were published. I am not sure that some of the other articles (3, 4, 5,7,10, and 12) were not improperly voted on as no dollar amounts were included in the Warrant.

We talk about open and transparent government. We all should be ashamed of this STM Warrant. It was basically a worthless publication, which contained no substantive information. It gave the appearance of last minute backroom politics. How are voters to make informed rational decisions when presented with nothing more than placeholders, which will be filled in just before we are asked to make a decision? These articles represent important decisions for the town. We speculate why few attend Town Meetings. Maybe voters would get more interested if they had a chance to fully understand the issues before them.

By law the warrant must be published 14 days before for a special and seven days before for the Annual Town Meetings. I see no reason why articles to be presented cannot be fully vetted with recommendations completed and included in these warrants. We rely on the Town Manager's Motions finalized at the 11th hour to provide the details.

The Selectmen and Town Manager need to take a leadership role and set firm cutoff dates for Articles to be included. This does not mean placeholders, but full and complete Articles with the various board and/or committee recommendations included. Simply put, if the articles to be included are not complete they do not get included in the warrant. There may be times when last minute changes are necessary, but these should be few and far between.

I urge the Selectmen and Town Manager to publish a time line for all Town boards, committees, and employees which will get detailed Article information into the voter's hands when it is supposed to be.

Rifle range gunshots

When I come out of my home on Gammons Road and can hear the sound of gunshots from the rifle range on 3A, can anyone tell me how I should be feeling about it? Comfort, that someone is practicing to protect me in an unforeseen situation or that an unforeseen situation might be in the making?

Renovation of playground at Deer Hill

The Cohasset Parent School Organization is a non-profit organization that supports the students, the schools and the parents in order to maximize our student's experiences here in Cohasset. Currently, we are working on a larger project that some of you may have heard about: the renovation of the mature playground at the Deer Hill School. Our committee wanted to bring you up to date on our progress. So far we have surveyed the interests of the Deer Hill Staff, the students and parents of both the Osgood and Deer Hill schools and any interested community members. We compiled and analyzed the data and reached out to potential vendors. We are now prepared to share the design layouts with the school administration and staff.

We are also at the point of beginning our formal fundraising for this project and will do so in the new year. However, there may be members of our community who would like to support this exciting project and who would benefit from making a non-profit donation in 2012 rather than in 2013. Should you find yourself in this situation you are welcome to make a donation to the Cohasset PSO now and direct it for use on the Deer Hill Playground Project (notes line). Such a donation can be sent to the Cohasset PSO, P.O. box 30 Cohasset MA 02025. You will receive a non-profit donation letter/receipt early in the new year. Many thanks for your support. Have a safe and happy holiday.

Historical society grateful for support

On behalf of the Cohasset Historical Society I would like to thank the Community Preservation Committee and the residents of Cohasset for supporting our request for Community Preservation funding at the Special Town Meeting on Dec. 10.

We are proud of our three buildings: our headquarters the Pratt Building formerly the Paul Pratt Memorial Library purchased from the town in 2003, the Wilson House donated by the McGaw family in 1935 and the Maritime Museum donated by Jessie and William Cox in the 1950s. We have used CPA funds to restore the circa 1810 Wilson House, the only remaining unaltered structure in the village. It depicts family life in 1850 Cohasset. Our Maritime Museum was also restored with CPA funds and is the oldest ship chandlery in the country. Housing our vast maritime collection, it contains a wealth of information.

This year's grant will allow us to further restore the 1903 Pratt Building which houses our general archives. We hope that many of you will visit our buildings to not only see the restored beauty of the structures but also to look at the ongoing exhibits that depict Cohasset's rich history.

Kathy O'Malley,
president of the Cohasset Historical Society

Taking responsibility and learning from mistakes

RONNIE MCMORRIS

This was not a "clerical" error to be fixed if only we had known. Once the warrant was mailed this was a fatal mistake and could not be fixed or it would have been.

Bad things happen when we don't play by the rules. That's why it's important to (1) have the experience and training to know what the rules are, (2) pay careful attention to detail to ensure the rules are followed, and (3) take responsibility when mistakes are made and learn from them.

This Board of Selectmen and acting Town Manager have been playing fast and loose with all those pesky rules – Open meeting law requirements, the Town Manager Act, and now all of those technicalities about town meetings and warrants. Four former selectmen complained that the BOS never voted to close the warrant for this Special and they certainly didn't sign it. Fatal flaws, maybe not, but these requirements are there to be followed.

Article 6 was indefinitely postponed at Town Meeting because of a failure to follow these rules, not because of a clerical error, which could have been fixed if it had been pointed out earlier. As a legal matter, Article 6 didn't exist – the requirement is that an article be included in the warrant -period! This was not a "clerical" error to be fixed if only we had known. Once the warrant was mailed this was a fatal mistake and could not be fixed or it would have been. The appropriation of a million dollars was delayed because the responsible parties failed to do their job. Finger pointing, the blame game, spinning the criticism – it's all a shameful lack of owning up to responsibility.

The first hard lesson I learned as a new Selectman came after years of work by a group supporting the new Osgood School project. Following an historic town meeting vote and a Prop 2-1/2 override ballot the multi-million dollar project was approved. Opponents, however, discovered a technical error with the posting requirement for the election and their challenge was successful. I, along with others, had to appear in front of a Senate/House committee of the legislature and convince them to vote to uphold our ballot in spite of the error.

The town's actions are always vulnerable to successful challenges if every rule isn't followed with precision. We can't accept anything less. Legal costs are soaring when our tax dollars are better spent on necessary projects.

Obviously, everyone makes mistakes. I certainly made my share when I was in office. The hope is that you learn from them and then, maybe even be able to share that wisdom for the benefit of the town. As the saying goes, "The first step on the road to recovery is admitting you have a problem."

Ronnie McMorris lives at 89 Doane St.

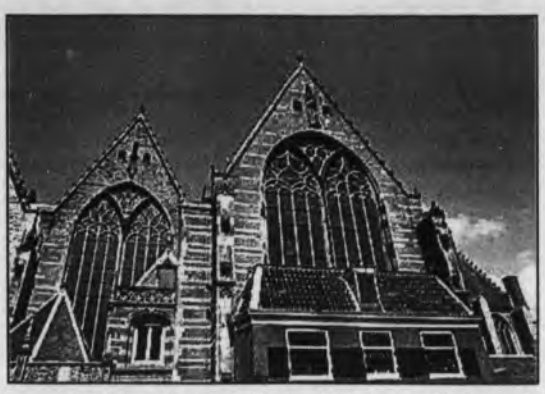
Selectmen OK proposed Eagle Scout sign project

Boy Scout and Cohasset High School senior Evan Ackley pitched his Eagle Scout project to the Board of Selectmen Tuesday night. Ackley plans to create wooden double-sided signs to be posted around town letting people know when and where Town Meeting is, when tax bills are due, and other town-related information.

The boards will be posted temporarily in strategic places like the town common and a traffic island on Beechwood Street, among other locations. Selectmen said they hope the signs will turn out similar to the ones posted in Hingham. The signs would need to be maintained by a town official or employee, such as someone from the Dept. of Public Works (DPW).

The selectmen unanimously voted to approve Ackley's plan, agreeing that it's a good project. This is only preliminary approval for the project, however; Ackley will still need to present his idea to the Old Colony Council.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson called the Eagle Scout program "a wonderful leadership program," and called Ackley's proposed project "a great effort."



Ackley said he will work on the project with a team of other Boy Scouts.

Amsterdam is a living history lesson

Diamonds may be a girl's best friend, but they have also been a major industry in Amsterdam since the 16th century.

Amsterdam may be small in size, but it's big in gezelligheid (loosely translated as "sociability"). Locals and tourists alike enjoy the many cafes where conversation flows as freely as the popular Dutch brews. It takes only about an hour or so to walk across town – and that includes dodging the skaters and bicyclists. In fact, some 20 percent of the residents still use bicycles for transportation. Instead of skyscrapers, you'll see gabled houses, brick buildings and elaborately decorated facades. Instead of traffic noises, you're more likely to hear street organs or the bells of one of the city's nine carillons.

Here in the early 1300s, the local inhabitants built a dam in the Amstel River to protect their homes against the sea. The small fishing village of Amstelledamme soon grew rich, thanks to the discovery of a method to preserve herring long enough to export it. The city eventually became a center of commerce and later capital of the Netherlands. (Holland, as the country is often called by foreigners, is actually the name of an old province, now divided into North and South Holland.)

The 17th century was truly a dynamic Golden Age, a time when Dutch influence stretched across the globe. The Dutch East India Company established a profitable empire based on spice trading in the East. The Amsterdam Exchange Bank became the largest clearinghouse in Europe. During the 1630s, fortunes were made – and lost – all in the space of a few months when speculating in buying and selling tulip bulbs went from manic to panic. For a brief period, known now as tulipmania, a single bulb might cost as much as a canal house. When the market collapsed, the suicide rate jumped as did the number of lawsuits filed. Fortunately, charitable institutions had been established earlier to care for the poor – a very radical idea in those times.

Diamonds may be a girl's best friend, but they have also been a major industry in Amsterdam since the 16th century. The world's largest rough-cut diamond, The Cullinan (named after the owner of a South African diamond mine), was split into more than 100 stones here in 1908. The story goes that it took the master cutter three months to recover from the stress of cutting the 3,108-carat stone.

Today, this small city is also one of the largest historical centers in Europe. Some 7,000 houses are classified as historical monuments. About 160 canals crisscross the city; 2,100 bridges span these canals, and some 2,000 houseboats float on top. Amsterdam also boasts two of the world's great museums, the Van Gogh Museum and The Rijksmuseum, which features Rembrandt's monumental work, "The Night Watch," in a grand hall all by itself.

Join us in October 2013 – Enjoy Amsterdam before the riverboat cruise on the Rhine. People can pick up a flyer in the Community Room at Paul Pratt Library or at the Cohasset Historical Society.

What has happened to reason?

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

Protecting and nurturing our children is the most important job we'll ever have and if you have kids you know being a parent is a labor of love.

September 11 2001. As the first tower fell, my immediate reaction was to grab my keys and go get my 12-month-old son at his day care center. I didn't do this because I feared for his safety; rather because at that moment I had an emptiness inside and it was I who needed comforting. Last Friday as learned of the shootings at the elementary school in Newtown, Conn., I experienced the same emptiness so I went to Deer Hill and asked to have my daughter dismissed. I needed to give her hug.

The senseless tragedy at the Sandy Brook Elementary School which left 27 dead including 20 young children is as heartbreaking of an event as we may ever witness. If you are like me you found the news coverage simply too difficult to bear and the task of discussing it your kids unsettling. If you're like me just thinking of last week's events makes your eyes well up.

Protecting and nurturing our children is the most important job we'll ever have and if you have kids you know being a parent is a labor of love. Making breakfasts and school lunches before heading off to work can be a chore, kids not doing homework and cluttered rooms can be aggravating and occasionally their behavior out in public leaves us shaking our heads, but children are the essence of our being and the thought of being without them is almost crippling. Sadly that has become a forced reality for parents suffering in Newtown, Conn., parents who would give anything to be able to make just one more lunch.

Some are saying that what happened in Newtown is a rarity and that realistically there's nothing that can be done to prevent something like this from happening, that's just not true.

This tragedy, just like the shooting days before in an Oregon mall and the one at a Colorado movie theater earlier in the year was possible because a sick person had easy access to guns. What has happened to reason? What has happened to common sense? What has happened to compassion? In the case of these and other incidents the answer can be found hidden behind the powerful NRA lobby. Guns in the United States have gotten out of hand. The murder/suicide/accident rate involving guns in our country is up to 60 times greater than other English speaking Western countries and 200 times greater than Japan. This isn't some left wing mumbo-jumbo spin; it's a direct statistic about an industry run amok and every sane person should find it both outrageous and unacceptable.

We all seem to be able to agree on wearing seat belts and a reasonable blood alcohol level, yet close to ten thousand people die each year while our political infrastructure is being dictated by special interests. This is the equivalent to the entire population of Cohasset wiped out annually by guns or four World Trade Center disasters each year.

I work in the fire protection industry and following the 2003 Station Night Club Fire I heard a parent who lost his child testify "all fire codes are written by dead people." It was a heart wrenching statement and figuratively it's true. With that in mind, isn't now the time to enact reasonable restraints with regards to gun possession?

Perhaps it's time to take a different tact. Let the NRA stand behind the 2nd Amendment, maybe it's time for officials to go after the ammunition, limiting access to the bullets. It's become obvious that we can't get our Federal Representatives to work together, but perhaps our State Representatives will. I have been impressed with the way Senator Hedlund and Representative Bradley have worked together. Greatness has to start somewhere, who's to say it can't start here?

Next week we will all wake up and spend Christmas morning with our loved ones, while families in and around Newtown, Connecticut quietly cope with the gifts left wrapped and unopened under the tree. I can't think of many things more heartbreaking.

Thank you for reading and take a few extra seconds when hugging the ones you love.

COMMENTARY

Holding gun lobby responsible

JODI TOLMAN

Our children are being gunned down in their first-grade classroom. What greater outrage can there possibly be?

Friday, the time for shameful passivity came to a screeching, horrific, grotesque halt. The blood-red line in the sand, soaked with the lifeblood of our children, was breached. Now is the time for outrage and revolt. If the DOJ and Supreme Court will not unequivocally state that the second amendment does not confer upon the individual the right to bear arms, then the second amendment must be repealed.

The NRA should be branded a terrorist organization because that is what it is. Those who put the rights of gun owners above the rights of babies are terrorists. Those who value unfettered access to assault weapons, high-capacity magazines, and guns that have no earthly purpose but to take as many human lives as possible, over the lives of our beloved children, our children's' teachers, and the sanctity of parents' love of their precious children — those who worship guns over humanity are murderers.

If Friday's unspeakable tragedy does not send us screaming into the streets, then from this day on we are complicit. Our children are being gunned down in their first-grade classroom. What greater outrage can there possibly be? How many of our babies will we sacrifice on the alter of the murderers? The power to bring this nihilistic insanity to an end lies in the hands of the American people. With us. Each of us. Only us.

It's time to organize. To call our local, state and federal representatives, write letters to the editor, march en masse in the streets of every state capital and Washington DC, and descend on every senator's and congressperson's office with the ferocity and brutal power of the mother lion protecting her young. We must insist and empower friends, family, neighbors and coworkers to take action. The time has come to wrest power from the terrorists and murderers — the gun lobby and their minions — and impose the values they cravenly and with a wink and a nod purport to hold so dear — pro-life family values: the value of our children and their right to live to fulfill their human potential.

Interns will be put to the test

GREGORY MATHIS

The internship program has also given us a chance to get to know some hard working individuals who have an interest in writing and the journalism business.

Interns and internships in general sometimes get a bad rap.

Depending on what field of work you may want to go into or where you do your internship, your experience can be quite different.

For the unluckiest of interns, it could be a nightmare where job duties involve getting coffee for the boss (and the rest of the staff) and standing at a copy machine for hours and stapling documents all day long. Some internships might be based on shadowing various employees and watching them as they work, but you don't get an opportunity to work yourself. For those looking to do a little more with their time, there are internships that give you actual work-related experience.

As much as I like coffee, our internships involve real, practical work.

We have internships available year-round, although most of the candidates prefer the summer. It makes a lot of sense because many students go away to school and are home for the summer. Summer internships tend to last a little longer than winter or spring semesters, which is good because we put our interns to work. Interns cover meetings, write features, cover sporting events, and even shoot pictures. There may also be some website work involved, and multimedia opportunities including shooting and editing video.

When the six or eights weeks is done with us, the intern will have newspaper clips with their bylines on stories and website links to add to their resume and portfolio.

The internship program has also given us a chance to get to know some hard working individuals who have an interest in writing and the journalism business. We've had a couple of instances where we've been able to hire former interns for entry-level reporting positions or they've ended up doing some substantial freelance work for us.

There are very few restrictions for an internship. First, the student – whether in college or high school – needs to be getting credit or it needs to be a graduation requirement. We need proof of that from an advisor or guidance counselor at the school. As mentioned above, the intern will be out and about, reporting and writing stories and taking pictures. So the candidate should have reliable transportation.

While most of our interns are college students, we have worked with high school students as well. We ask the same thing of all our interns – that you commit to the program, contribute while learning new skill sets, and stick with it to the end. Those who do will take with them not only published writing samples, but valuable work experience that could give them an edge in landing their first job or gaining admission to college as they further their education.

If you're a student looking for an internship or know a student who might be interested in one, please let me know. You can reach me by email at gmathis@wickedlocal.com. Due to limited space in some of our offices, we generally have to cap the number of interns we accept for any given period. While we'd like to accommodate most applicants, the reality is we sometimes have to go through an interview process and accept the interns we believe can meet the expectations we've set and succeed in our work environment.

Citizens' petitions are due by Feb. 6. A draft warrant to be reviewed by the selectmen will be issued on Feb. 12. The board is expected to vote on a final warrant on April 2 and vote on the Town Manager's motions on April 9. The warrant will be mailed to residents and posted online by April 12.

The board also set the date for the Town Election: May 11. Nomination papers will be available starting on Feb. 19. The last day to pull papers could be March 29, and the deadline to submit might be April 2, but those dates are subject to change.

POLICE

Detail required

Police stopped some work on the traffic island at the entrance to the Avalon complex off King Street on Tuesday (Dec. 11) until arrangements were made for a detail officer. Police said the work involved adjusting the traffic island but the construction equipment including a dump truck at the scene were creating a bad situation for King Street traffic, hence a detail officer was needed. Police said that area is difficult trafficwise and the roadwork was making it worse.

Angled parking

Police have new "No Left Turn into Angled Parking" signs in the village and are stepping up enforcement. Recent incidents include a vehicle that made a left into the angled parking near Tedeschi's, taking up two spaces as a result where parking is at a premium. Also, a vehicle that made a left into the angled parking near the 5 S. Main eatery created a situation where there was not enough room for emergency vehicles to pass along that narrow stretch of South Main Street. Police said it is important for motorists to know that left turns into angled parking are not allowed.

Erratic operation

Police caught up with a Ford Fusion last Wednesday (Dec. 12) after a caller reported it was being driving along the wrong side of the road. Police said the driver, a 32-year-old Scituate man, was not impaired.

Deer accidents

Police said there were two deer vs. car accidents last week. One occurred on Monday (Dec. 10) at around 7 p.m. by Pond Street and Route 3A.

The other involved a police cruiser and occurred at 12:30 a.m. on Thursday (Dec. 13) on Doane Street. Police said a 9-point buck ran out in front of the cruiser, which lost a marker light (directional) and headlight. The deer had to be put down. The cruiser was able to be repaired using spare parts at the station. The officer was uninjured.

Vandalism

A 26-year-old Cohasset man who works for a local company reported to the job site on South Main Street last Thursday morning (Dec. 13) to find that the company's John Deere excavator had been vandalized. Police said nine hydraulic hoses had been cut with a knife. A mobile repair company was contacted to do the repairs. The damage estimate was $2,000. The matter is under investigation.

Minor damage

Minor damage to a light post occurred when a construction truck backed into it on River Road by South Main Street last Thursday at around 11 a.m., police said. The matter was settled between the involved parties, police said.

Attempted scam

A 77-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police that she was the potential victim of a scam last week. The woman explained that she received a call that came from Texas in which the caller offered for her to apply for a credit card that could be used in conjunction with her Medicare card. The caller had the woman's address and phone number but when she asked for her social security number to complete the transaction, the Cohasset woman realized it was a scam and hung up on her.

Larceny

A local business reported to police that a customer had stopped payment on the $111 personal check used to buy some merchandise. The bank notified the business that payment on the check had been stopped. Police advised the business to send a registered letter to the customer requesting payment. If the customer does not pay for the items, the individual will be summonsed to court to face a larceny charge, police said.

Loud radio

The passenger of an SUV told police that a loud radio might have been mistaken for the sound of an upset child. Police responded to the Avalon complex last week after a concerned caller reported hearing a girl yelling "let me go" and seeing a man jump into the passenger seat and drive away. Police canvassed the area and found nothing. They knocked on doors, which led them to a man who explained his friend had picked him up in a black SUV with the radio blasting. There was no child involved, police said.

NEWS UPDATE

Seeking clarity on town manager contract

Selectmen discuss Milanoski's future with town

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Selectmen discussed last week's Special Town Meeting —that included the vote against changing the Town Manager Act to allow for elected or appointed town officials to become town manager — and what that could mean for current Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski (who is in an appointed position) during their meeting Tuesday night.

After selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy pointed out that a discussion on Milanoski and his employment contract with the town was not part of Tuesday's agenda, the board decided to put in on their next agenda (for Jan. 8) and later entered into a closed executive session to presumably discuss Milanoski's contract and other matters.

TM search?

Two Cohasset citizens made comments at the start and end of the open portion of the selectmen's meeting, Agnes McCann, Doane Street, and former selectman Karen Quigley, Clayspring Road. Both wanted to discuss how the board should proceed since last Monday's Special Town Meeting voted against the board's recommended change to the Town Manager Act.

McCann said that she read a comment from selectmen chair Paul Carlson in Sunday's Boston Globe indicating that last week's vote would have no impact on the current Acting Town Manager contract.

McCann said that if the board plans to ink a new contract with Milanoski, "I really hope that's not what you have in mind. The vote last Monday certainly had an impact... When the town said no, it meant no." She urged the board to stop "ignoring the law" and conduct a "legitimate search for a qualified candidate" and "replace the town manager you chose to break up with... it's well past time to hire new one."

At the start of the board's discussion on last week's Town Meeting, selectman Martha Gjesteby said that now that Town Meeting has spoken, it is time for the selectmen to issue a Request for Proposals (RFP) for a new Town Manager.

"There was a decisive vote against the Town Manager Act change," Gjesteby read from a written statement. "Acting Town Manager is just that, and the present one is not qualified."

Gjesteby also said that after talking to her lawyer, she has decided to remove herself from any discussion on Milanoski's contract, since she has voted against it. She also voted against the board's recommendation to support changes to the Town Manager Act.

Milanoski, who served on two town boards last year (Governance Committee and Conservation Commission), vacated his former appointed positions in March 2012 shortly after being appointed as Acting Town Manager (following the firing of former town manager Michael Coughlin). Some citizens at last week's Town Meeting had the impression that Milanoski will be eligible to become a permanent town manager in March 2013; however, Town Counsel Paul DeRensis has said that since acting town manager is still an appointed position, he is disqualified from taking the permanent position. An acting or interim town manager, however, can be extended for months at a time.

At the moment, the selectmen have a contract with Milanoski that keeps him as acting town manager through the end of June 2013. It is unclear what may happen after that.

Several options

During the discussion on Special Town Meeting, Carlson said that there are several options the board could explore. They could search for a new town manager, but Carlson said the search has been "compromised" since Coughlin is suing the town for reinstatement of his position.

"I don't know if a good town manager would want to put his or her hat in the ring," said Carlson.

Second, Carlson said the selectmen could get a "second opinion" on whethe Milanoski would be eligible to become a permanent town manager in March. While Town Counsel has said Milanoski is ineligible, Carlson said, "numerous [other] attorneys say he is. We could get a second opinion or make that decision ourselves."

The board's next option, according to Carlson, is to extend Milanoski's current contract through next December, giving him another year to continue his work and provide stability to town government. This would also allow more time for the town's Governance Committee to review and suggest more changes for the Town Manager Act, which have to be voted on by Town Meeting and sent to a Home Rule Petition to the state legislature, since the Act is not a town bylaw but a state law.

Carlson said that extending Milanoski's contract through next December could "possibly take us through the Coughlin case, though I doubt it." The selectmen chair seemed to think the lawsuit could last a few years.

Closed discussion

Kennedy asked for a point of order, saying that she was not aware they were going to discuss the current town manger that night, as it was not on the agenda.

Selectman Fred Koed agreed, saying that someone had asked him if that subject would come up, and he responded that it wasn't on the agenda; otherwise, some citizens would have probably attended the meeting to speak their views. "We have to respect and listen to what they have to say."

Milanoski then told the board that they could continue the discussion in executive session. Carlson noted that they planned to go into executive at the end of the public meeting, and could add the discussion to the next meeting's agenda (Jan. 8). Milanoski added that there would be opportunity for further discussion after the executive session.

Quigley was in the audience and wanted to know how the public would be informed on what was discussed if the selectmen were to take a long time in their closed session, and no one would be there when they reconvened in public. She asked if there could be a "recap" during their next scheduled meeting. Carlson said that was "no problem."

Gjesteby noted at this point that if they were going to discuss Milanoski's contract during executive, she should recuse herself. Milanoski said there were other matters to be discussed that she could stay for; the rest of the board agreed to discuss those topics first and dive into the contract discussion after she left.

The board ended their open session around 9:30 p.m. and went into executive. The press waited around an hour to see if they would reconvene in open session, around which time Gjesteby left the meeting. Carlson said Wednesday that the executive session went very late, and he was not even sure what time it ended.

TC weighs in

On Wednesday morning, Carlson issued a press release with a letter from Town Counsel indicating that the selectmen do in fact have a legal employment contract with Milanoski. The letter states that while some parts of the contract are "unenforceable," the contract is not void "as a whole." The contract "creates the legal relationship of employer and employee between the parties for the Acting Town Manager position."

It gets tricky when DeRensis notes that the contract "includes certain provisions that may not be enforceable." If a court were to rule whatever these provisions are as "unenforceable," that would not necessarily render the entire contract void, DeRensis explained.

The contract, as it stands, will continue through June 2013. "It is our understanding that the employment agreement has been performed on both sides since it was executed and is to continue for an additional period of seven months. A contract that has been freely entered into and partially performed should be honored unless the defects are pervasive and disqualifying. That is not the case here and thus the employment agreement should continue to be performed."

The Mariner asked DeRensis to clarify if this meant the current contract is legal. DeRensis responded in an email, "The letter is carefully worded to say exactly what we wanted to say, no more, and no less."

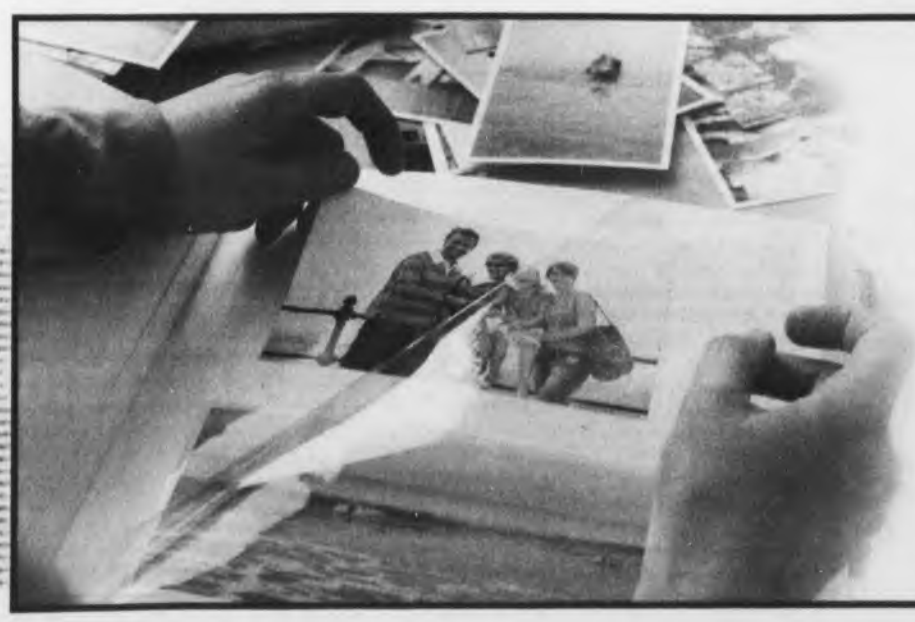
SCHOOL NOTICE



Coordinated Program Review to take place

Barbara Cataldo, Superintendent of the Cohasset Public Schools was informed by the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education of an upcoming Coordinated Program Review that will be taking place this school year. As part of this Coordinated Program Review, Department staff will visit the district during the week of Jan. 22-25, 2013. Such visits are routinely conducted by the Department to satisfy federal and state requirements for the periodic review of specific education programs and services in schools throughout the Commonwealth. The Department is reviewing several programs during a single visit in order to use Department and school staff's time most efficiently and to encourage strong connections among the programs.

The Department's Coordinated Program Review will address the following programs: Special Education and English Language Education. After reviewing school district procedures for these programs, a Department team will make its onsite visit, during which it will review individual student records, interview administrators, teachers and paraprofessional staff, survey parents and observe instructional spaces. After the onsite visit it will prepare a report for the superintendent and school committee, with detailed findings for each program.

Any member of the public may request to be interviewed by telephone by a member of the Department's visiting team. Those wishing to be interviewed should call the superintendent's office at (781) 383-6111 no later than Jan, 4, 2012...

Using a scale of ratings ranging from "Commendable" to "Not Implemented," the report will rate the implementation of each requirement reviewed by the Department. Where requirements are found not implemented or only partially implemented, the district must propose to the Department corrective action to bring those areas into compliance with statutes and regulations. Districts and schools are encouraged to incorporate the corrective action into their district and school improvement plans and professional development plan. The school district will be provided with technical assistance from the Department in developing a corrective action plan. Both the Department's report and the corrective action plan are public information and will be available to the public upon request. Program Review Final Reports are also available on the Department's Internet website at

More on 'clerical error' that postponed Article 6

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Selectmen discussed Tuesday night what led to Article 6 on the Special Town Meeting warrant getting thrown out. The warrant did not contain an actual article six, but only an informational summary and thus Town Meeting could not vote on it and the article was indefinitely postponed.

The article contained several financial items to divvy up the town's Free Cash, which the Dept. of Revenue certified as nearly $1 million. One of these items was $250,000 to fund the town-wide technology plan, which included new computer workstations and security upgrades for both town departments and the schools.

Last week, Milanoski chalked the oversight up to a "clerical error." He said during Tuesday's selectmen meeting that no one is more disappointed than he is that the article could not go through. He was, however, looking into a different funding plan for the tech project, which was being reviewed by the Advisory Committee.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby read from a written statement and said that any errors in the warrant were the town manager's responsibility. "Town counsel had sent a complete legal warrant to the town manger. It was not the responsibility of a secretary or a citizen to make sure there were no errors after town counsel's report.

"The town manager is solely responsible for a correct warrant. He was on vacation three weeks before the town meeting, which I learned of by an email... The town manager should have been on top of this."

Selectmen vice chair Diane Kennedy said that she found the mistake to be "very disappointing," but said it happened because the town manager's office was overwhelmed. "The process was rushed.

"I wish someone had picked up on it" sooner, she said of the error. "It was a kick in the gut."

Selectman Fred Koed said that the board was responsible for approving the warrant. "Ultimately the buck stops here... we run this office."

Milanoski said that while he appreciated that comment, the buck stops with the town manager.

"We are human and we make mistakes," he said. "This year there has been a rush on everything; the town was in financial crisis, and we did a lot to rectify that... [But] I take full responsibility for anything that comes out of this office and will take appropriate steps to make sure it doesn't happen again."

School committee

Article 6 was also a discussion topic at the School Committee meeting on Wednesday. The committee was particularly concerned about the delay of the tech plan's implementation.

School committee member Paul Schubert said that he was "troubled" that Article 6 was thrown out, and the schools will have to wait on important technology upgrades, which he said are being mandated by the state.

"The town has looked at [a technology plan] for years," said Schubert. "We've been trying for years to get it up and running."

Schubert said that he was most bothered that no one alerted officials that there was a problem with the warrant article prior to Special Town Meeting.

"It bothers me if there was evidence prior to that. [The article] could have easily been refashioned, amended or put forth as a legal article... It comes down to what is a community; if you see something that's not right... and just didn't bring it up, I'm really disappointed in that."

Milanoski, who was in the audience, said that if he had known ahead of time, the tech plan and other suggested uses for the Free Cash could have been rolled into Article 2, supplemental appropriations to the Fiscal Year 2013 budget. However, he once again said that he takes full responsibility for whatever comes out of his office.

He also told the school board that next year's schedule leading up to Annual Town Meeting will allow two days to review the warrant with Town Counsel before it's printed.

Milanoski said that the Advisory Committee discussed the tech plan Tuesday night and voted some "small elements" of it out of a reserve fund transfer. However, the acting town manager is still looking for another funding source to get the plan started.

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo explained that the town and school Chief Technology Officer, Rob Bonnell, has certain projects he needs to undertake as part of his scope of work that fall under his proposed tech plan. Until he can get these projects started, including replacing outdated computers in school labs, his job will devolve to just fixing computer issues, rather than implementing town-wide technology improvements.

A short while after the committee ended the Town Meeting discussion and moved on to other business, Milanoski and Schubert left the room for a few minutes. After they came back, Schubert asked School Committee chair Jeanne Astino for a point of order to return to the Town Meeting discussion. He said that he felt strongly about getting the tech plan rolling and wanted to see if there was a way the schools could fund the initial $70,000 Bonnell would need to start the technology upgrades, ahead of spring Town Meeting.

The committee discussed the risks involved with taking that money out of their budget this early in the school year, especially if, come May, Town Meeting votes "no."

Astino said she was "really uncomfortable" with the idea of spending the money ahead of time without knowing if Town Meeting would approve the tech plan and agree to reimburse the schools. She argued that the Annual Town Meeting is primarily attended by "the elders of the town," a group who also voted against a new elementary school years ago.

Schubert responded, "That was last century."

School committee member Helene Lieb said they needed to be careful "picking on the elders."

Astino clarified that she was just saying they would probably be inclined to vote against a new tech plan because "they don't have skin in the game."

Milanoski said he thought that with unanimous support from all the town boards that vetted the tech plan, including the selectmen, Advisory and Capital Budget, allowing the schools to fund the first half of the plan and reimbursing them was a "compelling" idea. He acknowledged, however, that is was a risk, but asked the board, "What's the risk versus the reward?"

School business manager Dave DeGennaro said that while he did not want to "squash the plan," he was wary of spending funds that have already been allocated to pay for other items in the budget.

"I think it's too early in the school year to commit monies that are already committed," he said.

Astino added that if the schools end up having to pay for two out of district tuitions after already spending $70,000 on the tech plan, "we are so screwed."

DeGennaro said that perhaps the committee could revisit the idea if there are excess funds toward the end of the school year. Milanoski said that the worst-case scenario is that they have to wait for Annual Town Meeting.

"We're totally between a rock and a hard place," said Astino. "I can't imagine what it would do to us if it got turned down [by Town Meeting]. It would be horrific. I don't think we can do it... I don't think it's the right thing to do."

The school committee will take up the tech plan again at their next scheduled meeting.

SECURITY

William Quigley had a police cruiser stationed at each school starting last Friday morning to reassure children and parents that the schools are a safe place to be.

"We're conducting random patrols in all four schools and all three campuses," said Quigley. "We've looked at the existing school safety plan along with the superintendent and are going to make the appropriate updates. It's been great working with the superintendent this week; we've had unprecedented cooperation with her office and are really making some strides. The existing plan is good, but there's always room for improvements."

The deputy chief said that despite the room for improvements, parents, students and staff people should feel safe in school. "People should be assured that we have adequate and updated plans in place, and we're being very vigilant in watching the schools. Student safety is our top priority."

The front offices at Cohasset's three school campuses, Deer Hill, Osgood and the Middle-High school, are adamant about signing in visitors and assigning them badges. Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said in a letter to Cohasset families that the schools will also have a series of emergency drills over the coming weeks.

Adjustment counselors, guidance counselors, psychologists and nurses are available to offer students support and address any questions, concerns and anxiety over last Friday's events. Otherwise, the schools' educational programs will continue as scheduled leading up to the holiday vacation.

"As a district we want our students to know they are welcomed into a safe environment that fosters learning," Cataldo wrote. "It is my desire to help our students feel welcomed and safe in our schools."

Milanoski wrote in a similar memo that the town is taking "enhanced steps to protect our young citizens and our quality of life while providing the reassurance that they are safe."

Further security upgrades are planned for the schools, some of which will be addressed in the town-wide technology plan as presented by Chief Technology Officer Rob Bonnell, who works for both the town and schools. Last week's Special Town Meeting asked voters to approve $250,000 from the town's certified Free Cash to pay for the first phase of this technology plan, however, the article dealing with these funds was indefinitely postponed due to a flaw with the article's wording in the town meeting warrant. The town will not be able to vote on the use of free cash until spring's Annual Town Meeting, but Milanoski said last week that he is looking into other ways to fund the project. The matter was discussed at this week's Advisory Committee meeting. Milanoski said a funding plan for the project should be finalized soon.

"This whole tragic incident that happened on the 14th only makes that more imperative," Milanoski said of the tech plan during a phone call Monday.

In the meantime, Cohasset's town officials are doing their part to keep the community safe, "looking at things on an hour by hour basis and trying to identify what our long-range plan will be to enhance security in the buildings and create a safe haven for our children."

Energy board issues solar RFP

Cohasset's Alternative Energy Committee (AEC) published its Request for Proposals (RFP) to lease town property for purposes of constructing a solar energy array. The information has been posted on the committee's website: http://aec.cohassetma.org.

Leases for both the landfill and school roofs are being procured through a Mass. General Laws Chapter 30B procurement process. The AEC was tied to this process for the landfill given that the 2011 Special Town Meeting article concerning lease of the landfills specifically referenced use of a Chapter 30B process.

After extensive review and discussions with special counsel, the Department of Energy Resources, the Attorney General and Inspector General's offices, the AEC confirmed that they could use the same procurement process for the school roofs.

The committee looks forward to meeting with potential bidders in January for a bidder's meeting and site visits.

Submissions are due in both electronic copy and in hard copy delivered to the Town Manager at Town Hall in Cohasset by no later than 2 pm on Jan, 30, 2013. The RFP includes additional information and an anticipated schedule.

All questions and inquiries concerning this RFP should be submitted by email to AEC-RFP@cohassetma.org. Inquiries will not be answered directly.

The Town will issue an addendum to address the written questions submitted in a form that will be submitted to all bidders. A record will be made of all questions and responses, which will be posted on the website. It is the responsibility of the bidder to check the official website regularly to obtain site information, RFP communications and updates to the RFP process.

Girls down Carver

By William Wassersug

The Cohasset girls basketball team is a work in progress.

With 11 of 13 players on the roster either freshmen or sophomores, this is a team with lots of room to grow and build with.

The process started Friday night when girls scored the last 10 points of the game to beat Carver 38-31 at home.

With 4:44 left to play, Carver led 31-28.

That was the last time the Lady Crusaders put the ball in the net.

"That was a real good win," Cohasset coach John LeVangie said. "Carver is always a good team. They're very well coached. We're so young. It's a good win."

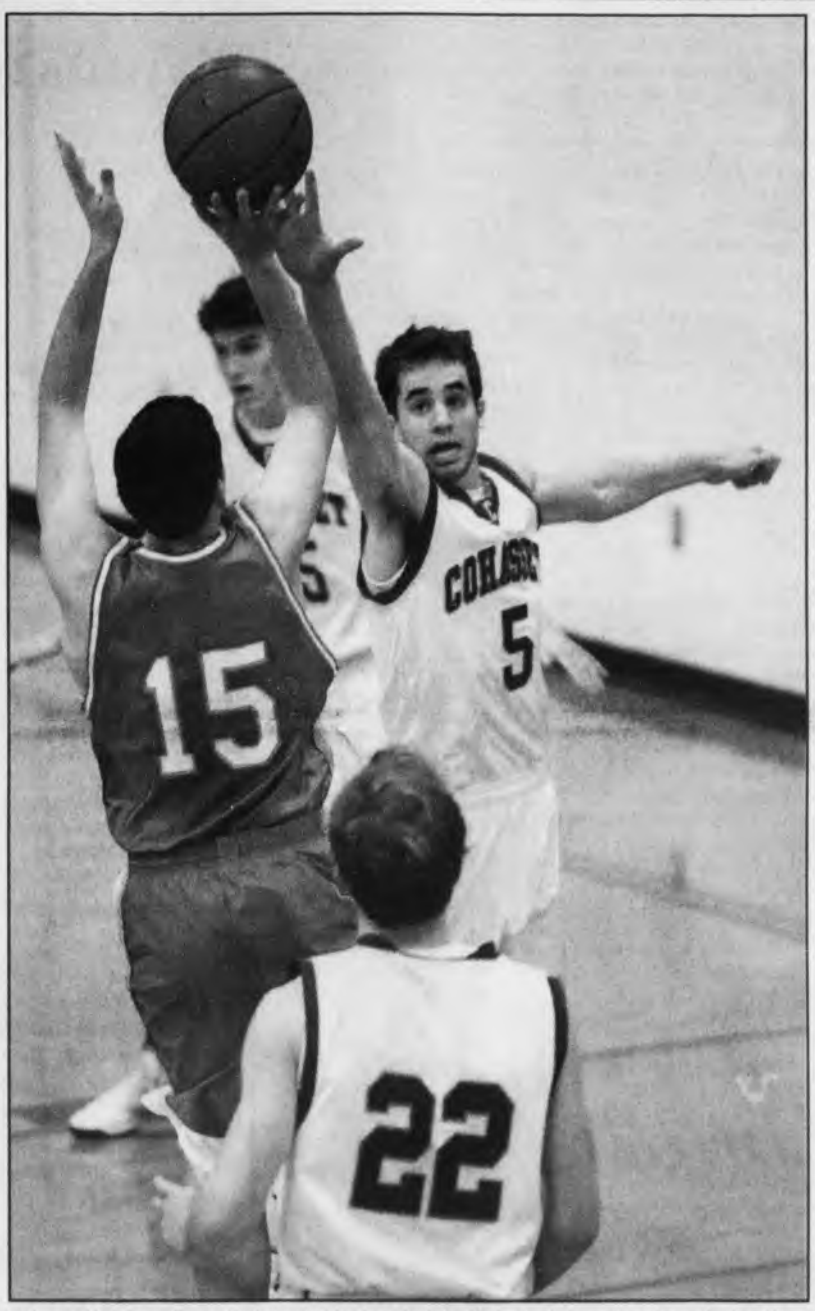
Twin wins

Skippers win first two games of new season

By Jay Miller
For the Patriot Ledger

A little more than a week ago, when Cohasset boys basketball coach Bo Ruggiero was talking about his team and what fans might expect, he mentioned senior captain Shane Haggerty as a player who would most likely be a big factor for the Skippers in the new season that was about to start with a game at Carver, Dec. 14.

The veteran coach knows his stuff.



In the opener at Carver, Haggerty, who was last year's leading scorer, dropped a team-high 20 points to lead the Skippers to a 79-61 victory.

The receiver on the football team had help from fellow receiver Rocco Laugelle, who scored 18 in the win.

The Carver game was supposed to be the second game of the season, but became the opener when Abington's football team made it to the Super Bowl and the Abington game was rescheduled for a Sunday evening tilt.

Abington may have won the Super Bowl, but the Skippers' football contingent, including Haggerty, Laugelle,

In stunning fashion, the Cohasset Skippers boys hockey team opened up their South Shore League season with their first home game against Mashpee/Upper Cape Tech on Saturday night at the Connell Memorial Rink in Weymouth. Before a full crowd of fans, The Skippers soundly defeated Mashpee 7-1.

The Skippers outshot Mashpee 40 – 6 during the contest.

The Norwell/Cohasset gymnasts just missed out on their goal, but not without a valiant effort. In the team's season-opening meet, Norwell/Cohasset lost, 120.85 to 117.45 against Silver Lake/Pembroke.

"We set a goal for the evening to get a 118.00, (and) we came up a little short, but we did OK for our first meet of the season," co-head coach Ruthann Ardizzzoni said.

A number of changes to Level 9 rules have made it harder for gymnasts to achieve the scores they reached in year's past.

Norwell/Cohasset performed well in the uneven bars, the first event of the night. The top scorers for the team were Emma Basso (7.5), Elizabeth Coletta (7.1), and Christina Tedeschi and Olivia Rober, who each scored a 7.0.

The team put on an equally impressive performance on the vault. Basso finished with an 8.0, followed by Tedeschi (7.85), and senior captain Emily Kuhn (7.80).

Local youth football players fundraising for big trip

Team Mass. players trying to raise $40,000

Team Massachusetts, a football team made up of 35 exceptional eighth graders from across the state, is trying to raise $40,000 for a trip to and accommodations in San Antonio, Texas to compete in the Final Four of the nationwide Football University (FBU) competition.

The tournament began with 64 teams from across the nation and these local boys are on one of only four teams still standing. This remarkable team got this far by defeating New Hampshire 35-0, Connecticut-North 37-6, Connecticut-South 27-0 and Maryland 34-6.

This once-in-a-lifetime experience is from January 2-6. The short period of time to raise the money is because it was not until December 9 that the team won the game that is sending them to Texas.

The boys have been working hard to raise the money. They were at Gillette Stadium on Sunday with canisters asking for donations from the fans. The response was encouraging and heartwarming but they still have a long was to go to reach the goal of $40,000.

PJ Vande Rydt, Massachusetts Regional Director of FBU said, "If the team makes the finals, their game will be as close to a real NFL game as it gets. It will be held in the 65,000-seat Alamo Dome with a full video scoreboard, instant replays and more. It will also be streamed live on the Internet so fans can watch it."

Head Coach Andrew Nashawaty praised the boys and all the volunteers who work with the team. Nashawaty said, "We thank all the volunteers. Without their help, we would not have gotten this far. For this very talented and humble group of boys, this exposure of their tremendous football skills could be an opportunity that opens numerous academic opportunities for them in high school and beyond."

The eighth-grade team includes players from Cohasset (defensive back Owen Gideon-Murphy), Marshfield, Kingston, Halifax, Plymouth, Canton and Weymouth.

Three SciCoh football players, Charlie Pyne, Will Bowen and Will Thomas were on the Seventh Grade team that made it to the semifinal round in Columbus, Ohio.

nasty and nice night in the goal scoring department. I didn't think we would find our goal scoring this early but sophomore Adam Benson exploded in this game with another hat trick. (his second in two games).

"In addition we had big performances from other young guys as well. Sophomore Jeff Powers started us off in the first period with two goals scored off his backhand shot. Most young guys like to rely on the "big gun" slap shot, which can be deadly when it's on target; but one of the toughest shots for a goalie to handle is a backhander from close up and that's where Jeff was most effective tonight."

Skippers' rookie defenseman, freshman Matt Legge scored his first varsity goal with a one timer blast from the point. Junior assistant captain Terence Doonan and Adam Benson set the shot up with great puck possession and passing.

"When the pass was made to Legge, he just ripped it. It was a great first goal for a rookie," remarked the coach. Toward the end of the third period; Terence Doonan, who had been working to set players up all night long finally, got his goal to close out the game.

The Skippers' received another solid performance from veteran goaltender, junior, Brandon Winn who had a two period shutout when senior goaltender Alex Kent went in to play the third period and held Mashpee to one goal.

"We have been improving each game but we still have so much to learn and work on if we're going to make playoffs this year," observed the coach. "Our defense is getting more comfortable and confident in their jobs and we have a good core group with two junior captains in the position, (junior captain Mickey Barry and junior captain Chris Lund), junior Derek Benson and freshman Matt Legge.

"We worked in two new additional defensemen in tonight's game, junior Tommy Powers and sophomore Tucker Ambrose. Both guys have some work to do but both also showed promise in the position," added coach Walsh.

The Skippers faced Rockland on the road Wednesday night, and the Junior Varsity will be in action Monday morning at 11:40 a.m. in the 7th annual JV Hockey Classic at Rockland Rink.

Cohasset will open against Hanover.

score of 7.6. Other top performers on the beam included freshmen Mimi Waters and Olivia Rober, both who achieved a 7.30. On the floor, Basso finished with a 7.8, followed by Tedeschi (7.3) and Coletta (7.1).

This year's Norwell/Cohasset team features captains Emily Kuhn (Norwell) and Kelsey McCunney (Cohasset). The Norwell contingent consists of senior Courtney Smith, sophmores Emma Basso and Eliza Motlin, and freshman Olivia Rober. Cohasset's group includes juniors Christina Tedeschi, Alex Oremus, and Micaela Durkin, freshmen Julia Richardson, Carly Oremus, and Mimi Waters, and eighth graders Elizabeth Coletta and Madison Sheldon.

The team returns to action Friday, Jan. 6, at 7 p.m. against Carver/Sacred Heart at Carver Middle School.

(9 pts.) Joe Buckley and Christian Davis (9 pts.), to name some, garnered the advantage Sunday as Haggerty scored a career-high 30 points to lead Cohasset to a 62-53 win.

Haggerty's 30 outpaced Abington quarterback Brandon Cawley's 24 points.

The early-season showdown between South Shore League contenders was decided in the third period, when Cohasset's full-court zone press harassed the visitors into seven turnovers, while fueling a 13-2 run, turning a narrow 36-33 edge into a 49-35 bulge going into the final period. Overall, the Skippers (2-0) took much better care of the ball, committing only four turnovers (unofficially) for the entire game. But Abington (1-1) also had shooting problems, and even Cawley scored most of his points on fast breaks or rebounds.

"That constant Cohasset pressure on the ball is excellent," said Abington coach Chris Beatrice. "They are well-coached and that kind of defense is their M.O., that cycling defensive pressure. Brandon Cawley is our captain and leader, but our other guys really weren't hitting much. We have a good bit of experience, and returned five starters, but you still have to put the ball in the basket. Over these first two games, we have been getting the looks we want – good looks at the basket – but we are just not shooting well."

On the Cohasset bench, Sunday night marked the return to the Cohasset High gym of coach Bo Ruggiero for the first time since last winter's horrific traffic accident that left him with myriad injuries. Ruggiero, with his typical sartorial splendor, looked like he was having the best time of anyone in the building, regardless of the score.

"I think this was a well-deserved win over a well-coached, experienced Abington team," said Ruggiero. "Brandon Cawley is without a doubt one of the best players in the South Shore League, as we saw tonight. But I also have to look to my guy, because my senior co-captain Shane Haggerty – a four-year starter– had a wonderful game. His 30 points will get the headlines, but we shot very well as a team, and had seven different players score.

"Our press and that consistent pressure defense paid off in that third-quarter run," added Ruggiero. "That's our hallmark. But the efficiency of our bench players was also a factor tonight. And the crowd was charged up, the band helps create an exciting atmosphere, and this was just a great way to open our home season."

Cawley scored 16 of his points in the first half, as Abington stayed within three at 29-26. But Cawley was held to two field goals – both offensive rebounds – and four free throws in the second half. Green Wave senior leaper Joe Buckley and junior guard Ryan Mariano took up some of the slack, but without Cawley gashing Cohasset on the fast break as he had in the first half, Abington's offense sputtered.

"I think they obviously made a good halftime adjustment on how they were covering Brandon," said Beatrice. "It wouldn't have been such a problem if our other guys were hitting."

"We kept changing defenders on Cawley," Ruggiero noted. "But I also think some key performances were the way our Joe Buckley did a good job boxing out (6-foot-6 Green Wave center) Matt Diver, and the way (junior) Henry Brown and (sophomore) Patrick Federle rebounded very well."

"We graduated two league all-stars and our sixth man from last year's team, and have only two seniors – captains Shane Haggerty and Christian Davis," Ruggiero pointed out. "But we have a good core of experienced players, and we don't talk about rebuilding – just reloading. Kids like Federle and Brown, and (6-foot-3 sophomore) Jack Chamberlain are getting their baptism by fire in these early games, and we need them to develop quickly for us to be successful down the road."

Cawley had 8 of Abington's 12 points in the first period, while Cohasset eased out to a 19-12 advantage thanks to a balanced attack that included 6 points from junior guard Laugelle and 5 from Shane Haggerty.

Cawley netted another 8 points in the second period, and after a bucket from junior forward Alex Nagle, the Green Wave had cut the gap to 21-20. But Laugelle, Shane Haggerty and junior Chris Haggerty all scored to bring the home team into the break with a 29-26 margin.

Mariano began heating up from downtown in the third period, and his 3-pointer kept the Green Wave close, at 36-33, halfway through the third period. But that blizzard of Green Wave turnovers put the game out of reach, with Shane Haggerty scoring 7 points in that 13-2 run.

Abington made a brief fourth-period run, with a pair of acrobatic drives from Joe Buckley and a Cawley rebound, closing to within 53-45 with 4:30 remaining. A Diver free throw pulled it within 55-48 with 1:45 left. But Davis scored some key hoops in the final minutes to help Cohasset salt it away.

Cohasset's boardmen were led by Joe Buckley's 8 rebounds.

"I think they'll be able to play," he said. "They play hard, have good leadership from our two upperclassmen. Annie (Robinson) and Kristen (Alexander) do their part. They're all listening and want to do a good job."

LeVangie feels that his younger players will thrive.

"The Rosano twins (freshmen Emily Rosano and Meg Rosano) are very good," he said. "Alexa Bleicken is a very good forward. Lily McCarthy plays guard and forward."

For LeVangie, the goal for the team is constant improvement.

"I'm looking to get better and better," he said. "I hope two-thirds into the season the freshmen play like juniors and the juniors play like seniors.

"We've had some tough scrimmages. We played Abington the other night (a season-opening loss). We scrimmaged Arlington Catholic. Those helped us improve."

finishing very strong, and with the addition of a crew of very talented freshman the current season is promising.

"Our senior captains Taylor Graf (Hanover) and Nicole Farren (Cohasset) have been instrumental in keeping this co-op team engaged and making each player feel included," Coach Deb Beal said. "It is difficult to run a program with students attending two different schools much of the credit goes to our senior class, they have done a wonderful job. The girls have been working very hard preparing for we anticipate to be an exciting season.

"Our first three games are under our belt and we've been able to adapt and modify our offensive and defensive lines maximizing the talent on the ice."

Changes have included positional moves to help younger players blend and to strengthen both offense and defense.

"We've taken our senior captains Graf and Farren and moved them to defense where they join Jenna O'Brien (Cohasset) and Mackenzie Dunphy (Hanover). These four have been playing hockey since they were young and they are tough and skate well. They work well together and each game get more comfortable."

Lines have been switched for maximum impact.

"Offensively we have a few very solid lines, one with Valerie Farren (Cohasset), Samantha Taylor (Hanover) and Ari Saldano (Hanover) skating together and another with Whitney Joy (Hanover), Julia Dares (Hanover) and Molly Cameron (Hanover)," Beal said. "Balancing those lines, we have Emily Siroonian (Hanover), Kayla Garity (Hanover), Erin Smith (Hanover), Maddie Giovanucci (Hanover).

Going a little deeper into the bench we have seniors Meaghan Kearney (Cohasset), Lauren McLellan (Cohasset) and Kylie Coffman (Cohasset), sophomores Taylor Frederick (Cohasset) and Meredith Corry (Cohasset), junior Alexandra Russell (Cohasset), freshman Samantha Campedelli (Cohasset), and Olivia Arnold (Cohasset)."

"We have two goalkeepers this season which has been great," she said. "Senior Kelsi Orcutt (Hanover) has been guarding the cage since the program began three years ago and has established herself quite nicely. Freshman Shea Kearney (Cohasset) joins us with a lot of skill and experience. The first three games they have split the time in net."

The next game had a better final result.

"Last Saturday we got out first victory against Quincy/North Quincy," Beal said. "The season is still young and the girls have more then a few games left. What we are seeing is that the kids are starting to skate well with their lines as they are getting used to one another. Scoring in the past has been an issue but already we have scored in each of our games, and the scoring is fairly spread out. We are not relying on just one or two players. Julia Dares, Jenna O'Brien, Nicole Farren, Taylor Graf, Whitney Joy and Ari Saldano have all found the back of the net."

Beal is excited about what's coming.

"This season should be very exciting," she said. "There's a lot of talent here and the kids are so engaged and excited. Looking ahead I feel confident that these kids will push hard and work hard. They've proven over the past three years that they want to be here and they want to get better and that makes coaching so much easier. The program has really taken off and the excitement in the younger grades now is building. I see kids out and about in town who say they can't wait to play high school hockey.

"If you get the opportunity to come out and watch these girls play you will not be disappointed, it's cold in the rink but it's fun. Our home rink is in Randolph this season and schedules can be found on www.schedulestar.com."

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF DEC. 31, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) It's a good time for reunions with those very special people from your past. You could be pleasantly surprised by what comes to light during one of these get-togethers.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The new year gets off to an encouraging start for the Bold Bovine who takes that demanding workplace challenge by the horns and steers it in the right direction.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The clever Gemini will be quick to spot the telltale signs of workplace changes that could open up new opportunities for the right person. (And that's you, isn't it?)

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The Moon Child's post-holiday letdown soon lifts as you begin to get back into your comfortable routine. Someone from your past extends a surprise bid to reconnect.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You've been the ultimate social Lion over the holidays. Now it's time to relax and recharge your energy so you can be at your best when you pounce on that new project.

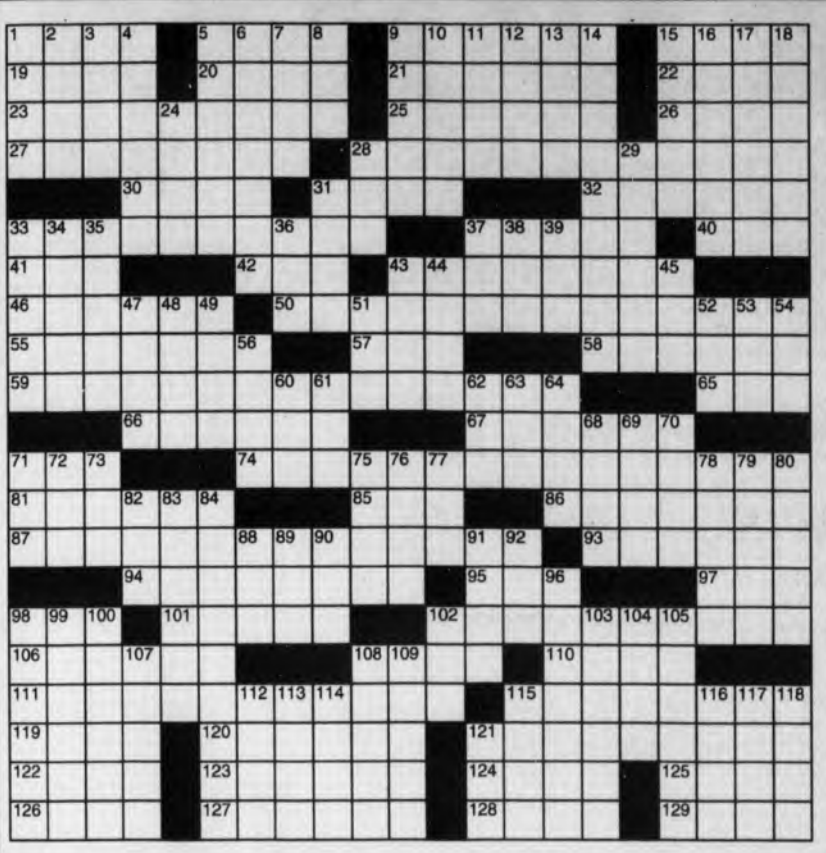
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A relationship could be moving in a direction you might not want to follow. Step back for a better overview of the situation. You might be surprised at what you see.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Emotions rule at the start of the week, affecting your perception about a decision. Best advice: Avoid commitments until that good Libran sense kicks back in.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A longtime friendship could take a romantic turn early in the new year. While this pleases your passionate side, your logical self might want to go slow.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Someone might make a surprising disclosure about a trusted friend or workplace colleague. Stay cool and reserve judgment until you get more facts.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might think you've found what you've been looking for. But appearances can be deceiving. Don't act on your discovery until you know more about it.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You're no doubt anxious for that confusing situation to be cleared up. But don't press for a quick resolution or you might overlook some vital facts.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Now that your holiday distractions are easing, you need to apply yourself to getting those unfinished tasks done so you can begin a new project with a clean slate.

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

GIMME SHELTER

Small in size, Sierra fits right in your lap and loves being there for petting and just purrs contentedly as she brings you to her calm and quiet space. COURTESY PHOTO

Sierra has her wish list ready

PAULA J. FATERSIK

Topping that list would be love, affection, warmth, safety, yummy food, and a few toys, all wrapped up in a gentle home.

As we are winding down last days of 2012, there are many pets with holiday dreams and wishes that they hope will become realities. Today, our feature cat, Sierra, has those dreams dancing in her beautiful little head. It goes without saying, but we will just get it out there right away.

Sierra is a 10. Maybe a 10+ as you can see by her stunning eyes and coat. And yes, she has her list! Topping that list would be love, affection, warmth, safety, yummy food, and a few toys, all wrapped up in a gentle home.

Having such a wonderful cat like Sierra end up in a shelter makes us feel sad, and we all know that giving up a loving pet is heartbreaking all around. Sometimes situations that are beyond other's control bring us the most beautiful and adoptable cats and kittens. This is certainly one of those times. Sierra was loved and her personality tells us that. This fabulous girl is stunning, gentle, sweet, affectionate, really the perfect little package.

Spend a little time getting close to her and you will feel the calm and peace envelop you.

One thing that may surprise you is that Sierra is not only a 10 when it comes to looks and good nature but she is 10 years young! It was amazing for to us to hear, but like many lucky females, the years have been more than kind to her! She is just a gorgeous and precious little lady. Small in size, she fits right in your lap and loves being there for petting and just purrs contentedly as she brings you to her calm and quiet space. And she will sit there for quite a while so you will want to be prepared for some wonderful relaxation and meditation time with her!

Sierra's tortoiseshell fur is medium length and just a soft as silk. Her glittering green eyes speak to you as she watches, waiting and hoping for the right person to fall in love with her and make her wish for a forever home come true. Since she has been in a room with strangers, Sierra has been pretty reserved and it will be such a wonderful thing for her to have her own home to explore and enjoy, windows to sun in and comfy places to curl up in and feel safe. It would probably be best for her to be an only pet now as she has shown that dogs can be upsetting to her and make her feel uncomfortable. While Sierra has lived with another cat before, she seems content being the main attraction. A safe and loving home would be the perfect fit for this beautiful girl.

With the holidays arriving so quickly now, the perfect time to see Sierra would be this coming Saturday, Dec. 22, during Open Hours from 2-3 p.m. at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue at 50 L St. in Hull or by appointment. Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on Sierra.

The shelter will be closed during regular Open Hours on Monday, Dec. 24th and 31st but we will have our regular Open Hours on Saturday, Dec. 29. You can always call our office or leave a message at 781-925-3121 for additional information on our available cats and kittens.

All of us at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue are very thankful to our adoptive and foster families who have opened their homes to so many homeless kittens and cats this year. As we say goodbye to them, and place them in your loving homes, it is a testament to the dedication and caring spirit of so many animal lovers who provide a fresh start and happy ending for our feline friends. Like a team, we are working with those in need of shelter and care, and your support and decision to adopt from Hull Seaside has made the difference for so many deserving kittens and cats. They need us, and we need you.

It has been a pleasure to see you during the year at our events, receive photos and updates on your new family members, and of course, we appreciate your continued support with donations and supplies. It is the best gift we can receive.

Over the past year, there have been so many people and groups we have recognized who have held donation drives for the shelter and your generosity and support has helped us in so many ways. Thank you all for being there for us and helping us to make the lives of our cats that much better. If other businesses or groups would like to connect with our non-profit please contact us. Winter is a very tough time of year for abandoned animals, and we will continue to take them in and care for them.

As always, we are grateful for your help and hope that you will continue to support our efforts.

The backbone of the shelter is the tireless group of volunteers who are here every day working to make the shelter a safe and comfortable place for all of the animals who are waiting for their chance to be placed in a forever home.

We are happy and grateful for your commitment and hope that you enjoy your holidays with family and friends as we count all of our blessings and look forward to a prosperous and successful year ahead. Your time and dedication is a wonderful gift, and our sincere thanks goes out to all of you.

Making people happy through her work

Local artist not afraid to change things up

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset artist Tina Watson, who displays and sells her work at Hingham's Artisans in the Square co-op, has been interested in art since she was a child.

"When I was 10, my babysitter introduced me to art. She took me out painting and to some of her art classes," Watson recalls. "She was my mentor."

In later years, Duxbury painter Jane Flavell Collins, who is a courtroom, landscape, and still-life artist, assumed that role naturally, an outcome of the two women's growing friendship.

Watson's primary interest wasn't always fine art, though.

After graduating from the Endicott College art program, Watson took classes at Massachusetts College of Art and Design and at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, with a focus on pottery.

When Watson owned Cohasset Hardware, which was in her family for years, there was a pottery shop upstairs,

Local students learn and give back

By Erin Dale

Local art students have the opportunity to train with a master artiste — and at the same time give back to their community.

Artist Shelli Jones Manuel, a painter, author and musician who runs the Harps, Tea and Me gallery in Cohasset, is providing internships to young artists, teaching them college-level skills and helping them find ways to contribute to society as a whole.

Using the same curriculum she taught as the Master Artist at Large at Oklahoma's Oral Roberts University, Manuel is helping to equip students with skills they will use in art school and beyond.

When Legos meet robots

Team enters state competition

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

If anyone should ever doubt that Cohasset students are a bright and creative bunch, they need to see what these kids can do with robots.

This month, the Cohasset Middle-High School robotics team finished their first-ever First Lego League (LLL) Robotics competition at Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

Cohasset's team, which was divided into two groups of 20 students, started training for their robot "mission" in October. Each group first competed in a regional qualifier on Dec 1, 2012.

According to CHS AP statistics teacher Laura Humphrey, who coached the robo-teams, the kids had to make three presentations at the competition: "an innovative solution to a problem faced by senior citizens, a spot test of their teamwork and core values as well as a technical presentation describing their robot design, programming, strategy and learning process."

The robots also competed against the clock and went head-to-head seven times throughout the day. One of the school's teams, Cohbots and Applesauce, earned the right to go all the way to the state championships by placing in the top 10 of their regional competition.

"The team of 10 students was again challenged to pit their design and programming abilities against the other regional winners," Humprey explained in an email. "Each robot had to be built from scratch and have it attempt to complete multiple challenges. Each challenge was valued at a various amount of points

A group of Cohasset Police Officers attended the graduation of Police Officer Christopher Dias and Police Officer Anthony Truglia on December 18th at Great Hall located in Faneuil Hall/Quincy Market.

The graduation was the culmination of 26 weeks of police training at the MBTA Transit Police Academy campus located in Quincy. The MBTA Transit Police Academy serves as one of the regional training grounds for police officers from the South Shore and Metro Boston area. The academy staff is comprised of not only transit police officers but police chiefs, police supervisors, and police officers from surrounding communities.

The new officers' training included advanced first aid, CPR, firearms, patrol procedures, active shooter, emergency driving, domestic violence, courtroom testimony, crime scene, traffic enforcement, criminal law, criminal procedure, and many other areas. Additionally, the officers underwent physical training everyday, which included aerobics, running, weight training, and swimming.

Both officers have already started to work the street and are assigned to field training officers. Depending on the new officers level of experience, field training can last up to eight weeks. Deputy Police Chief William Quigley said "It's always exciting when we get new officers."

Two-vehicle accident by Gulf Station on 3A

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police responded to a two-vehicle accident by Leo's Gulf Station at 12:53 p.m. on Thursday (Dec. 20). Police said a 1999 GMC Sierra pickup truck, operated by a 56-year-old Scituate man, exited the gas station onto Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) to head south, when the operator of the vehicle in the northbound, right lane signaled for him to enter. But when the pickup attempted to cross over the inside lane, it was struck on the side by a northbound 2005 Ford Taurus, operated by a 32-year-old Scituate woman.

Both vehicles were towed and both drivers were transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. The Scituate man operating the pickup was cited for failure to yield, police said.

Protective custody

Police received three 9-1-1 calls on Saturday (Dec. 23) in the afternoon about a highly intoxicated woman who was going into various stores, stumbling around. Police caught up with the 47-year-old Brighton woman, who also has a Scituate address, on South Main Street in the village and took her into protective custody. She was held at the station for about 12 hours until she sobered up, police said.

Larceny

A 32-year-old Beechwood Street woman called police at around 6p.m. on Friday (Dec. 21) when she realized the necklace she had seen that morning in the upstairs bathroom before leaving for work was missing.

The woman told police that she suspects either her daughter's nanny or workers from a maid service may have taken the necklace. Police said detectives are following up and conducting interviews.

Man with shovel

Police responded to a call from Joy Place last week (Monday, Dec. 17) about a black pickup in the neighborhood with a man who exited the truck and headed toward the cemetery carrying a shovel. The caller described him as wearing camouflage pants, black sweatshirt and black hat. The caller provided a license plate that came back to a pickup truck in Abington that was a different color. It does not appear that was the same truck, police said.

Teen dispute

Shaw's notified police last week (Monday, Dec. 17) after two teens approached a teenage worker and made veiled threats at the store. All the subjects were from Scituate. The manager asked a police officer to stand by when the teen finished work to leave for the day. There have been no further incidents, police said.

Intervention

Police went to the home where a 9-1-1 call had been abandoned at around 10:11 p.m. on Monday (Dec. 17). Police said a member of the family had called 9-1-1 after an intervention was tried on a family member who then took off. The Cohasset K-9 was unavailable so Scituate was called and located the individual who is now seeking treatment for addiction, police said.

Wrecker called

Police called for a tow truck at around 3:14 p.m. on Wednesday (Dec. 19) for a 2005 GMC Yukon that was disabled in the roadway near Cohasset Plaza. The operator was from Duxbury, police said.

Kate Stringer, 17, a senior at Hingham High School, shows off her artwork during her internship at the Harps, Tea & Me Gallery in Cohasset.

ART WITH HEART

Hingham High School – assisted her with the type of local artwork she usually does, taking photographs and turning them into stunning, lifelike portraits. The girls attended local horse shows and took photos of the equestrians with their horses, then turned the photos into works of art; they did the same thing at Cohasset's Holiday Stroll earlier this month, taking photos of children with Santa Claus.

One of the students, Maddy Valero, said that her internship has been an invaluable experience.

"I feel that it has thoroughly prepared me for art school and that I now have a strong foundation to build up from," said Valero. "I have learned many valuable skills, from drawing to how small businesses are ran."

The Mariner caught up with intern Kate Stringer, 17, in Manuel's art studio (located in Cohasset's James Brook Crossing center) one afternoon after school while she was working on some sketches. Stringer, who has been working on art at the studio since August, said that Valero is the one who told her about the internship.

"She recommended it," said Stringer, who has been working on both horse and Santa portraits.

Stringer will complete her internship in May, just in time for graduation. She plans on applying to several art colleges, including the Rhode Island School of Design (RISD) and Mass. College of Art.

"It's been really great," Stringer said of her time working with Manuel. "She taught me a lot of tutorial classes, how she goes through the process of putting the photographs together. It's been a good experience learning to draw people and animate."

Stringer said she and the interns also take some of the photos that are later turned into portraits. So far, the students have tackled portrait projects from several local events, including the Marshfield Fair, Briggs horse show in Hanover, Cohasset's Holiday Stroll, even pictures of kids riding carousel horses in Hull.

Manuel explained that what she teaches her students goes beyond the basics of drawing lines and grids; she said that at the high school level, most artists only learn how to draw grid work, "but that's only surface rendering." With Manuel, students learn how to realistically render the muscles under the face and the complexity of the eye.

"We do a lot of work on the anatomy of the face," the teacher explained.

Manuel called Stringer a talented, hard-worker with a great career ahead of her. She enjoys helping students like Stringer prepare for art school and, eventually, a career in the arts.

"I encourage people to be good in both academics and arts," Manuel said. "My heart was grieved when I met some young students in the Midwest who had no art training... so I decided to start an internship."

Another thing Manuel's students learn — how to be art entrepreneurs, creating and selling realistic, commercial artwork.

On the local level, Manuel's interns will soon create a mural at the Pizza Box in Hull.

The art teacher shows her student how to sketch a lifelike image working off of a digital composite photograph.

Shelli Jones Manuel instructs art intern Kate Stringer on how to best capture the image on the computer screen in sketch form. PHOTOS/ERIN DALE Local artist Shelli Jones Manuel and her art intern, Kate Stringer, put the finishing touches on a sketch they've been working on together.

The mural will be a composite piece featuring individual cubes that each will tell the story of a South Shore town. Each 24 by 24 inch square will be available for purchase, or someone can purchase the piece as a whole, said Manuel.

Manuel said that this exercise will prep her students for a career in mural painting: "They can make a lot of money."

In addition to cultivating entrepreneurial skills, students are also becoming young humanitarians. Manuel plans to take her interns on a mission trip to Peru to paint a government hospital wall. In the past, she has taken students to Jamaica, where they created a mural inside an orphanage that children reportedly fought over sleeping next to. Manuel said the local papers called it "The Wall of Hope."

The art teacher said that while she has "no idea" what she and her students will paint in Peruo, it will probably be "something colorful."

Another project Manuel is getting ready to unveil is a composite drawing featuring her fellow business owners in James Brook Crossing, including the owners of the Windsor Tea Shop, Platinum Spike Toy Store, and Cohasset Candy.

While she has only worked with Hingham students so far, Manuel hopes to open the internship up to students from other area schools, including Hull and Cohasset. She said that she recently met with Cohasset Middle-High School principal Carolyn Connolly, who was enthusiastic about the idea.

To learn more about Harps, Tea & Me, visit the gallery in James Brook Crossing (1 Pleasant Street, Suite 7, Cohasset) or call 508-364-6797. Portraits are available for purchase; call for an appointment or email Shelli Jones Manuel at shellijm@aol.com to inquire.

which when added up at the end of two and a half minutes helped them attain their score."

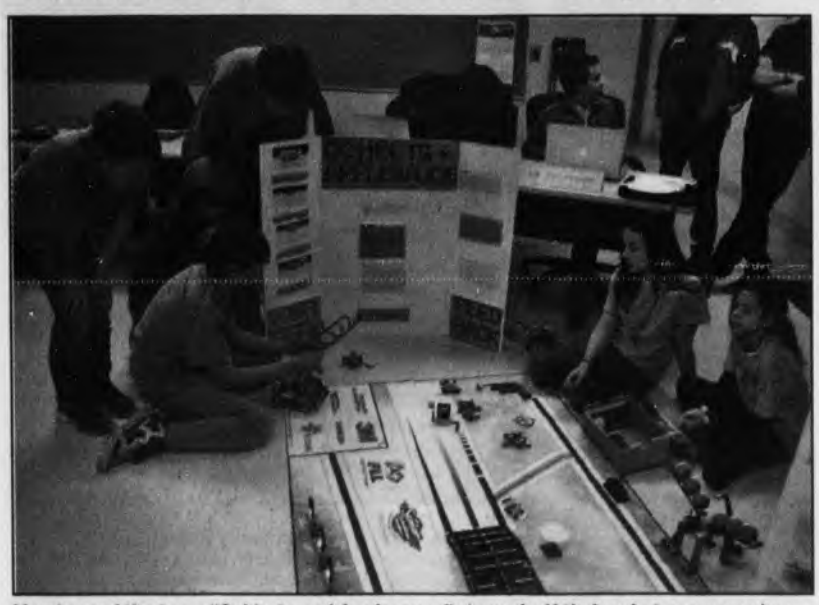
At the state finals, Humphrey said that the team beat its previous high score by over 90 points and the placed 31st overall, out of over 400 teams participating in the competition this year. They were also the competition's number-one scoring rookie team.

Most of the team attended last week's School Committee to show off their cool project; it's safe to say the school board members and crowd were sufficiently "wowed" by the presentation.

Throughout the demonstration, during which the robots the kids built moved all over a game board, Humphrey constantly referred to each kid as a "smart boy" or "smart girl." It was easy to see why.

The kids learned and executed programming skills, design, problem solving and, of course, team work.

Both Cohasset teams "built all the pieces, did all the programming, and built the robot themselves," said Humphrey. They also "came up with strategies to attack the board to get the most points possible" in the robot game.



The kids told proud parents and school board members during last week's presentation that they learned a lot throughout this process.

Thomas Guinee said he learned "what a group is," which he said is "respecting others, and never saying that they did bad."

Bryan Thomas, the team's "primary programmer," said he enjoyed having "a lot of freedom" with the robot building and design.

Nathan Arnold described some problems the kids learned to solve. "The old robot wasn't consistent; there were always human and mechanical errors." While the first robot helped the team earn over 200 points, Arnold explained, "It was more luck than skill."

Hailey Bestick said that her favorite part of the experience was getting to build with Legos, while David Hillman added, "I liked how it combined robotics and Legos."

Nathan said that, all in all, "I liked how everybody got along perfectly well and put their minds together and got it done."

Humphrey also had a favorite part of the competition: "I liked getting to know middle schoolers I didn't know at all. To watch them was absolutely astounding; I had so much fun."

School committee member Helene Lieb said that this is what it's all about, "taking knowledge and applying it." She added that she was happy to see both boys and girls learning about robotics.

The team would also like to acknowledge their mentors Jack Thomae and Jack Stanganelli who have tirelessly supported and encouraged them all season long.

Congratulations on a great a season and a huge thank you goes out to the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) for making this season a reality. We look forward to 2013 to see what the kids can accomplish.

ARTIST

and her for-sale paintings were displayed in the store window. (The store closed a few years ago.) "I built a big gas kiln in my backyard, and my mother was concerned that I would burn down the whole town, so I got out of that and started pursuing other avenues of interest," Watson recalled with a smile.

She wove baskets and crafted stained glass, and then about 20 years ago started painting. That has been her focus ever since.

More recently, she has been exploring encaustic painting, an old art form using heated beeswax to which colored pigments have been added. This liquid/paste is then applied to a prepared wood surface, canvas, or other material. "It's an interesting medium," Watson said. "It's a big job, but worth it."

Watson enjoys painting in her Cohasset studio on South Main Street and also at Artisans at 63 South St. in downtown Hingham when it's her turn to mind the shop.

Making felted scarves during colder weather is another passion.

She learned to craft the vibrantly colorful scarves from felt and yarn in a class she took in the South End.

Watson also does much work on commission. "I love plein air [outdoor] painting," she said. Her favorite scenes to paint in oils and acrylics are landscapes and seascapes. Her latest painting is of World's End. She started painting in watercolor and then branched out.

"I love seeing one of my paintings displayed in someone's home as part of their life," Watson said. "It's such a one on-one experience."

Good feeling

Occasionally a customer will come into Artisans, catch sight of Watson, and exclaim, 'I have a couple of your paintings and I love them!' There's nothing to compare with the good feeling such remarks evoke. I like to think that my paintings have brought a little happiness to their lives," she said.

Watson readily admits to getting bored with routine. "I like to change things up a bit!" she said. "I'm a 'color' person, and I like to try new things."

She is pleased to be part of the Artisans group, first becoming acquainted with Sandi Smith, another co-op member, at one of the Hingham Second Parish Church annual art shows.

Smith organizes the event every year. "Sandi asked me if I thought downtown Hingham would be a good location for the co-op, and I said, yes and that I would like to join!" Watson appreciates the camaraderie the artisans share as well as the warm, inviting atmosphere. "All the other artists are so nice, and I love the monthly First Friday events [featuring a particular artist]," she said. "Hingham Square is a very busy place!" Nothing pleases her more than selling a piece of her own artwork than selling another co-op members' piece. "I'm thrilled for them when that happens," she said.

Watson spends part of every day painting. "I'm possessed!" she quipped. "When I do a good painting, I'm on Cloud Nine!" The Co-op's supportive environment reminds Watson of the women's art group she started 10 years ago at South Shore Art Center in Cohasset.

The group, dubbed "The Tuesday Painters," painted together every Tuesday night. This provided an opportunity to not only offer but to also receive helpful feedback on their work and to bounce ideas off of each other.

"Painting can be isolating, so doing it with a group of friends is inspirational," she said.

Watson also displays her artwork all over her own house. "I'll work on one of them, study it a bit, and then perhaps realize that I need to make some changes."

Watson gets her ideas from a variety of sources — occasionally from a photograph of a place where she was able to remain only long enough to begin the work onsite due to time constraints or weather conditions.

Humorous anecdote

She shared a humorous anecdote about a friend who had commissioned Watson to paint a large triptych — a series of three paintings intended to be displayed together — for one of her clients. "I shipped it to her house out-of-state.

Later it was featured in an interior design magazine, and I remember thinking, 'This is all wrong, the worst composition I've ever done,' Watson said. "And then I realized it had been hung wrong."

She called her friend the next day to tell her the piece hadn't been hung right and she was told that her client didn't know the difference and liked it the way it was. These are the kinds of stories that make her life even more interesting.

Another time, a set director for "Surrogates" saw her painting of a koi fish in the hardware store window and asked to borrow it as part of one of the movie sets. "As it turns out, they needed to keep re-shooting the scene, and this required me to keep shipping the painting back to Hollywood.

It would have been less expensive for them to buy the painting upfront!" Watson quipped. "So you never know what's going to happen next."

At least one thing is certain, though. "I've found that once I start painting, I can't stop," she said.

As if her career as an artist doesn't keep her busy enough, Watson is also an avid gardener who helps run the Cohasset Farmers Market.

EAGLE SCOUT PROJECT

Raising awareness about Strait's Pond

Derek Benson, a Cohasset Boy Scout with Troop # 28, has eagerly been working on his Eagle Scout Project to build two kiosks along the banks of Straits Pond, which borders Hull and Cohasset. With this project, he hopes to raise awareness of the Straits Pond environment and history.

Derek built and installed the kiosks with the assistance of his fellow Scouts and Eagle advisor, Dick Avery. The Straits Pond Watershed Association sponsored Derek's project and gave their initial approval of his written plan. To complete the project, Derek prepared a budget that would cover building materials and legal newspaper notices that announce meetings with the Conservation Committees of Hull and Cohasset.

He needed to raise close to $700, so Derek wrote a letter to the Community Garden Club of Cohasset about his project idea. Because Derek's project dealt with environmental concerns and the health of Straits Pond, the club voted to donate funds they have raised from the recycling of ink cartridges at the Cohasset Transfer Station.

For decades, the 94-acre salt pond was plagued with midges and algae plumes that made it uninhabitable for wildlife and negatively affected the neighborhoods around the pond.

Finally, in 2010, the decaying tidal gates, culvert, and bridge at Four Corners, where Hull, Cohasset and Hingham share borders, were restored and an environmentally sound area was successfully created. Derek's kiosks will add a learning environment for visitors who come to Straits Pond to enjoy the hiking, fishing, kayaking, and bird watching that are all a part of this now healthy habitat.

Derek hopes to have the Eagle Board of Review process completed in January. The board will examine his badges, his community service, and finally this Eagle Service project. Final approval will be his last step to becoming an Eagle Scout.

GIMME SHELTER

Teddy needs a special family

PAULA J. FATERSIK

Some people make resolutions for the New Year. Others make a commitment. Well, Teddy is one special little guy who needs a home with a loving owner or family who can make a special commitment to him.

Teddy came to us a frightened and timid little boy. It has been a period of give and take, earning trust, and being very patient with this cute kitten. He craves love and affection, but needs time and the love and understanding of a special person to bond with so that he can finally live a happy and contented life.

Play with Teddy and he is right there ready to pounce on a wand toy, chase a ping-pong ball, or a laser light. This play and exercise is a great way to become his trusted partner and it is like team building with him.

Being young, Teddy is willing to interact with other cats, but in the shelter, his roommates are older and not terribly interested in becoming his best buddy. In a family, he would probably do well with older children who could take time to develop one to one trust and love with him and be the buddy he needs. Giving him time to adapt and know he is loved and safe will be the start of a fabulous life for Teddy.

When he is lounging on the cat tree, Teddy loves petting and chin and neck rubs. This is when he shows just how much love he has to give. Purring begins and he gets comfy and stretches out and rolls over for more. This is the beginning of his comfort zone as you get to know him.

While he isn't a lap cat at this point, and only wants short periods of being held, it is endearing to see Teddy learning and realizing just how wonderful his life can be. A loving home is essential though.

This handsome little tiger and white mix kitty is 6 months old, short haired, and will be medium sized when he is full-grown. On is right cheek, Teddy has the cutest little brown freckle that you can't miss, and when he is watching you it is a curious, expectant stare.

On is right cheek, Teddy has the cutest little brown freckle that you can't miss, and when he is watching you it is a curious, expectant stare.

Being shy, Teddy will need time to warm up to you, but he is such a fun little guy and with someone who is willing to provide a peaceful and loving environment where he can get close and build a forever relationship, he will have the best chance thrive. His new year, and many more to come, would be just perfect. If you have time and lots of love and patience, someone very special is waiting for you!

This past weekend brought some of the most generous and caring donators and supporters to our door during Saturday's Open Hours. For some it is an annual tradition, and the mountain of supplies, food, bedding and toys for our cats and kittens was bountiful. These caring people choose to buy "presents" for our feline residents rather than each other or themselves. It is such a heartwarming expression of caring and concern for the kittens and cats in our care. We can't thank you enough and are thrilled by your spirit of giving. Every cat and kitten's life is made better.

The bottle and can bins have been full as well, and contained some added gifts and surprises this week as well! Our appreciation goes out to all of you for taking the time to think of us and come by with your donations.

To all of those people who have received our newsletter and sent in donations, many thanks and please know that we are forever grateful for your generous support.

A very Happy New Year to all of our dedicated volunteers and to our family of adopters and foster parents who continue to give of your time and effort in the care of our shelter animals. May 2013 be a wonderful year for all!

Paula J. Fatersik is a board member and volunteer at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Ready...Set...PLAY!

SU D'AMBROSIO

Now that Christmas is over I am going to miss watching my favorite holiday movies with my family. Not only does the movie put us all in the holiday spirit, it puts us all in the same space and provides some quality "together" time. My kids and I have our favorite quotes and scenes memorized. My all-time favorite scene is from the move Santa Clause 2: The Mrs. Clause. It is the scene at the faculty holiday party where all of the teachers are miserable and clearly attending because they "have to" until Scott Calvin (played by Tim Allen) uses his magic to provide Secret Santa gifts for everyone. These are not the typical office party gifts of candy, wine or Christmas kitsch, but toys from everyone's childhood. The party immediately comes to life as the toys remind faculty members of their youth, and they can't wait to open them up and start to play. This is a big hit, everyone is laughing and enjoying themselves and the party is saved!

Su D'Ambrosio is director of programs and curriculum for South Shore Conservatory.

Every Christmas I make sure that there are at least one or two games we'll all enjoy under the tree, so that we can continue spending time together in a fun way. With so much of our lives busy running to this lesson and this meeting, it's wonderful to have a little unstructured time to hang out and just play for pure holiday enjoyment. I look forward to playing with my kids and even with grown-up family members and friends. I am convinced that the adults have more fun with their kids' toys than they do!

Besides bringing families together, toys and games give us a framework for play. While kids use their great imaginations to make play out of anything (pot lids make great cymbals), or even nothing (look at my pretend dinosaur), we adults need a little help. Toys become props for our imagination, and games, with their rules and structure, appeal to our competitive nature. Even electronic toys can be interactive and involve the youngest and oldest members of the family in a virtual sporting event, creative arts activity or mind challenge. The true magic of the holidays happens in the days that follow, as we use our new gifts to play and connect with each other. If we are lucky, we can keep it going throughout the year with regular family game nights or by making sure you always bring a game or two to family gatherings.

My colleague Elaine and I always keep a game of Bananagrams handy for when we need a little relief from the stress of demands and deadlines. In addition to being a fun diversion, we find that taking a few minutes to stop everything and play a game can actually make our time afterward more productive. It's like a coffee break for our minds! We have also encouraged others at SSC to join us and, when they do, the reaction is always the same. It is always a good use of time to have fun and connect with each other. We at South Shore Conservatory hope you will be able to enjoy this magical time with your families and friends and make time for play, and we wish you all the best in the 2013!

Su D'Ambrosio is director of programs and curriculum for South Shore Conservatory. She lives in Plymouth with her two daughters, Maria and Rosa, and dog Bernie whose favorite game is Fetch, Chase and Tug of War!

OUR VIEW

Celebrate, but be safe

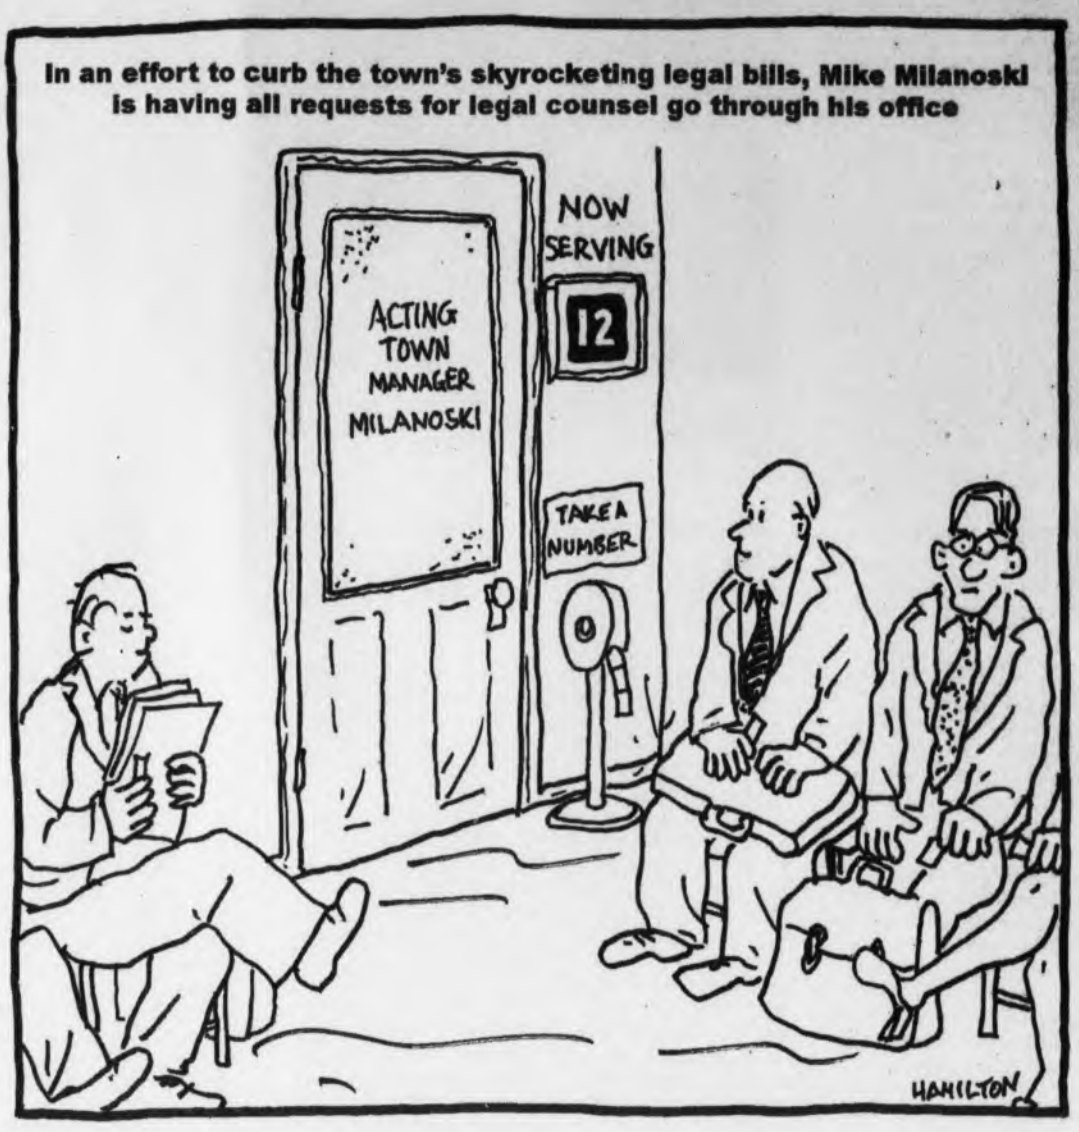
This Monday, Dec. 31, is New Year's Eve, a time to celebrate the year gone by and the year to come.

And those celebrations often involve alcohol, and with that the potential for driving home after having had too much to drink. It's obviously illegal, but it's also dangerous and unnecessary.

According to 2010 statistics cited by the Centers and Disease Control and Prevention at cdc.gov, 10,228 people died in alcohol-impaired driving crashes, accounting for 31 percent of all traffic-related deaths in the United States.

And the problem isn't limited to adults over the legal drinking age of 21; according to a Liberty Mutual insurance survey of almost 2,300 high school juniors and senior cited on the USA Today website (content.usatoday.com) at the end of 2011, one out of 10 teenage drivers admit to having driven drunk on New Year's Eve, making it the worst holiday night for drinking and driving, ahead of July 4.

The story also states that the survey found 94 percent of teen drivers would stop driving under the influence of alcohol or marijuana if asked by a passenger and 87 percent of teen passengers would ask one of their peers to stop driving after drinking. That's good, but no passenger should be put in a position of having to ask — teen or adult.



It has always been wrong, and dangerous, to drive drunk. There have always been warnings, but to use the founding of MADD in 1980 is a jumping-off point, there is even less excuse for anyone approximately age 40 or under to drive drunk, since the whole of their driving experience has carried with it the constant message not to drink and drive.

What makes drunk driving so needless — and sad if someone does end up dying or injured from it — is that there are ways to avoid it (some of these are based on tips from State Farm's learningcenter.statefarm.com website):

- Don't drink at all. That's the easiest one. No sober person has ever driven drunk.
- Pick a designated driver. That's also a pretty easy one, as long as the driver sticks with it. Also, if you pick a designated driver, buy sodas for him or her. (Hingham establishments provide free soft drinks for designated drivers through the Hingham Police Department Designated Driver Program).
- Take someone's keys if they've been drinking. Maybe they'll get mad, but better mad for a while than in jail or dead.
- Call a cab or some other way to get home if no one's in any condition to drive.
- Provide alternate drinks and plenty of food if you're throwing a party, and keep an eye on your guests. Look out for them, including calling a ride for them if they can't do it themselves.

No one knows what 2013 has in store, but let's make sure everyone's around for it. Don't drink and drive.

Happy New Year.

Coordinated Program Review coming

Barbara Cataldo, Superintendent of the Cohasset Public Schools was informed by the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education of an upcoming Coordinated Program Review that will be taking place this school year. As part of this Coordinated Program Review, Department staff will visit the district during the week of Jan. 22-25. Such visits are routinely conducted by the Department to satisfy federal and state requirements for the periodic review of specific education programs and services in schools throughout the Commonwealth. The Department is reviewing several programs during a single visit in order to use Department and school staff's time most efficiently and to encourage strong connections among the programs.

The Department's Coordinated Program Review will address the following programs: Special Education and English Language Education. After reviewing school district procedures for these programs, a Department team will make its onsite visit, during which it will review individual student records, interview administrators, teachers and paraprofessional staff, survey parents and observe instructional spaces. After the onsite visit it will prepare a report for the superintendent and school committee, with detailed findings for each program.

Using a scale of ratings ranging from "Commendable" to "Not Implemented," the report will rate the implementation of each requirement reviewed by the Department. Where requirements are found not implemented or only partially implemented, the district must propose to the Department corrective action to bring those areas into compliance with statutes and regulations. Districts and schools are encouraged to incorporate the corrective action into their district and school improvement plans and professional development plan. The school district will be provided with technical assistance from the Department in developing a corrective action plan. Both the Department's report and the corrective action plan are public information and will be available to the public upon request.

Any member of the public may request to be interviewed by telephone by a member of the Department's visiting team. Those wishing to be interviewed should call the superintendent's office at (781) 383-6111 no later than Jan, 4 to leave their name and phone number, or they may call the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education at (781) 338- 3733. A member of the visiting team will contact each person desiring an interview within two weeks after the completion of the onsite visit. If an individual is not comfortable communicating in English or requires some other accommodation, the Department will make arrangements to communicate appropriately with the individual.

NATURE (HUMAN AND OTHERWISE)

Cohasset's Wheelwright Park

The South Shore is home to many places such as these. Some small, some large – all offer a worthwhile diversion.

KEZIA BACON

Consider your routines. On the roads you travel with some regularity, are there places you've always intended to stop, but never have? Do you pass signs for parks and conservation lands, little dirt parking areas that give no indication as to what might be down the paths leading away from them? The South Shore is home to many places such as these. Some small, some large – all offer a worthwhile diversion.

Years ago I had a part-time job in Cohasset Village. If I happened to be heading north after work, I almost always left town via Main Street, where I would pass, but never stop at, Wheelwright Park. The large wooden sign over the entrance indicated that the site had some significance, but somehow I never got around to exploring it.

I'm making an effort lately to visit conservation areas like these – parcels I pass while riding my bike, or at night, or when I'm heading someplace else. Now I'm going back – on purpose, during the day, when I have time to see what there is to see.

Wheelwright Park in Cohasset is the gateway to a set of interconnected open space areas. The parking lot, at the end of a gravel drive, offers immediate access to the park itself, as well as the Barnes Wildlife Sanctuary. There is also a Boy Scout campground within hiking distance, a skating pond, a picnic area, and the large and diverse parcel known as the Cornelia & Richardson White Woods, which is part of Holly Hill Farm. Some of the trails, originally put in place by the WPA, date back to 1935.

Altogether the parcels comprise more than 200 acres of open space – a little bit of meadow, but mostly pine and oak woods, along with groves of holly. I visited recently with a friend and her dogs, on a sunny Sunday afternoon. Leashes are required in the parking lot, but otherwise, dogs are permitted to run free, as long as they are kept under control. Trooper and Little Foot enjoyed our visit immensely. We encountered a number of other dogs on our route, most off-leash.

First we followed the main trail, a wide cart path that winds its way to the second entrance, at Forest Avenue. Along the way were occasional giant boulders – glacial erratics – large enough to make me stop and think about how they got there. The boulders, which have been in place far longer than any manmade structure, remind me that great sheets of ice once covered the land. It was the receding of these glaciers that carved our present landscape – the hills and valleys, the riverbeds and ponds. The glaciers also dropped the occasional boulder . . . thus in Wheelwright and its environs you'll find such behemoths as Big Tippling Rock, Little Tippling Rock, Split Rock, and the Devil's Chair.

The cart path traverses hilly terrain – not too steep, but enough to get one's heart pumping. There are also assorted, narrower trails that lead off in either direction. After following the main trail all the way to Forest Avenue, we backtracked to the signs that marked the entrance to White Woods. I wished we'd brought a map – there were so many options! Instead we followed our instincts and enjoyed several additional, well-marked trails, some that traversed small streams.

Like most nature parcels, Wheelwright Park is open from dawn to dusk, year-round. There is no charge for admission. Look for the entrance off North Main Street in Cohasset. Dogs and horses are welcome.

Tort reform and the seventh amendment

SEAN AHERNE

There are a lot of misconceptions about tort cases. Medical malpractice and product liability are two of the main stereotypical "frivolous lawsuits" that ignited the movement for tort reform.

Most people know that the first amendment guarantees freedom of speech and the right to free press, the second amendment grants the right to bear arms, and following the recent Lincoln movie we are reminded that the thirteenth amendment grants all men equality before the law. However, the seventh amendment is often overlooked. The seventh amendment guarantees citizens the right to a jury of your peers in cases with monetary damages of $20 or more. This amendment is perhaps the most important legal protections Americans are granted under law. This right is central to the idea of American government.

Beginning with Ronald Reagan in the early 1980s, tort reform has been a major issue on the American political landscape. Tort reform restricts citizens' access to the courts in cases dealing with tort. Tort cases are civil court cases that deal with a harm that has been done to the plaintiff. In the 1990s, the U.S. House of Representatives and U.S. Senate passed a bill to reform tort law. At the time, then Democratic President Bill Clinton vetoed the bill. After the bill was vetoed, advocates for tort reform pursued the issue on the state level. This issue became a cornerstone of George W. Bush's run for governor of Texas in the 1990s. Bush successfully passed tort reform in Texas. Once in the Whitehouse, Bush made tort reform a major issue mentioning his desire for legislation in his State of the Union addresses in 2002, 2005, and 2006.

There are a lot of misconceptions about tort cases. Medical malpractice and product liability are two of the main stereotypical "frivolous lawsuits" that ignited the movement for tort reform. Plaintiffs won just 36.7 percent of medical malpractice cases and 33.5 percent of product liability cases. Keep in mind that these are only the cases that trial lawyers were willing to take to trial. Tort cases are not the certain win falls the American media makes them out to be. For those who believe that "frivolous cases" are on the rise it is important to note that between 1985 and 2003 the number of tort trials terminated in U.S. district courts declined by 79 percent according to the Bureau of Judicial Statistics.

From the 1890s through the 1960s, major progress was made in the protection of workers and individual private citizens. Workers compensation, the Environmental Protection Agency, product regulations, Food and Drug Administration, and Occupational Safety and Health Administration have impacted the lives of every American. The way that many of these agencies were created was through tort cases. Today, mission statements of these agencies are frequently upheld through tort cases. The modern life style with well made products, edible food, and safe drinking water owes a great deal to tort cases. In a country where the Supreme Court has ruled that corporations, through the Citizens United decision, can contribute uncapped amounts of money to the political system, the judicial system gives the average American a fighting chance.

FOR THE RECORD

Far from peace on Earth this year

Peace on Earth probably doesn't seem possible to those in the community, and it's not very likely for the rest of us, either, as we struggle to come to grips with such a senseless tragedy.

GREGORY MATHIS

Peace on Earth.

You've seen that phrase on a lot of "holiday" cards this Christmas season and will likely hear it repeated on any beauty pageants airing on television if you subscribe to those stereotypes.

It's a nice saying and a noble sentiment, but doesn't it feel like we're so far from achieving it?

And that was before the events of Dec. 14 took place in Newtown, Conn.

Peace on Earth probably doesn't seem possible to those in the community, and it's not very likely for the rest of us, either, as we struggle to come to grips with such a senseless tragedy.

We've covered our share of tragedy, although it's safe to say nothing of this magnitude. Not when you're talking about the precious lives of 20 young children being taken so violently.

But tragedy isn't always measured in degrees. A tragedy just needs to affect one person or one family for it to be a tragedy.

Despite the popular notion that all reporters and editors are cold-blooded news hounds with no conscience, I can tell you that having to cover these tragedies has a deep impact on anyone who has to make a phone call to a family member or go to the scene of a horrific accident or crime scene.

We've had several in-house seminars with reporters and editors on covering tragedy over the years, although there's no Golden Rule for handling these types of stories. Each one is unique and offers its own set of circumstances and challenges. One thing is for certain, it is never easy no matter if it's your first story like this or your 100th.

But it is our job, just as it is for the daily newspapers and other major media outlets.

And if we've done our job throughout the years and have truly established deep roots in the community, our coverage will be comprehensive, sensitive and healing.

The Newtown Bee finds itself in the center of a national media storm we know all too well.

The newspaper's office is located about a mile-and-a-quarter from Sandy Hook Elementary School. A report on the Poynter Institute's website describing how the Bee was covering the school shooting tells of the associate editor hearing the call come over the police scanner. A volunteer firefighter, the editor fled from her desk and was one of the first to arrive at the scene. Conflicted, the editor snapped a photo from her car that ended up on the front page of The New York Times and was picked up by many other daily newspapers.

There will be a time though, when The New York Times, Associated Press and all the TV network news folks leave Newtown to chase the next big story. But the Bee will still be a mile-and-a-quarter from Sandy Hook Elementary and editors and reporters will still drive by it every day and continue to interact with members of the staff, students, families and community members long after the "story" gets bumped off the front page of the national papers.

There may not be peace on Earth this holiday season, but may those who senselessly died in Newtown, Conn., rest in peace and may those in the community find some peace.

STM: Woes over warrant

MARTHA GJESTEBY

It was not the responsibility of a secretary or a citizen to make sure there were no errors after town counsel's report.

The items of article six were missing from the warrant. Town counsel had sent a complete legal warrant to the town manger. It was not the responsibility of a secretary or a citizen to make sure there were no errors after town counsel's report.

The town manager is solely responsible for a correct warrant. He was on vacation three weeks before the town meeting, which I learned of by an email.

As to the rest of the warrant per se I argued at an earlier meeting that it should be in October or November. The Mariner reported the same. Also seven days after the vote on the date, we should have opened the warrant for citizens' petitions. The Board of Selectmen and Acting Town Manager were remiss on this.

The warrant wasn't signed by the Board of Selectmen early enough for the printing I guess and if we had not signed it at all for the printing, Town Meeting would have been null and void and thus illegal. The town manager should have been on top of this.

In summary, any problems occurring with the warrant are the responsibility of the town manager alone.

We had a wonderful town meeting (Dec. 10).. Whomever you were supporting, on either side, it was a great debate all evening.

There was a decisive vote against the town manager act change. In a 4-1 vote, I being against, the Board of Selectmen should now take action on a RFP for a town manager.

Acting Town manager is just that and the present one is not qualified. The previous three town managers left for various reasons. The boards they served did not discuss goals enough except out of contract. A public discussion on immediate employment always sets the right tone for a new town manager. The public is aware that a team effort for good town government has started. All our board has to be involved not a shadow government.

As to the governance committee, they will propose additions or subtractions for the actual town manager act in the spring. We have to wait for their studied results.

BOYS HOCKEY

Icemen edged by Rockland

Cohasset rally falls just short

The Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset Skippers boys hockey team came up short on Wednesday night when they dropped an important league game to Rockland 4-3.

"Rockland is always a tough team to play," said Skippers' coach Bob Walsh. "They were in the D3 South finals last year, so there was no doubt we'd have our work cut out for us."

The Rockland Bulldogs scored three goals in the first period and it took a tough between period speech for coach Walsh to get his players back on track.

"We, (the whole team), completely lost focus in the first period. It started from the moment the boys left the locker room to get on the ice," Coach Walsh said. "Coach Johnson and I were standing on the bench commenting that they weren't ready to play as we watched them warming up. It's horrible when you see that happening... it's like watching a train wreck in slow motion and Mike Flaherty, (Rockland's coach), is too good a coach to not take advantage of that when it happens."

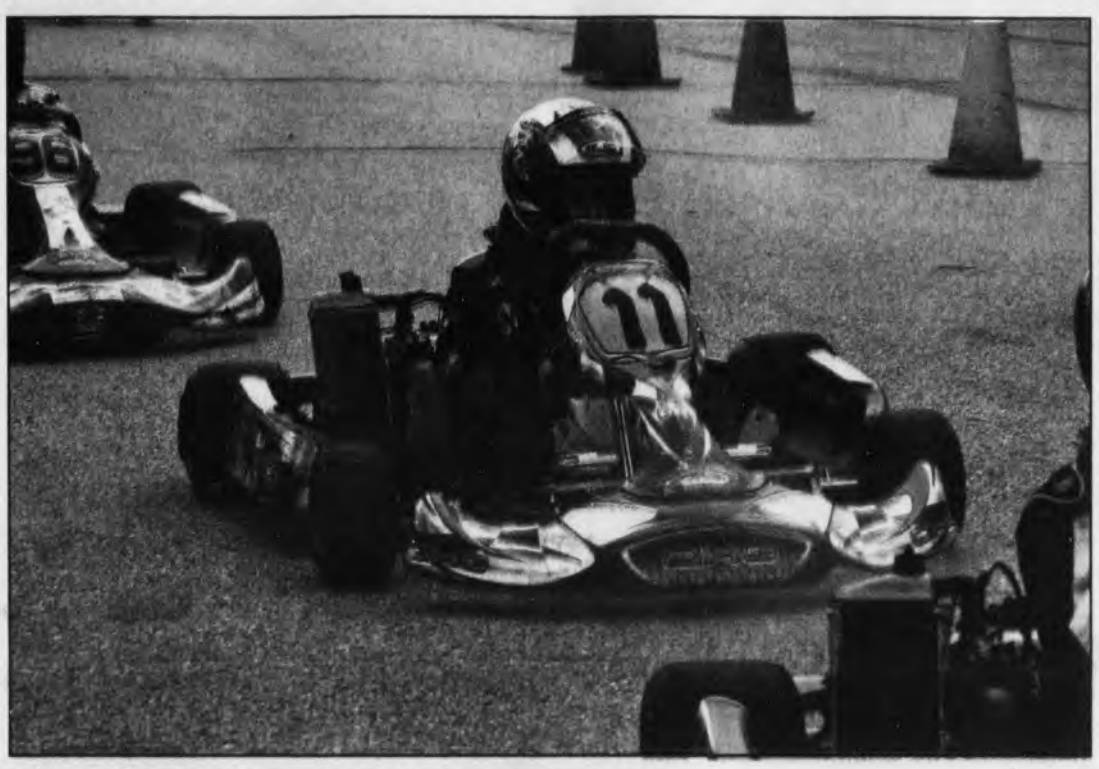
At the start of the second period, the intensity of the Skippers picked up, attacking Rockland goalie Trevor Trudeau with a barrage of quality shots and opportunities when at 5:20 of the period junior assistant captain Terence Doonan posted the first goal for the Skippers assisted by junior captain Chris Lund and sophomore Adam Benson.

A little more than one minute later on the very next shift, sophomore Jeff Powers scored assisted by sophomore Mike Lund and the Skippers were back in the game.

"These were the type of goals we talked about during the break, dirty, nasty, ugly goals. The type of gritty goals that Cohasset was never known for in the past," Walsh remarked.

At the 10:50 mark of the period, freshman defenseman Matt Legge scored his second career varsity goal and tied the game up assisted by Jeff Powers.

"With four minutes left in the period the Skippers were playing hockey like we practiced," responded the coach. "This was the way we're supposed to be playing hockey. This team has a lot of talent and it drives me crazy like fingernails on a chalkboard when I see what I saw in the first period.



"For the last several years, all of our games with Rockland have come down to the end. It's usually a tie game until one team makes a mistake and the other takes advantage of it."

The third period started with Cohasset on a power play.

"Unfortunately, the third period looked like neither team wanted to win the hockey game," remarked the coach. "We lost the intensity we

KART RACING

Kierce shines again

Local driver battles in F1 series

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset youngster Chris Kierce has been building a nice resume as a driver on the local F1 Kart circuit.

He started indoor at F1 Boston, and has since expanded to the outdoor arena.

There was some travel involved, but most of his exploits were at the F1 Outdoor in East Bridgewater.

After several years driving indoor at F1 Braintree, the 13-year-old, with dad, Paul, bought his own F1 race kart and just finished up driving in the spring/summer Junior Rotax series, a competitive series of practices and races similar to a NASCAR circuit season when it comes to standings and number of races for ages 12-15 racers in cars that can hit 70 miles per hour.

In the series, Kierce finished second in the standings out of 28 drivers who notched points, and had it not been for a mishap in the final two races, looked to wrap it up.

"It was a great year for Chris," Paul said. "His season reminded me of (NASCAR driver) Jimmie Johnson and how he had it locked up."

Johnson crashed in the second-to-last race of the year and had to retire in the last one due to mechanical trouble, leaving him third overall.

Kierce had a similar experience.

"Chris was three points ahead going into the last two races," Paul said. "Then he was hit head-on."

Chris explained.

"Toward the end I was getting close to one of the other drivers," he said. "He was in first, I was in first. Going into the pre-final race I was in first. I went to pass a kid, got around him and he bumped me. I was faced sideways and there was nowhere else for the kid to go."

Chris took the hit and had to be towed off the track; then the fun started.

"It was disappointing," he said. "I had to be towed off the track. I didn't know if I could get back on the track. The staff got me back on the track in an hour. The chassis was still bent. It was hard to steer. I came in again and they tried to bend the chassis."

When he was able to get back on the track he came from the back of the pack to second place, which gave him enough points to finish second

SOUTH COASTAL HOCKEY LEAGUE

Semifinal thrillers

By Mark Ducharme

The four semifinal games in the South Coastal Hockey League all came down to the very end.

Harry Mathews of Duxbury scored at the 3:47 mark in overtime as the Classics Division defending champion Red Wings pulled out a 2-1 win over the Black Hawks to return to the finals, where they will face the Bruins.

John Guilderson scored for the Red Wings in the second period after Tony Rota had given the Black Hawks the lead with a goal in the first period.

Peter Fallon of Hanover scored two goals, and John Zimmer of Marshfield assisted on both of them in the Bruins 2-1 win over the top-seeded Maple Leafs. Scituate's Phil Spence and Mike Martin also had assists for the Bruins.

Dave Salvaggio scored the goal assisted by Marty DeCourcey of Rockland and Marshfield's Mike Maher for the Leafs.

The top-seeded Stingers in the Legends Division needed to go to a shoot out to win their game by a 2-1 score over the Sharks. Paul Smyth scored the deciding goal in the shoot out that the Stingers won by a 2-1 margin.

Pembroke's Scott Kelly scored in regulation for the Stingers, and Tim Cruz of Marshfield scored for the Sharks.

The only game that was decided by more than a one-goal difference was won by

COLLEGE BASEBALL IN PLYMOUTH

Hello, Pilgrims

NECBL will field a baseball team in Plymouth in 2013

By David Wolcott
dwolcott@wickedlocal.com

"America's Game played in America's Hometown. What could be better than that?"
NECBL President John DeRosa

PLYMOUTH – It's not the River Eels, but high-level baseball is coming to the town of Plymouth, after all.

The town recently reached an agreement with the New England Collegiate Baseball League for the brand new Plymouth Pilgrims to start play in the summer of 2013 on the lighted Babe Ruth baseball diamond at Forges Field.

"America's Game played in America's Hometown. What could be better than that?," NECBL President John DeRosa said Friday morning. "We are very excited at this opportunity to bring some of the top college baseball players in the country to the town of Plymouth. I think this is going to be a wonderful fit for the community as well as the league."

More information on the Pilgrims will be announced when League Commissioner Sean McGrath and NECBL owner David Dittman will be the guest speakers Jan. 11 at the Plymouth Area Chamber of Commerce's annual meeting. DeRosa said he expected to have information about the management team for the Pilgrims as well as possible player acquisitions at that time.

The wooden bat baseball league expects to play a minimum of 30 home games between June 1 and Aug. 10. The Pilgrims will open an office at 134 Court St. in Plymouth.

The addition of Plymouth, as well as new squads in Saratoga Spring, N.Y., and a yet-to-be announced team in Rhode Island, makes the NECBL a 13-team league. The NECBL has teams in all six states of the region as well as in New York. The closest rivals to Plymouth geographically are the New Bedford Bay Sox and the Newport Gulls.

Plymouth Selectman John Mahoney said the agreement is for one year with an option for another year after that as the town works with the league to find a permanent home for the franchise.

showed in the second period and Rockland came out flat as well. It was almost reminiscent of the Patriots game last week when they came back from a huge deficit only to lose it in the end.

"For about 9 and a half minutes it was the equivalent of watching the ice turn cold,"

It appeared that Bulldogs first liner, Andy Reardon woke up first and beat freshman goaltender Liam McHugh to put Rockland on top for good.

Cohasset is now 2-2 overall with a league record of 1-1.

"Our schedule this year is the toughest it's been in the six seasons I've been here at Cohasset. We wanted this schedule and Rockland was a huge contender last year and could very well be again this year," said Coach Walsh. "I push these guys hard in practice because they need to be pushed. I told them, at the start of tryouts that they're going to practice harder than some teams play because that's what this schedule calls for. These are the games we have to find a way to win. We have to show up for 3 periods of hockey. The second we lose our focus or discipline, bad things happen."

The Skippers host Division 2 challenger, Hanover on Saturday night at 8 p.m. at the Connell Memorial Rink in Weymouth.

Tickets can be purchased at the rink.

overall in the 144-race series that ran over 12 weeks of the summer.

During the series, he had 11 top-5 finishes, a third-place, five second-place finishes and two firsts.

The staff was from CRG America, the company that built the kart.

"He needed about 50 more yards," Paul said. "It was amazing watching him go from last place to second. When he was hit, it was in qualifying. He had to start in last because he didn't finish. Four guys rebuilt the car in an hour. The rear axle had to be replaced. The front end was out. The frame was twisted. He did four or five laps and still couldn't turn. He came back in and they said the frame was twisted. We had five guys standing on it and one twisting it with a crowbar. Watching him come back was incredible, picking off one guy and another and another. It was a good way to end the season."

During the year, Chris and Paul took a road trip to New Hampshire and raced at a kart track there.

Cohasset's Chris Kierce's F1 Kart was damaged during qualifying race on the final day of racing at F1 Outdoor in East Bridgewater. The kart was repaired in time for Kierce to come back and finish second in the series.

"They have a track at N.H. Motor Speedway," Chris said. "It was great."

With the season over, Chris plans on taking a short break from driving and concentrate on another favorite.

"I might do the same series next year," he said. "I'm thinking about doing the New England Series. I think I want to stay outdoor. For the winter I'm just going to play basketball."

BASEBALL

"We're going to see how this goes for a year and then step back to take another look at it," Mahoney said Thursday. "The league generally draws a good crowd to each game, and maybe we can get those people to enjoy some of things Plymouth can offer before and after the games."

In return for use of the field, the NECBL will undertake several projects around the baseball diamond. Included on the list are improvements to the dugout area, the installation of a permanent game scoreboard, and temporary bleachers at the field.

The league estimates that more than 250,000 fans attended games last season.

"There are some franchises that can draw between 1,500 and 2,000 fans per game," DeRosa said. "The teams that are the most successful are the ones where there is a lot of community involvement with the program. We've got a great partner in the town of Plymouth, and we expect that this is going to be a great relationship for everyone involved."

DeRosa said the Pilgrims will immediately become a part of the community. A relationship will be fostered with the local youth baseball leagues, and players are encouraged to stick around after the games to sign autographs and mingle with the fans.

Local host families will be needed for the players, who will come to the league from across the country for the summer.

The NECBL was founded in 1993 and recruits some of the top college players in the country to play baseball in the league. Each team plays a 42-game regular season schedule for the right to move on to the playoffs.

Stephen Strasburg, Andre Ethier and Joe Nathan are among the nearly 100 NECBL alumni who have made their major league baseball dreams come true. Eighty-five players from the league were taken in the 2012 MLB draft, including first round selections Mark Appel and Pat Light.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JAN. 7, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Shutting people out to avoid distractions, even under a deadline, can cause hurt feelings. Instead, return calls and emails, and explain why you need a zone of privacy for now.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Although your keen Bull's eyes usually can discern what's fact from what's faux, that upcoming decision will need really solid data before you can risk a commitment.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) As your confidence grows, you should be able to work toward your goals with more enthusiasm. Open your mind to suggestions. Some of them might even work for you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Reconnecting with someone from your past stirs up that old sense of adventure. But before you do anything else, be sure to get answers to those still-lingering questions.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some people might resent the way you plan to resolve a difficult situation. But your commitment to making tough but fair decisions soon wins you their respect and support.

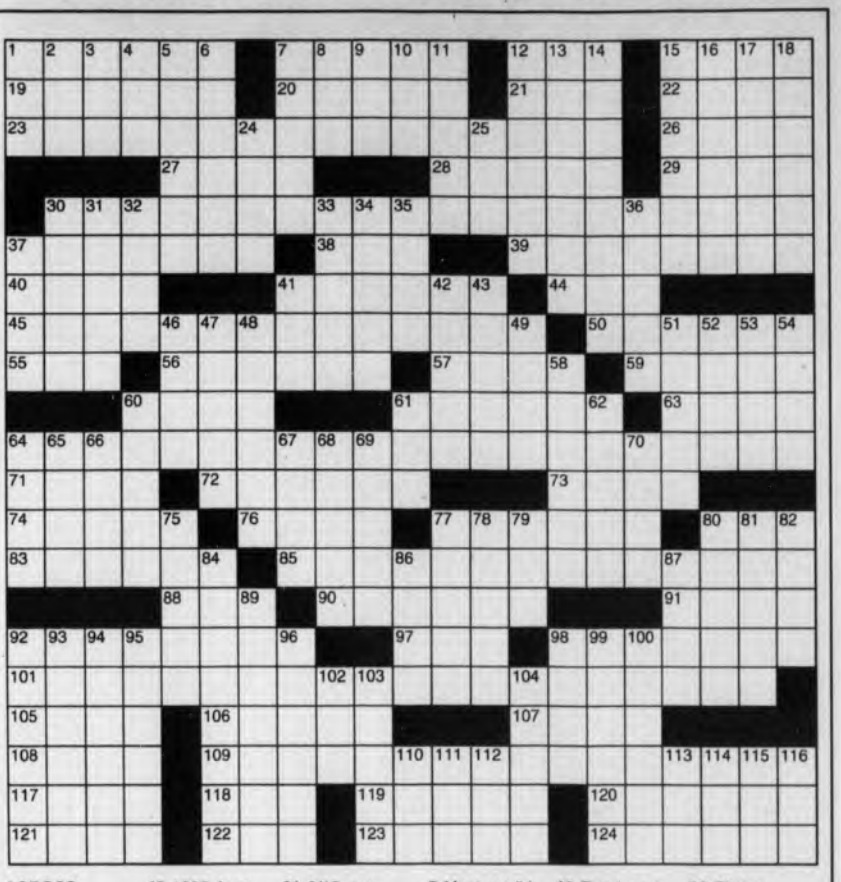
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Mixed signals could be causing that vexing workplace problem. Before you choose to leave the project, ask for a meeting so you can get things out in the open.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your good intentions could backfire if you're not careful with other people's feelings. Try using persuasion, not pressure, to get others to see your side of the situation.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your dedication to finishing the task at hand is laudable. But be careful not to overdo the midnight oil bit. Take time for relaxation with someone very special.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Although your intuition will help you make some tough choices in the first half of the month, you'll need more facts to back up your actions later on.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) All that hard work and research in the workplace finally pays off as you hoped it would. Ignore comments from jealous types who are out to get the Goat riled up.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An unfair decision creates unnecessary problems. But avoid anger and move carefully as you work this out. Expect to get support from an unlikely source.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A fuzzy financial vista persists until midmonth, when things begin to clear up. You'll also gain a better perspective on how to handle those pesky personal problems.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a wonderful way of being there for those who need your help in difficult times.

Tour of 'old' Town Hall

A story that will continue to make news in 2013 is the restoration of the "old" Town Hall. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski has made the restoration a priority for safety reasons.

Voters at the Dec. 10 Special Town Meeting approved spending up to $75,000 for a computer survey to study ways to renovate the historic building.

Brian Joyce, director of Project Management and Planning, recently led photographer Robin Chan on a tour of the building.

Brian Joyce shines a light on the inside of the roof from 1857 with its well built wooden trusses.

Brian Joyce checks out the renovations to the town hall to accommodate the trusses from 1857 during the expansion of the town hall in 1929.

Brian Joyce opens the door to expose the water damage that has rendered a bathroom unusable in the old town hall.

Brian Joyce looks at the windows of the town hall that are no longer aligned because of the expansion in 1929. When it was first built in 1857, the bottom windows lined up with the top windows.

Brian Joyce, director of Project Management and Planning, opens the jail cell during a tour of the original town hall, which dates back to 1857.

Brian Joyce holds exposed wires that were left when the old lines were cut when electrical work was done in the town hall.

Brian Joyce points to a disconnected flue for a furnace that is now allowing hot air from inside the building to escape the town hall. Currently, the drop ceiling is blocking the flow of air.
